"The Road to Happiness," a motion picture designed to promote interest in better highways has just been completed at the Ford Motion Picture Laboratory.

It was produced by the Motion Picture Laboratory in conjunction with the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Highway Educational Board and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and carries their endorsement.

President Coolidge personally appeared in one of the scenes, and has expressed his approval of the picture. He is shown presenting a scholarship certificate to "Bob Preston" the farm boy hero of the story who is winner of a prize essay contest on better roads. The scene was taken on the White House grounds and with the President, others appearing in it include members of the Highway Educational Board of which Roy D. Chapin is chairman.

Principal settings of the film were taken around Fairfax, Va. fifteen miles out of Washington, and the chief characters were portrayed by people residing in that vicinity.

Copies of the film are being sent to branches of the Ford Motor Company in the United States and the picture will be shown generally. Highway Commissioners, County engineers, road officials, schools and all interested, in the promotion of improved highways may obtain use of the film free of charge.

Come Prejudices of Ignorance Yet to Be Overcome

From their earliest history, the railroads of this country have been hampered in their development by the prejudices of the uninformed. It is recorded that in 1828 the school board of Lenoir, Ohio, refused to permit the school to be used for a discussion as to whether railroads and telegraphs were proper.

"You are welcome to proper questions in a public house to debate all things as railroads and telegraphs are impossible is nothing in the West of designed that his intelligence should travel at the frightful speed of five miles an hour, by steam. He would have clearly fore old it through his holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to Hell."

It is further recorded that the citizens of Frederick, Maryland, actually organized a fund of $10,000 to pay a railroad to keep out of their town.

In spite of such foolish religious hysteria, superstition and prejudice, the country now enjoys the finest railroad transportation system on the face of the globe.

But, there are still those who, thru ignorance of railroad operation and railroad problems, are deeply prejudiced; and who would hamper further the development of the railroads.

Intelligent and right-thinking men and women will not permit their transportation system to be sacrificed on the altar of ignorance and prejudice. Get the facts about the railroad situation.

STORY OF THE MAIL SACKS

Many of the nation's public utilities and industries prospered in 1923.

How much better such a report is than one announcing that companies had been unable to pay dividends or bond interest.

Compare the sound conditions of our utilities with conditions in many European countries where government operation and control foist a burden on to the taxpayers annually, while service cannot be compared with that received in this country.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is running an advertisement in newspapers which shows a crew of men loading mail sacks into a great motor truck. These sacks contain quarterly dividend checks for 270,000 stockholders.

Instead of tax bills for operating this property the American public, which is its real owner, shares in the profits. It would take a string of many trucks to haul dividend checks that are mailed out to 2,000,000 stockholders who own most public utilities of this nation. The majority of these stockholders are small investors.

Of the 67,000 stockholders of a typical California electric utility which is similar to others all over the United States, 4,500 are employees, 39,762 have an average investment of $300 each, 12,402 have $500 each, 5,900 have $1,000 each, 1,450 have $2,500 each, 675 have $5,000 each and so on. Of the stockholders 38,000 are men, 27,000 women.

1500 children and 500 estates. It is the small stockholder who is hurt most by the failure of any company to earn a good return, for the small holding usually represents hard earned savings, the income from which means much to the investor.

J. BICE WRITES
Dear Editor:
Some cowardly political enemy of mine is telling that when I went to your office to make my announcement as a candidate for County Treasurer, you asked me which party I wanted to announce in. I want the people to know that this is absolutely false. You treated me courteously and I am asking you to also state that no such question was asked me.
Besides this, I am being criticized by some because of the fact that my announcement appeared in the Chilton County News, a Democratic paper. Any person with reasonably judgement knows that a Democratic paper is not going into a Republican primary. My reason for doing this was simply that I wanted my announcement to reach all over the county, and being financially unable to go over the county to see all the people and knowing there are many Republicans who subscribe to the Chilton County News simply to get all the news of both papers, I bought the service of this paper. It was a paid political advertisement as every one would know. Don't those who are criticizing this act of mine trade with Democrats—buy goods from Democrats? Aren't there just as good Democrats as Republicans? And vice versa. There are good Christian people in both political parties. All the difference there is, is a difference of political opinion on how the government should be run. We are all brethren using our best judgement as to how we can serve our country and its people best.
J. BICE
The statements above, so far as the Chilton County News is concerned are absolutely correct. We pity the sore-headed critics—Editor.

Dear Editor:

As I have not had anything to say or write concerning the high way I am taking this means of having something to say about the way I think it ought to go.

I try to think why some people think the high way ought to go by Marbury in going from Clanton to Prattville. Why not say let it go by Maplesville? No, Those people in that part of the county know it is too much out of the way. They are not going to ask the state to throw away that surplus money.

Now let us see who it is that is trying to keep it from going the direct route from Clanton to Prattville? Is it any one on the direct route? No, the State knows that the right away is free and 100 feet wide. If they want it I have thirty near the road. If it will do any good they can have a forty of it to build the high way on. Land that will make forty bushels of corn per acre, two wells of water on it.

Now I am not going to do what the News said. I am not going to fight for it only in one respect. Anything I can do to get the highway through Clanton by Enterprise to Prattville. I am at hand.

Now about that having to carry water through in a thermos bottle. That fellow was just out of a subject. Chilton county's best drinking water and the best for automobile is on this direct route. Of course mud holes and creeks are not as thick. But of course you can not build a good road out of mudholes and creeks. If you could, you could build a pave street through Cooper, Verbena, and Mt. Creek.

Now about the population. Come down and see how many white children are in school at Enterprise. We have about 230 in this school and no negroes in five miles of there. I do not know how many negroes they have at White City, but more than we have at Enterprise. However, I do know we have a splendid Junior High school at Enterprise and also one at White City. So we people are going to ask the Commissioners to use good judgement and that will suit us.

Now remember the land is free and also the water is free and I will board any one that finds a fellow that could not get a place to spend the night through that part of the county if he is any body at all.

How can a fellow ask the state to spend such large sums of money just to come by my store or, my office. Is it nonsense? We will say so anyhow.

I am sending a copy of this letter to both county papers. Both papers know how I stand. I am at Mitchell Dam and have been for three years. I am not writing this letter to any certain one, but to throughout the county. Our county is free to everybody but Blind Tigers.

As ever, yours for good Roads,
J. W. CAGLE

PENSION FOR HOLDING A JOB

The South American Republic of Argentina has come forward with a new socialistic idea which will make the socialist government of Great Britain and the Soviet government of Russia look cheap. President Alvarez at Buenos Ayres, the capital of Argentina, has officially signed the new bill. Under the bill everybody who has la-board 25 years, no matter what his occupation, may have been, automatically quits work on April 1st, but continues to draw his full pay as though he was performing his usual full days work in most efficient style.

Those who have years yet to serve before they finish out their 25 years, must pay five per cent of their salaries into a pension fund, from which the rewards of the elder worker are paid. Employers must augment the general fund by contributing another five per cent to the fund, that is five per cent of their total pay roll. In the event of the death of a pensioner, his wife or mother is entitled, to the full possession until her death or marriage. Minors and domestics are exempted from payments, but are entitled to count the time of their employment towards later benefits. Salaries are to continue during sickness or other disability.

It is seen that the scheme is an amplification, making more definite its working on the odd Socialist idea of playing old age pensions.

Undoubtedly it is a part of the Socialist program, but what is wrong about it? Well it negates all old ideas

A CONTRACT IN FOREIGN POPULATION

A member of Congress writing to The Manufacturers Record in regard to the report of the Committee on Immigration said: "I believe that it will have extensive support from all parts of the country, except New York and New England, which parts of the country seem to be going about the way that parts of the Roman Empire went in days of old."

New York City with over 76 per cent foreign stock and New England with an average of 60 per cent, rising in the case of Rhode Island to 69 per cent, are so largely dominated by this foreign stock as not to be safe guides in the matter of immigration. If the true American stock in New York and New England could speak for itself and make its voice heard it would tell the nation that there is already too much foreign stock in this country and that the best bill that can be passed restricting immigration is the bill that cuts down immigration to the very minimum.

Europe has been pouring its people into this country. It has been Europeanizing the United States. William T. Stead, of England, once wrote a book on the Americanization of England. If he had lived to the present time he might have written a still more interesting book on the Europeanization of America. Our country has been flooded with this foreign population much of which is so completely alien in thought—and the understanding of what liberty means in contrast with unbridled license—that we are becoming in serious danger in many parts of the country of not only being Europeanized, but of Balkanized, and Italianized, and Russianized, and Polandized, and Bohemianized.

When considering the alleged need for more labor through the incoming of this lower foreign element, it should be remembered that there is probably no State in the Union making greater material and educational progress than North Carolina. So great is it in industrial development that there are over 100 cotton mills in one county. Its agricultural interests are developing as rapidly as its industrial; and in educational lines it is doing equally as well. But North Carolina has only seven-tenths of one per cent of foreign stock as compared with 69 per cent in Rhode Island; and North Carolina is more prosperous than Rhode Island, has a more contented people, and is thoroughly American in spirit in contrast with the Europeanization of Rhode Island and of other New England States through the number and power of their foreign stock.—Manufacturers Record.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Last Thursday night, as announced in the News last week, Dr. W. D. Powell, of the Baptist Foreign Mission Board, delivered an address at the local church.

Although several other attractions were on in the city that night, quite a nice audience assembled to hear this wonderful old hero in the work for the Kingdom, tell of some of his experience and some of his victims along the firing line where he has been actively engaged for 60 years.

Truly it can be said of his address that it was something different. The reminiscences he gathered up here and there along the cluquered pathway he has traveled, were unique and immensely interesting. Much of his life has been spent in foreign lands, and some comedy, as well as many tragic situations were told by him in an inimitable manner.

Around the old brother's head is almost a halo of happiness as, day by day, he nears the pearly gates. His absolute trust in God is wonderful, and the perfect contentment and the potent happiness that emanates from his every expression, is conclusive proof that his trust is not misplaced and that the greatest era of his eventful life is just ahead, when he rounds out his labors here right at the very portals of heaven.

DAUGHERTY HAS TO QUIT

Attorney General Daugherty put up a bold front and declared he would "not resign under fire."

The Senatorial investigating committee moved steadily forward and, day by day, they piled up evidence of his guilt until finally his record for crookedness was shown up to cover almost every branch of the service in which he could have any influence.

Finally his friend, the president saw that he could not afford to carry him any further and preemptorily demanded his immediate resignation.

He resigned, of course, but he displayed the yellow in his system by abusing the president for asking him to get out. He considered himself more important than the national republican party, and was willing to sink them into public contempt by forcing their leader to stand by him to the final finish and then some.

Fall, Denby and Daugherty have each fallen in succession before the evidence that came out showing them to have been consistently stealing from the people who they had sworn to protect.

Such a record to go out before the world from the highest officials of our government is shameful and humiliating beyond expression.

If the United States can not organize and conduct a cleaner and more decent government than we have been living under in the present administration, our glory has departed, our prestige is a colossal joke and we have already turned down hill, to our final ruin.

ALABAMA COMMISSION OF FORESTRY

The Alabama Commission of Forestry estimates that the non-agricultural portions of the cut-over pine lands of Alabama easily may be utilized to produce new timber values at the rate of from two to four dollars per acre each year. This increasing wealth upon lands which would otherwise lie idle and unproductive finally culminate in valuable crops of trees suitable for sawlogs, ties, piling or mine timbers which can readily be sold for cash. One of the most attractive features regarding this use of so-called waste lands is that in the great majority of cases it requires no additional investment on the part of the owner, and involves practically no cost of operation beyond merely keeping fire away from the land in order that the young timber may grow as nature intended.

Miss Mary Kennedy left Tuesday morning for Montgomery to enter Massey Business College. Miss Kennedy is one of the very best teachers in Chilton. When Miss Kennedy completes her course, we predict she will be one of the most efficient and best students that school has turned out for some time.

Mr. J. B. Pentor went to Birmingham last Saturday and returned Sunday afternoon. Mr. Pentor is our highly efficient civil engineer in charge of the proper surveying of our streets in Clanton. He is quite an affable gentleman in every respect.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING AT NEW SALEM-CHILTON COUNTY

The Fifth Sunday meeting of the Chilton County Baptist Association was held with the New Salem Church near Thorsby, Alabama. The meeting was opened at 9:45 a. m.—Devotional conducted by Rev. T. J. Deason. Rev. Buford Lawrence was elected to preside over the body, with Rev. B. F. Dykes acting as secretary. The following program was rendered.

Reports were given by Elders, S. M. Adams, and B. Lawrence on the religious survey of the Chilton County Association. Many helpful thoughts were brought out by which the Association was made to see the importance of renewed effort. Beginning at 10:45 the subject of Stewardship was forcefully and inspiringly discussed by Dr. Hendrick of Howard College. At 11:15 a noble sermon was delivered by Rev. J. L. Whorton on the Seventy-five Million Campaign. Many pledged themselves to support the work who had refused to do so before. The meeting was then adjourned until 1:30, during which time the ladies of the Community served a most delicious dinner which was enjoyed by all.

The meeting was called to order at 1:30—Devotional was conducted by T. J. Maddox. The importance of the minister giving his entire time to pastoral work and what it will take to bring it to pass, discussed by Dr. Hendrick. An inspiring and enlightening discussion, followed on the need of a religious awakening in our Association by Elders, T. J. Deason, W. P. Lowery and S. M. Adams.

The need of the B. Y. P. U. in our Association was spoken of by Mr. Lena Franklin who is an experienced worker. The report of the Western District Convention at Tuscaloosa by Miss Ruth Martin, Messrs Gordon Sorrell and Horace Franklin was given.

This meeting will be long remembered by all who attended and it is believed that it will be of lasting benefit to the Association to support whole heartedly the enlarged program of Southern Baptist to take the world for Christ.

Feverish Again

What is it Now?

Every mother knows the dread that comes when one turns up feverish, listless and without appetite.

Always the same anxiety, the fearful question—is it going to be scarlet fever, diphtheria or some other dangerous, contagious disease?

Every mother knows that a Livo-lax is the first thing required, for the ordinary laxative fails to act on the bowels because it has no real action on the liver.

Livo-lax meets the need by sides cleansing the stomach and bowels, it clears out congested liver and brings quicker relief.

Children love to take Livo-lax because it tastes good and does good. It is made only of pure vegetable ingredients, is not at all drastic and causes no distress.

You can get Livo-lax, 30c, at your favorite drug store.

Writer Declares Cat Teaches Man Repose

I believe that every household should contain a cat, not only for decorative and domestic values, but because the cat in quiescence is both a rebuke and an inspiration to irritability, restlessness and tortured men and women.

In spite of the fact that there are a hundred books published every year in which human beings are told to "relax"—tremendous and continued energy seems to be required in order to keep quiet—very few men, women or children have mastered even the elementary principles of repose.

The bodies of children and the minds of adults keep immobile only by conscious and continuous effort, which is a condition very different from rest; we try just as hard to rest as we try to keep going. I think it was in a famous book called "Power Through Repose" that I read the statement that when the ordinary mortal gets into bed he does not really relax; he tries to hold the bed down. Many in bed will discover that they have their feet clenched.

Now, when the cat decides to take its repose it not only lies down; it pours its body out on the floor like a glass of water. It is restful merely to behold it. The average man looks up from the morning paper and roars at the folly and stupidity of our lawmakers; then he happens to see the family cat, who is either totally uninterested, or, if thoughtful, is thinking only of breakfast. The cat seems to put to the householder every day the Emersonian question—why so hot, little man?—William Lyon Phelps, in Scribner's.

British Wit

That British humor can be as exaggerated as that of the typical American gag is proved by the following from a London weekly. A meeting of the district council was in progress to consider a complaint about the muddy state of the roads in the outlying districts. One of the councillors said: "Gentlemen, I was walking by the road in question the other morning when I saw a man's hat on top of the mud. I touched it with my stick and was astonished to hear a man's voice from beneath. 'My friend,' I said, 'it's a bit thick there, isn't it?' 'It isn't,' said the answer, 'an' I'm on the top of the bus!'"

A Mixed Scene

They sometimes shoot "bits" in the movies. Shots of a big city parade cost nothing, for instance, and you can work them into many a plot. A director who had gone high into the mountains got to talking with a scientist who maintained a small observatory. This expert told him something which caused him to send a telegram: "Hurry up some scenery. I can catch genuine snowstorm." Some hours later a truck arrived and so did the snow. But when they set up the scenery they found it was not well chosen to match a snowstorm. All they had was an Egyptian pyramid, a section of the New York subway and an elaborate bathroom scene.

Italian Clover Is Not Favored

Not Sufficiently Resistant to Cold Weather and Is Susceptible to Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because Italian red clover is not sufficiently resistant to cold weather and is particularly susceptible to disease, Dr. A. J. Pieters and Mr. Edgar Brown of the United States Department of Agriculture, addressing the meeting of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers at Chicago, recommended that no red clover seed of Italian origin be imported and that in certain sections where the winters are severe, no foreign-grown red clover seed be used. Observations and careful tests made in many parts of the country by the department and state experiment stations have provided ample proof that these recommendations are justified.

Wherever Italian red clover seed has been tried, with the exception of the Pacific Northwest, the result has been low yields or total failures in most cases, and when unusually favorable conditions produced a fairly satisfactory first crop there was little second growth. Where winter conditions are not so severe or where the snow covering has afforded protection against the cold the other foreign red clover has done fairly well, and because the supply of home-grown seed is not sufficient it is necessary to use it.

Yields Compared.

Actual tests at a number of stations show how seed from various sources produces in the United States. At Ashland, Wis., red clover from Chile produced a first cutting of 3.77 tons per acre; French seed produced 2.5 tons; Bohemian, 3.2 tons; and home-grown seed from Idaho, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Ohio and Oregon averaged 2.83 tons. Here the heavy snows covering reduced the effect of the severe winter. At Spooner, Wis., where conditions were more severe last year, the Chilean seed produced 1.94 tons; the French, 1.94; Bohemian, 1.97, and United States seed 2.19 tons per acre. At Marshfield, Wis., the yields of all lots were less, Chilean producing 1.6 tons, French 1.5, Bohemian 1.4 and United States 1.6 tons. At East Lansing, Mich., the Michigan seed produced 2.46 tons, other United States seed yielded 2.13; Chilean produced 2.52 tons; French 2.25, and Bohemian 1.94 tons. The clover grown from Michigan seed made a stronger seed growth than any of the others, although the European, with the exception of the Italian, did very well.

At College Park, Md., Chilean seed made 2.82 tons; seed from Ohio produced 2.94 tons; French seed 2.42; Bohemian 2.08; Maryland seed 2.42; and Tennessee 2.22. At Blacksburg, Va., Chilean seed produced 1.57 tons; French 1.95 tons; Bohemian 1.19; and number of lots from different parts of the United States averaged 1.59 tons. At the State college, Pennsylvania, the foreign clovers, except the Italian, out-yielded that grown from American seed, but whether or not this was due to some unusual circumstance has not yet been determined.

Results have shown that in most cases American red clover seed is more satisfactory than foreign-grown seed, but the crop grown here is insufficient to meet the demand. An average annual importation of 10,000,000 pounds is needed to make up the deficiency of red and alkali seed. If all foreign seed were poor the department would not recommend its importation even in the face of the great shortage, but tests have shown that certain strains do well here in certain sections where the weather is not too severe. There is great need to increase the production of clover seed in this country.

Much Seed Imported.

It was brought out before the seed dealers that between July 1, 1923, and January 15, 1924, more than 6,700,000 pounds of red clover seed had been imported, and that nearly 300,000 pounds of it had been brought from Italy. In addition, about 200,000 of the seed shipped from other parts of Europe is thought to have originated in Italy. Considering the known and suspected Italian seed, it seems that about 8 per cent of the imported red clover seed is of the kind which will not produce a satisfactory crop, except, possibly, in the Pacific Northwest. The seed importation act administered by the Department of Agriculture, makes certain requirements as to purity, presence of weed seeds and vitality, but these requirements do not make it possible to bar this seed which is germinal enough and clean enough, but not adapted to our conditions.

The representatives of the department called the attention of the seed dealers to the prevalence of anthracnose disease of red clover, which is sometimes severe from Washington, D. C., to Tennessee and northern Alabama. It affects the second crop of all clovers, foreign and domestic, and even the first crop may be destroyed. There are resistant strains and it is important that they be developed and the seed put on the commercial market. At present most of our northern-grown domestic seed is as liable to this disease as the imported strains with the exception of the Italian, which is the most susceptible.

At present the only protection for the farmer is to insist on information as to the source of the red clover seed offered for sale and in buying only from reliable firms and organizations. If Italian seed is sold as domestic or under some other name much harm may be done, both to the farmers and the seed trade.

Chickens and Eggs Help Improve Home

Poultry Products Favored to Increase Incomes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm women of Charleston, county, S. C., sold 5,441 pounds of poultry and 10,389 dozen eggs during 1923, as compared with 600 pounds of market poultry and 1,009 dozen eggs in 1920. This large increase in three years was accomplished, on the part of extension workers co-operatively directed by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, by constantly emphasizing the value of pure bred poultry and of the value of grading all products. The home demonstration agent rendered all possible assistance in the marketing of these products, but the good results are attributed largely to the fact that at every meeting held, no matter what subject was discussed, poultry was advised as a means of increasing the home income. Out of 138 women enrolled in home demonstration work, 70 improved their flocks by the purchase of standard-bred cockerels or baby chicks.

In addition to selling poultry, 3,387 pounds of butter and fresh vegetables, amounting to $2,388.50, were sold in the county. The money earned by the women in these ways was divided into three portions. One part was laid away for a rainy day, one part was spent in supplying special needs of the children or for food or clothing, and the third part was spent for home improvements. Among these improvements, 23 houses were remodeled by having additions, new floors, or new lighting systems. Eleven women bought gasoline irons, two made wood trays, and four bought kitchen cabinets; 15 planted fruit trees and 138 planted local trees and shrubs to beautify the home grounds.

Alfalfa Hay Tends to Insure Strong Litters

Alfalfa hay fed to sows during the winter months tends to insure healthy litters of pigs. Alfalfa is rich in protein and minerals and furnishes these elements at low cost. There are three ways in which it can be fed: Let the sows eat it from the stack, feed it in a suitable rack, or add about five or ten pounds of chopped alfalfa or alfalfa leaves to 100 pounds of a grain mixture. The leaves can be gathered up from the barn floor where the hay is pitched from the mow.

Some suggested rations suitable for a 250-pound sow are as follows: Alfalfa hay, five or six ears of corn one-fourth pound of tankage; alfalfa hay, two or three pounds of corn; alfalfa hay, three or four pounds of grain, one gallon of skim milk. For young gilts the proportion of tankage to corn or grain may be increased.

Whole Milk Superior for Fattening Young Calves

There is nothing quite equal to whole milk for fattening young calves. This practice provides one of the highest quality. If the calf does not supply enough milk to give the calf all that it will consume, then two nurse cows may be provided. Make sure that the calf is confined in a box stall heavily bedded and darkened. This will prompt him to lie down a greater part of the time, and it is inactivity of the muscles, coupled with lots of milk, that makes veal of the best quality.

Comfortable Pig Gains

A fall pig that weighs 150 pounds along in February that is eating a pound and a half a day out in the open, will just about hold his own in weight. The same pig, in a warm, sheltered place, that is stimulated thereby to eat six pounds of feed, will make about a pound and a half gain per day. In the former case the pound and a half of feed, productively speaking, is lost because no gain is made from it; in the latter case the six pounds produces a pound and a half gain.

Telephone Voice

Tests prove that the human voice can be transmitted by telephone nearly only when the speaker's mouth is close to the transmitter. CHENEY'S A "FIRST AID" TO MOTHERS

Old-Time Cough Remedy Can Always Be Relied on When Cold Winds Blow

Where there are children in the home mother needs a "first aid" ready at hand, because the little ones are so liable to trouble of some kind, especially when the weather is bad and cold winds are blowing. Coughs and colds are common; croup, quinsy and other affections of the throat suddenly hold of one or more of them; when sleeping cough appears they will all be up, and you never can tell when one or the other of these children's troubles is going to strike your family.

Therefore the wisest policy is to be prepared so as to ward off the attack of the very first sign of its coming. Cheney's Expectorant has long been known as mother's "First Aid." It is given in time it checks the trouble and saves many hours of anxious care on mother's part, as well as unnecessary suffering on the part of the little ones.

Away back in grandma's day mothers saved their little ones from many a hard attack by promptly giving them Cheney's Expectorant, and for more than sixty years it has been a blessing to the little folks.

For Doors That Stick

If you would avoid in your home the nuisance of doors that stick in moist weather, paint or varnish the tops and bottoms—places that are usually neglected because they don't show. These hidden edges, if not painted, are vulnerable points where the wood absorbs or loses moisture rapidly. Special danger points are the ends of the outside uprights, where the wood grain is exposed.—Popular Science Monthly.

MAKE DELICIOUS BRAN MUFFINS MORE OFTEN

Muffins Made With One-Third Boiled Potato and Two-Thirds Wheat Flour.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Bran muffins are frequently recommended to persons who suffer from constipation. They may be made with either sweet or sour milk, according to what is on hand. Raisins or nuts may be included in either case. The United States Department of Agriculture gives these directions for making bran muffins in batches of twelve.

Bran Muffins.
1 cupful flour
1 teaspoonful salt
1/2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
2 cupfuls clean bran
1/4 cupful sweetening
1 1/2 to 2 cupfuls sour milk

Sift together the flour, salt and soda and mix with this the bran. Add together the sweetening, melted shortening and part of the milk; then mix with the dry materials. Add the raisins, dusted with flour and enough more sour milk to form a batter of such consistency that it will drop but not pour from the spoon, but be as wet as possible otherwise. Bake in greased muffin pans for about one-half hour.

Bran Muffins With Baking Powder.
1 cupful flour
1 teaspoonful salt
1/2 teaspoonfuls baking powder
2 cupfuls clean bran
1 egg

Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder; blend with this the bran and add to these dry ingredients the mixture of milk, beaten egg, sweetening and shortening. Have a thick but very moist batter, as described in preceding recipe for bran muffins. Bake in greased muffin pans in a moderate oven for about half an hour.

MAKE OLD-FASHIONED CREAM RICE PUDDING

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Wash one tablespoonful of uncooked rice and add one quart milk, one-third cupful of sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful nutmeg or cinnamon and one teaspoonful of salt. Pour the mixture into a good-sized baking dish, and cook in the oven slowly for about two or three hours, stirring it frequently. If allowed to cook slowly, the milk thickens to a creamy consistency and the rice swells to several times its original size. If double the quantity of rice is used, the mixture does not require such long cooking, as the rice in swelling thickens the liquid more rapidly, but the product is not so creamy. Often a half cupful of raisins is added to the pudding and allowed to cook down with the milk.

Demonstration Club Make Horsehide Coat

An excellent coat was recently made of a horsehide by a member of a home demonstration club in Oklahoma, according to a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture. All the members of the club consulted and planned with her when the coat was cut out, so that her work was a valuable demonstration to all the members.

When cutting out the coat she first laid the pattern down on the outside of the skin so as to be able to tell how the hair lay and make it all go in one direction. When the pattern had been marked at the corners with coarse needles she turned the inside up to do the cutting. A sharp razor was used for cutting the skin, as scissors will cut the hair. A five-inch border of skin was used on the bottom. The hair ran differently on this strip and the color varied slightly so that, with a turn-back collar and lapels of the fur, the coat, which she considered worth at least $50, was very attractive. The expense for tanning was $9, and there was a slight expense for satin lining.

Veal, lamb, and goat skins can be made into very useful, attractive, and marketable articles. Veal or cowhide tanned smooth without the hair is made up effectively into coats or sleeveless jumpers with hats to match.

A Simple Cement

A cement for mending a cracked stove is made of wood ashes and salt in equal proportions, reduced to a paste with cold water. Fill in the cracks when the stove is cool. It will soon harden and may then be polished over.

EMERGENCY SOUPS OF BACON AND POTATOES

Every housekeeper is familiar with the sudden and unexpected need for an addition to the menu, either to fill out a meager supply of other foods or to take care of extra persons by making everything go a little farther. A very good way to accomplish this last end is to have an appetizing and filling soup, so that by serving slightly smaller portions of meats and vegetables, another plate may be filled. An acceptable emergency soup of this kind can be made of materials usually on hand, taking only as long to prepare as sliced potatoes require for cooking—about 15 minutes. It will also supply additional meat and vegetables. The recipe has been tested by the United States Department of Agriculture.

To serve six people peel and cut up in small pieces two medium-sized potatoes and start them cooking in one quart of boiling salted water. Meanwhile fry two thin slices of bacon crisp; take them out of the pan, and in the same fat cook slowly two tablespoonfuls of minced onion for five minutes, or until tender. When the potatoes are done, take them out of the water and mash them, use some of the mashed potato to blend with the bacon fat and onion, gradually adding all of it, and finally the water in which the potatoes were cooked. Cut the bacon into very small pieces, add it to the soup. Season with pepper and add a tablespoonful of minced parsley if desired, though this is not absolutely necessary.

Celery, tomato, or small portions of any cooked vegetable that happen to be on hand may be added to the foundation if a mixed vegetable soup is desired, but the bacon and potato soup is appetizing without other flavor.

Waffles With Maple Sirup Are Delicious

Cold cooked rice can be utilized to make very delicious waffles. Of course rice may be freshly cooked for the same purpose. The batter given below is made according to directions furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rice Waffles.

1 cupful flour
1/2 cupful cooked rice
1/2 cupful milk
1/2 cupful sugar
1/2 cupful oil
1/2 cupful salt
1/2 cupful baking powder
1/2 cupful shortening
1/2 cupful sugar
1/2 cupful oil
1/2 cupful salt
1/2 cupful baking powder
1/2 cupful shortening

Cook the rice until soft and while hot mash it to a pulp. When cool add to it the melted shortening, the beaten egg yolks, and three-quarters cupful of milk. Add to this the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder, salt, and sugar. Beat thoroughly and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. If necessary, add more milk to make a batter which will pour easily.

It is not necessary in making waffles to separate the whites and yolks of the eggs.

Easy Way With Eggs

Eggs covered with boiling water and allowed to stand for five minutes are more nourishing and easier digested than eggs placed in boiling water and allowed to boil furiously for three and a half minutes.

Thoroughly Cook an Omelet

To thoroughly cook an omelet keep shaking the pan gently and raise the cooked portions to allow the uncooked mixture to run over the hot pan.

THE KINGDOM RENT ASUNDER

LESSON TEXT.—1 Kings 12:1-32.
GOLDEN TEXT.—"Fierce south before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall."—Prov. 16:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—The Story of a Foolish King.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—Rehoboam's Folly.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—The Division of the Kingdom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Why the Kingdom Was Divided.

The kingdom so gloriously administered in David's time reached its climax in the time of Solomon. Solomon was led astray through the influence of his heathen wives, and the kingdom had begun to wane. God had expressed his indignation toward him and made known the fact that the kingdom was to be rent from him, yet not in his time, but in the time of Rehoboam (1 Kings 11:9-13).

I. The Demand of the People (vv. 1-4).

This was occasioned by the burden of excessive taxation and enforced labor, which was required by Solomon in order to build costly houses and temples for his heathen wives. Owing to the multiplicity of his wives, this became very burdensome. They promised loyalty to him on the condition of lightened burdens.

II. Rehoboam's Foolish Decision (vv. 5-15).

1. Rehoboam Consulted With the Old Men (vv. 5-7). These were men of experience who had been Solomon's advisers. They advised that the people's request be granted.

2. Rehoboam Consulted the Young Men (vv. 8-11). These young men had grown up with him, possibly were his half-brothers, sons of Solomon's many wives. Being thus brought up in the luxury of the harem, they were ignorant of the legal right of the people. Therefore, they advised even that the burdens be increased.

3. Rehoboam Followed the Advice of the Young Men (vv. 12-15). At the appointed time he announced his purpose to the people. He even answered them roughly, asserting his purpose to increase their burdens and sorrows.

III. The Revolt of the Ten Tribes (vv. 16-24).

Upon Rehoboam's announcement of his rash purpose, all Israel cried out, "What portion have we in David? To your tents, O Israel."

1. Rehoboam's Attempt to Collect Tribute (vv. 18, 19). Adoram, his tribute gatherer, was stoned to death. So violent was the opposition on the part of the people that Rehoboam had to flee to Jerusalem to save his life.

2. Jeroboam Made King Over Israel (vv. 20). They seemed to have lost no time in selecting a head so as to be strong in their opposition to Rehoboam.

3. Rehoboam's Attempt to Compel the Ten Tribes to Return to David (vv. 21-24). To effect this, he assembled his army of 180,000 men. Through the prophecy of Shemaiah, which forbade them to go against their brethren they were persuaded to return.

IV. Jeroboam's Scheme to Unify the Ten Tribes (vv. 25-33).

1. He Established Calf Worship (vv. 25-30). His pretext for this worship was his fear lest the religious unity should heal the political separation. His fear was that the people would go back to Jerusalem to worship and therefore would gradually be led to acknowledge allegiance to Rehoboam and his own life would be taken. He was too shrewd a politician to do away with religion. He knew that religion was a powerful factor in man's life. The prevailing religion of the world today is a political one. It is used as a sort of cement to hold together people and political interests.

2. His Scheme of Worship (vv. 31-33).

(1) He built houses and high places (v. 31). This was against the direct command of God. God had directed His people to destroy the high places, to break down the idolatrous centers.

(2) He made priests of the lowest of the people (v. 31). God had set aside the tribe of Levi to fill the office of priesthood. In this again he disobeyed God.

(3) He changed the day of the Feast of the Tabernacle (v. 32). The time of this feast was set by the Lord (Lev. 23:33, 34). Jeroboam argued that the change in the time would be better suited to their northern climate, but God who made the climate ordained the time of the feast. It was his badness, therefore, to obey God.

(4) Jeroboam himself intrudes into the priest's office. This act of presumption on his part was the climax of his godless acts, which all grew out of his wicked heart.

A Good Policy

For this is my maxim. I hold that the party receiving an obligation should ever remember it, the party conferring it should forget it immediately, if one is to act with honesty, the other without meanness.—Demosthenes.

Are Found Together

Propriety of thought, and propriety of action are commonly found together. Obscurity and affectation are the two great faults of style.—Macaulay.

BACK ACHY?

Lame and achy in the morning? Tortured with backache all day long? No wonder you feel worn out and discouraged! But have you given any thought to your kidneys? Weak kidneys cause just such troubles; and you are likely to have headaches, too, with dizziness, stabbing pains and bladder irregularities. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

Mrs. C. J. Brown, Elm St., Tuskegee, Ala., says: "My husband, who is a farmer, came in the small of my back. When I stooped the pains became more intense and I could hardly get up or down. I had dizzy spells and headaches, too. My kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Pills and they drove the trouble away. Backache left me, too."

The Black Swamp
The Black swamp, extending from the Sandusky to the Maumee river, and covering an area of over 120 miles in length and an average of forty in width, was entirely avoided by early settlers in northern Ohio.

By an Indian treaty the United States government acquired a strip of land to make a road through the swamp, but nothing further than the preliminary surveys "being accomplished, the land was later transferred to the state, and the first road was completed in 1827.

In accordance with a state law passed in 1859, a system of public ditches was introduced, which rapidly drained the swamp and transformed it into a fertile agricultural region.—Detroit News.

Travel Fast on Skis

Great speed can be attained by experts on skis. It is possible for such persons to travel at the rate of a mile in a minute and a half. Leaps of seventy-five feet are no longer unusual. One of the greatest leaps ever made was by Reginald Omstead of Chicago in 1916—a distance of 192 feet 9 inches.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister. Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole. 35c and 65c, in jars and tubes.

Beware of Alcohol!

Any man or woman who suffers with kidney trouble should not take medicines that contain alcohol.

There is an herb balm called Hobo Kidney and Bladder Remedy, famous through the Southwest for its healing properties—it is made from an herb plant that grows in parts of East Texas and Louisiana. It contains no alcohol, opiates, or habit-forming drugs, but does carry a powerful purifying property that has been used for years in the treatment of serious organic ailments.

It gives relief when other remedies fail. A treatment of six bottles costs $5.00 and is guaranteed to give satisfaction even in the most serious cases. If your druggist does not have it write Hobo Medicine Company, Beaumont, Texas.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

CLANTON, ALABAMA, APRIL 10, 1924

NUMBER 31

REV. G. A. HORNADY WRITES AN OPEN LETTER TO JUDGE REYNOLDS

Mr. L. H. Reynolds,
Judge of Probate,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of recent date addressed to me at Mt. Creek and forwarded to me at Ver-bena where I am abiding for a short while. To say that I am surprised is but a mild way of expressing what I think of it. You write: "I have just learned that in some of your recent articles, you criticized me severely sending an incomplete list of the named voters of this county to the managers of the March Primary." And you add: "Now I do not suppose you would do me an injustice and I state for your information that I did not send any list at all to the managers of this Primary," as it was not a legal Primary, and the Attorney General held that the Probate Judge did not have to furnish any supplies for this election and if there was any list at your box with my name signed to it, it was a forgery." You say: "I have not read any of your articles." I deem it unfortunate that you have not read all of them, since with full knowledge of their contents you would not have made the mistake of giving me with writing that which is but an emanation from someone's imagination. Then, too, by your failure to read my articles, you have been missing some good reading matter.

You are right about my not wanting to do you an injustice, and so for your comfort, I will say that I did not, in writing of the March primary, mention your name, or refer in any way to the Probate Judge of Chilton county. I did not write anything in reference to poll list. I read the papers, and the information you volunteer about the March election is stale news. I know that the Democratic Ex. Com. was to furnish all the supplies, and the managers, and canvas the voters. I know that you had nothing to do with the election, and that you had supposed to furnish a list of voters. Had it been your duty to furnish a list, and it had shown incompleteness as the poll list, you which the names of many qualified voters are not to be found, I might have written something in reference to it. Somebody had been dreaming dreams when you learned that I had criticized you about something that did not exist. Let me, again, say to you that the "News," as I call it, will continue to write for it, and have no need to set up "a man of straw," like that which I write has my signature thereto and is expressed in plain English. The printed page speaks for itself.

You asked me to write where and when I was registered. I registered at the "Soldiers Home" in 1908 and you will find my name in the book for that year. At least it was there, but two months ago—and that brings to my mind the fact, that in one of my articles which you had read, I wrote that it was a strange thing that, while I had never, since I voted in any other County, and had helped in the management of elections, my name could not be found in any poll list. And I suggested that in the future, those who used the names be required to use indelible ink so that they would not fade

THE TACKY PARTY

Last Friday night the ladies of the Methodist church put over a tacky party, at the residence of Mr. W. A. Reynolds, that was a winner in more ways than one.

For pure old time innocent fun it could not be beat and some of the costumes worn were indeed a scream. Drs. Ezell and Wilkerson, pastors of the Baptist and Methodist churches respectively assisted by Mr. G. Reese Mullins, acted as judges and awarded the various prizes to the winners. They had no easy job, for where so many successes in costuming was scored it was a difficult matter to choose a winner. However, Mr. W. H. Sartor was so distinctively arrayed for the occasion that he was one especially lucky guy, and was awarded a monster stick of candy to keep him quiet.

Other prizes were awarded also, but we failed to get the particulars. Refreshments were served and an all-around good time was enjoyed. The ladies also netted quite a neat sum of money for their church. The News congratulates them on their success for they certainly are a faithful band of workers.

YOU BETCHA

In a small city in Pennsylvania, while parents and teachers were gathered together trying to devise ways to have the school girls dress and act with decency, the girls showed their brazenness by throwing into the room the following rhyme:

"I can show my shoulders,
I can show my knees;
I'm a free born American,
And I show what I please."

out. I registered as the law requires. I have voted as was my right. I have helped to manage elections at Box 2 in beat 5, and the returns have been sent with my name signed to them, either as clerk or manager, and yet you would have it appear as if I was not a legal voter. I have seen on the poll list the names of a number of voters, but their names have been lost.

Mrs. Fowler, the wife of the Commandant at the Home registered and her name did not appear on the poll list. Dr. Fowler wrote to you in reference to the matter and you in your reply stated that by "mistake" it had been left off by the clerk, and would be at once restored." Since then, she is made to appear as a voter. Legally and morally, some one is to be held responsible for such reflections on their integrity.

With no personal feeling toward you, and yet with a sense of wrong treatment to me and to others, I shall use all the means at my command "to straighten out things." You are filling a public office, and need not be surprised that criticism is made when men and women feel that they are unfairly treated. As there are some folks who are in the habit of reading my articles and who are posted as to what I write, I shall take the privilege of furnishing a copy of this letter to the News in order that they may see how wide of the mark you were, when you charged me with writing what was never thought of or much less written.

Yours truly,

G. A. HORNADY.

HANDKERCHIEF SHOWER

Quite an interesting meeting of the Civic Club was held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Hodges.

The business meeting was called early, because of the invitation to the handkerchief shower, extended to the ladies which was given in honor of Mrs. J. J. Pickens, a much loved co-worker of the Club, who is now in Denver.

This affair was thoughtfully planned by the president, Mrs. McDavid, and lovingly responded to by the Club members, who deemed it a privilege to share in this little token of love to their esteemed fellow-member, who not only retains her membership in the Club, but is still loyal to its principles.

The many dainty and lovely handkerchiefs given show how lovingly Mrs. Pickens is held in the hearts of those who make up her Club and how deeply they appreciate that fine spirit of service always manifested by her.

After the shower, delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

GOOD RIDANCE

A show came in here last Sunday, put on a wonderful (?) street parade Monday, gave a performance that night and departed for other pastures sooth Tuesday morning.

We saw the parade and were satisfied. One look was enough and we were glad to learn that they departed Tuesday morning.

CRIMINAL WEEK

Last week Judge Smoot took up the criminal docket for the Spring term and put in a strenuous week.

The jury service seemed to be strictly in favor of law enforcement, and we have never heard so many compliments passed on the service rendered by the criminal court in Chilton county before.

The News extends its congratulations to Judge Smoot and his splendid jurors for their good service last week.

HAS RETURNED

Mr. Joe Gore, who has been absent for several days on a visit to his married daughter, Ruby, who lives in Selma, returned last Sunday evening. He reports a most pleasant visit and is enthusiastic about the good roads they have over in that section.

A RUSSELVILLE ICE PLANT

Our genial townsman and ice plant owner and operator, Mr. J. Q. Wade, has been absent from the city quite a good deal during the past several weeks.

The fruits of his labors abroad are now about ripe, for this week he will complete the building and installing of a nice, modern ice plant at Russellville, Alabama.

This new plant will be ready for operation in a few days and we learn that his son, Mr. Jack Wade, who has had a number of years experience in operating his father's plant here, will be in charge of the new investment.

The News wishes for him and his father a successful and profitable career in this new enterprise.

DEATH LOVES A SHINING MARK

Last Sunday evening, as the peaceful day of rest faded into the shadows of night, the bright and joyous spirit of Miss Emma Thomas plumed its flight to the realms of eternal day.

She had been sick only a few days at the hospital where Dr. Benedict, a noted surgeon from Birmingham had operated on her for appendicitis. It seems that the operation came too late to save the fair sufferer, for after lingering a few days the fatal ending came at 6 o'clock last Sunday evening, when grim death claimed her for his own.

Miss Thomas was one of the favorite maidens of this vicinity. She was educated, refined and affectionate and was loved by all who knew her.

Monday afternoon at 3:30 the funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. W. D. Spigener, who was her sister, and with whom she was staying when the fatal summons came. A large gathering of smitten friends were there and mingled their tears with those sadly bereaved brothers and sisters, who were forced to give up this fondly loved sister.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson, pastor of the Methodist church and Dr. S. J. Ezell, the Baptist pastor, were both there and united in the final services rendered to this fair young christian girl.

She leaves behind her four brothers, Messrs Curry D. and Frank, of Clanton, Ceborn, of Kellerton, Alabama, and Mack, of Colorado, Texas, also four sisters, Mrs. W. D. Spigener, Clanton; Mrs. Anna Goodgame, of South Pittsburg, Tenn; Mrs. Mable Legie, of Sylacauga, and Miss Bessie Thomas who is teaching at Andalusia.

All of these stricken loved ones gathered here to bid her a final adieu except her brother Mack, in Texas, who was too far away to reach here in time, and Mrs. Goodgame, of Pittsburg, who was sick and not physically able to make the trip.

Thus, in the providence of a merciful God, a bright young cherished gem has been plucked from this devoted family, and in our finite understanding we can not realize why this should be. Let us remember that the Ruler of all things does all things for the best and that an infinite wisdom never makes a mistake.

Our sympathy is extended to all of these bereaved hearts.

FLOWER VANDALISM

Do not be a participant in the flower vandalism so prevalent during this beautiful season of the "burnished dove."

Just now while the woods are a scene of ravishing beauty and the many pretty wild flowers are nodding their "perfunctory" loveliness to every passerby—do not be "hoggily woggily" as Spang cartoons it, and destroy these precious thoughts of God's handiwork, for the few fleeting hours of pleasure they will give you.

If you must have some of their adorning loveliness please pluck them conservatively and go at least six yards from the roadside to do so.

Let every person be a vigilant committee guarding Chilton's Springtime loveliness which says to the passer-by, "I am yours as you are mine."

Conservation Committee of Civic Club.

FOX-WOOLEY

On the morning of Thursday, April 3rd, at the Methodist parsonage, Mr. W. W. Fox and Mrs. Mattie Woolley were united in marriage, Dr. C. C. Wilkerson officiating.

The marriage was very quiet and in formal, only a few close relatives of the contracting parties being present. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal couple departed for a short tour, going first to Birmingham and then visiting friends and relatives in several other locations.

Mr. Fox is widely known all over this part of Alabama and is a prominent and valuable citizen of Clanton. He has perhaps, as many persons friends as any man in Central Alabama, and all of them wish for him every happiness in his wedded career.

The bride, Mrs. Mattie Woolley is also widely and pleasantly known in this section. She is a sister of Mrs. W. A. Reynolds, of Clanton, and has been making her home here for some time.

The Chilton County News desires to join with their many other friends in wishing for them every success and happiness that the heart can desire.

GET THE DATE

We have been requested to announce that on May 1, there will be a public naturalization put on in Clanton by the Ku Klux Klan, to which every one is cordially invited.

Quite an entertaining program will be put on including a fire works display and other features.

The papers will carry full announcements later.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to earnestly extend our most grateful thanks to the neighbors and friends who were so graciously kind to us in our recent sad bereavement in the death of our sister, Emma Thomas.

Her BROTHERS AND SISTERS

GOING FINE

The grading and sidewalk construction work being done by the city on east second avenue is progressing splendidly.

If the program planned out by the city council is carried out, before the summer is over Clanton will look like an entirely different place.

These improvements not only add wonderfully to the appearance of the town but will add also to the intrinsic value of the property affected.

We hope every one will cooperate with the authorities in these improvements and that we may have a "city beautiful" by the end of summer.

GOOD GARDENING

Mrs. J. Mell Martin, who is spending the spring and summer on a farm just out of town with her father this season, demonstrated to us Monday some of the many features she is taking advantage of out there.

She brought us a fine contribution of radishes and spring salad that beats anything we have seen this season. She is also raising a batch of early chickens and is fixing to spoil J. Mell by feeding him too high.

We certainly enjoyed her gift and extend to her our most sincere thanks.

MRS. W. T. FRANKLIN DIES

Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock, the spirit of Mrs. Eliza Franklin, beloved wife of Mr. W. T. Franklin, of Beat 15, shook off its tenement of clay and soared away to the realms of eternal happiness.

Mrs. Franklin was the sister of Rev. W. S. Cox and the mother of Mr. Joe Franklin of our town. She was noted, by all who knew her, for her many christian virtues and for her uniform kindness and sympathy for all who suffer or were in need.

Her death leaves a void in the community in which she lived that is irreparable and a large circle of loving friends who will mourn and miss her as the years go by.

The remains were laid to rest at the Shiloh Baptist church on Wednesday morning and were followed to the grave by a large and sorrowing body of friends and relatives.

The Chilton County News begs to extend to these sadly bereaved relatives and friends its most sincere sympathy in this dark hour.

A COLD DIP

Last week, Dr. S. J. Ezell and some other prominent "piscatorial" artists were fishing out at the river trying to catch the rest of the fish they had left out there the day before.

Being a full fledged Baptist the Doctor does not object to water, so when he lost his balance and fell head first, out of the boat he had no room to complain.

However, the wind was pretty high and the day was real cold, so he hastened to a fire and, by the contribution of various and widely diversified garments by the other members of the party, he rigged himself out in a costume that would have been a winner, hands down, at the Tacky party. Those who saw him during the time he was travelling in this striking regalia, say that the exhibition was decidedly worth while.

We are glad to say, however, that he did not seem to suffer any evil effects from this wintry bath and is still on the job life size.

He is not talking about fishing any more right now.

MISSIONARY DAY

Last Sunday the Baptist Sunday School devoted the service to a Missionary program which was witnessed by a large audience.

The following ladies had charge of the various departments and from the splendid work put over by each class it was evident that these promoters had devoted much time and patience to the training of their separate departments.

Mrs. S. J. Ezell, Adult classes, Mrs. Roland Taylor, Juniors, Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Intermediate, Mrs. Grady Broadhead, Primary, Mrs. Grover Harris, Beginners.

Each department made an excellent showing and were warmly commended by those present.

A collection of over $40.00 for missions resulted.

The ladies are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

Mr. Otis Levey, of Kelleyton, was here Monday attending the funeral services of his wife's sister, Miss Emma Thomas.

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for some time before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. Ring, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicine for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicine praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial."—Mrs. J. Ryan, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

DAIRY

SKIM MILK IS GOOD FOR CALF FEEDING

Skim milk is the most satisfactory substitute for whole milk in calf feeding. Feeding directly from the separator saves labor and makes calf milking a comparatively simple matter. Skim milk calves make a vigorous, sturdy growth of body and frame. The butterfat in whole milk supplies energy and not protein and oil meal need not be substituted for it when skim milk is fed. Corn, oats and other grains will supply the energy.

If the calves are taught to eat some legume hay such as clover or alfalfa at an early age, by the time they are three weeks old the skim milk may be gradually substituted for the whole milk at the rate of one to two pounds a day until the change is made.

A safe rule for feeding skim milk is one pound for every eight pounds live weight. This should be increased as the calf grows, up to the point where 15 pounds is fed daily. This amount need not be increased unless there is an abundance of skim milk available, as grain and hay may generally be used to better advantage. It is a good plan to feed skim milk until the calves are six months of age if possible, and in some cases even up to one year.

Freshly skinned skim milk may be fed safely to calves over six weeks old but it must not be decayed.

Irregular amounts of skim milk may cause digestive troubles so it is safest to weigh the milk at each feeding, both as a preventive of over-feeding and to assure a uniform amount at each feeding.

Over-feeding causes more trouble than under-feeding. The belief that skim milk is thin or lacks in food value is responsible for feeding more than is necessary.

A uniform temperature should be maintained for all feedings. Body temperature is the right warmth for skim milk fed to young calves. Calves that are over six months old may have the skim milk cold in warm weather but care should be taken to have the temperature uniform at each feeding.

Separator foam should be removed. In trying to drink foamy milk, calves often suck in large quantities of air which causes them to bloat.

Give Extra Attention to Cows Before Freshening

Every cow should be dry at least six weeks before freshening. It is not uncommon to hear a dairymaid say: "You simply cannot get that cow dry. She milks right up to calving." Persistent production is very desirable in a dairy cow, but such an ailment requires extra attention during the latter part of her lactation. A dairy cow has only two ways to dispose of the feed which she receives, put it on her back or put it in the pail. The real dairy cow does little of the former if she receives the proper kinds of feed.

Succulent, juicy feeds and those rich in protein produce "milk milk." Dry, starchy foods, such as timothy hay, ear corn and corn fodder, are poor milk producers. The only time timothy hay can be called a dairy roughage is when a cow should be dried up. The first step in preparing a cow for her next lactation is to substitute dry roughage for some of the silage and give a grain ration containing less protein. In some cases, silage may have to be withheld entirely and only dry roughage fed.

Milk of Better Quality May Be Easily Produced

A leaflet on clean milk, showing that milk of high quality may be easily produced by following a few simple rules, has been issued by the dairy division of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The leaflet consists of four pages: (1) Clean, healthy cows, (2) sterilization of milk utensils, (3) use of small-top milking pails, and (4) cool milk promptly. Each subject is illustrated, and references are given to bulletins which explain it further. "Keep milk clean, covered, cold," is the concluding advice.

DAIRY NOTES

See that the milking herd gets water twice each day.

It takes longer to feed a scrub cow than it does to milk her.

Sweet clover will grow on alkali and gumbo soils where alfalfa fails.

A well-built, well-lighted, well-ventilated and well-planned barn is necessary for every dairy farm.

Keep the cows out of the cold winds and rains. It takes extra feed to keep cows warm when exposed to bad weather.

In gradually increasing the number of good cows we are following the course of older civilizations where the cow is indispensable.

Heavy feeding or feeding a balanced ration does not assure success, although it will increase somewhat the production of the dairy herd.

Price for Wheat Fixed by Demand

Farmers Planning on Growing Durum Variety Should Consider Conditions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers who are planning on growing durum wheat this year should consider carefully the market conditions. Since the early days of durum wheat production there usually has been an active foreign demand. The development of a domestic market did not keep pace with production. In recent years, however, large mills have been constructed for grinding durum wheat exclusively, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. This industry now uses about half the average annual production. With the decrease in the foreign demand the price for this class of wheat has become more and more dependent upon the domestic market. Because of the overproduction for this market the price of durum wheat has been considerably below that of equal grades of hard red spring wheat, in recent years.

Why Durum Is Favored. Because of the greater resistance of durum wheats to rust and drought, which occur frequently in the northern spring wheat region, durum wheat usually yields and weighs more and grades higher in its class than hard red spring wheat grown under the same conditions. The increasing acreages of durum wheat up to 1922 were largely the result of the superior yields and the higher grades which usually have been obtained. The recent low prices of durum wheat caused a decrease in its acreage in 1923. A further reduction in the acreage of this class of wheat probably is necessary if growers are to receive a profitable return for their 1924 crop.

As the domestic demand is increasing and the foreign demand decreasing, more careful attention should be given to the requirements of the domestic market. Firms engaged in the durum trade find it difficult to obtain pure durum wheat. According to the official inspections supervised by the federal grain inspectors for the three crop years ending August 31, 1919, 1920, and 1921, about 48 per cent of the durum wheat inspected contains over 10 per cent of wheat of other classes and is graded as mixed wheat. Only the remaining 52 per cent is graded as durum. Approximately 30 per cent of all mixed wheat marketed has durum wheat predominating in the mixture. No other one class of wheat forms the basis of so much mixed wheat. The principal class of wheat found mixed with durum is hard red spring. Farmers are urged to obtain and maintain seed stocks of pure durum wheat.

When making a change of seed careful consideration also should be given the choice of varieties. The kubanka is the best-adapted variety for all of the varying conditions in the durum wheat section. It is a high-yielding wheat considerably resistant to rust, of good milling quality and well liked for the manufacture of macaroni. The new nodak variety which recently has been developed in North Dakota as a selection from kubanka, is a distinct pure strain of that variety which is equal or superior to it in yield, rust resistance and macaroni-making qualities. Other durum varieties have been found more productive than kubanka in certain sections. Mindum is the best-yielding durum variety in Minnesota. It is about as resistant to rust as kubanka and makes macaroni of excellent light yellow color. Pellet is the best yielding variety in the higher and drier sections of Montana and Wyoming where rust does not occur. It also gives a good color in macaroni manufacture.

Discontinue Red Variety.

Other high-yielding varieties of durum wheat, however, produce macaroni of a grayish color, which has been found by domestic manufacturers to be unsalable. Principal among these is pentad (D-5), the red durum variety. It is the most rust-resistant variety of durum wheat grown and is a high-yielding wheat in seasons of severe rust. The grain, however, cannot be used profitably by domestic manufacturers of semolina from which macaroni is made. It is sold principally for export and its price is considerably below that of equal grades of amber durum. The growing of red durum should be discontinued. Two varieties of amber durum which also are rust resistant and high yielding are not desired by the trade because of the grayish color of the macaroni which they make. These are the acme and monad (D-1) varieties. Acme is the highest-yielding durum variety in most of South Dakota, and monad the best-yielding variety in North Dakota. In order to meet the requirements of the domestic market, durum wheat growers should obtain purer and better seed and replace the pentad (D-5), acme and monad (D-1) varieties with other rust-resistant varieties as soon as possible. For this purpose the nodak appears the most promising new variety at this time.

Sudan Grass for Hay

If the hay crop shows prospects of being short this year or if for any reason a late planted crop is wanted which will produce a great deal of forage, sudan grass will just about fill the bill. It can be planted any time from corn-planting time until July 15 and will make two crops in a season and about four tons to the acre.

Increase Milk Yield by Using Pure Breds

Result of Dairy Improvement Work in Delaware.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An increase of over 1,800,000 gallons in the annual milk production of New Castle county, Delaware, without increasing the number of dairy cows owned has followed five years' dairy improvement work, in which the county agent, progressive dairy farmers and agricultural organizations cooperated. This county is located near a large city, affording a good market for whole milk, and dairying is an important farm industry.

When extension work in dairying was begun in New Castle county, many farmers were in the habit of buying a medium type of grade cow without a guarantee of health. Following a county meeting of dairymen in 1918, four carloads of pure bred cows from herds under federal supervision for tuberculosis control were brought in and distributed as far as possible at the rate of one to a farm, so that as many farmers as possible might learn for themselves whether or not the investment paid. The boys and girls on the farms became interested, were organized into a club and a pure bred calf secured by each member. New clubs have been organized each year following, and exhibits of club members' stock are a feature of district shows and the state fair.

Club members have produced about one-fifth of the present holdings of pure bred stock in the county. Pure bred bulls and cows have been purchased by many farmers, after the movement was begun, on their own initiative. There are now about 900 pure bred dairy cattle in the county, while in 1915 there were only 380. A carefully worked out ration is fed. Over 4,000 dairy cattle in the county are under federal supervision for tuberculosis control. Four annual consignment sales of surplus stock have been held, the 1923 sales totaling over $7,000.

Bigger Profits Possible From Improved Animals

Kansas dairy farmers could increase their returns $20,000,000 a year by better feeding and better stock, according to reported estimates of J. M. Prandsen, a dairy specialist, at a recent Kansas agricultural convention. This estimate is considered typical of conditions throughout the country by live stock and dairy experts of the United States Department of Agriculture, which is prepared to assist state organizations and individuals in improving their methods in breeding and feeding. The use of pure bred sires, particularly in a practical, economical, and rapid means of improving the quality of domestic animals. According to department records, more than 12,700 live stock owners have placed their herds and flocks on a strictly pure bred sire basis, and reports from these farmers show that pure bred live stock has about 40 per cent utility value over common stock.

As a means of encouraging better feeding methods, the department has developed a simple feeding problem sheet, which may be procured and filled out by any live stock owner. A specialist of a state agricultural college, or the department, then makes an analysis of each problem and points out the means for solving it.

Kohl-Rabi One of Most Rapid Growing Plants

Kohl-rabi, though little known as a garden crop, is one of the most quickly grown vegetables. The plant, belonging to the cabbage tribe, thrives well in any soil and is at its best under cool, moist conditions. Part of the plant used is the enlarged stem which forms just above the ground. This, when cooked, turns into a taste similar to cabbage, though somewhat milder in flavor. In fact, the plant is often called the lazy man's cauliflower. The crop should be sown when bulbs are not more than two inches in diameter; that is, before they become fibrous and woody. Succession plantings made from May until July will furnish young, tender bulbs for use during the entire summer. The late crop may be stored for winter use.

FARM NOTES

Better seed, bigger crops, larger profits, greater satisfaction in farming.

Experience? Yes, but keep an ear cocked for tips from the county agent.

High analysis fertilizers mean more pounds of plant food per dollar of cost.

A bolt in time may save nine hours. Repair the farm machinery while yet there is time.

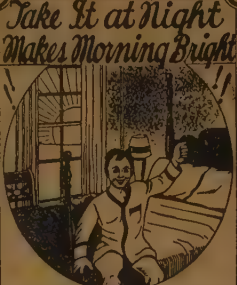

How to save more money on the farm in 1924: Use more home-grown products for food and feed.

Co-operative thinking among farmers is as important as co-operative marketing of farm products.

There are many who think that farm life is just one picnic pleasure after another, but they are not farmers.

Dried blood is a good nitrogen supply and works more slowly than nitrate of soda. It may be dug in when seed is planted to good advantage.

Electricity Part of Diet

Physiologists have come forward with the announcement that every one eats a little electricity all the while. The cells of which the muscles of almost all animals are composed are veritable electric batteries and this is true to a degree of vegetables. Thus electricity in a very general way is held by scientists to be a part of every one's diet. Some maintain that food which is not electrically active has little or no nourishment.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Tests are being made at Albany-Decatur of the new asphalt being laid by the Independent Paving company, of Birmingham. A large chemical house of Pittsburgh, Pa., has two representatives on the job. Engineers are greatly interested in the tests as the foundations of stone and concrete under it is a new invention. Credited to City Engineer M. S. Bingham. The final coat of asphalt is being called "Binghamite" in recognition of Mr. Bingham's service in inventing it.

Wednesday, April 16, has been set as the date for the hearing by the Alabama public service commission of the petition of L. B. Hatch, et al., for authority for the sale and conveyance of property owned by the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power company and its receivers and of the petition of the Birmingham Electric company for the authorization of issuance of certain securities. Both these hearings will be held at the offices of the public service commission in Montgomery.

Women moonshiners use the same methods in satisfying revenge as the modern housewife, according to federal prohibition agents who found their automobile hors d' combat, after a raid in Gentry's Gap, Shelby county. Safety pins were stuck in the tires and other items of midday's apparel, such as combs and hat pins were entangled in the engine and other parts of the raiders' machine, the agents declared.

Alabama produced 231,763 tons of pig iron in March, the record for the year so far, going above February by 12,405 tons, production being steady for 31 days in March, while February showed two days less. The January production in the state, with the same number of blast furnaces and the same number of days as March, is given at 225,556 tons.

City health officials, headed by Dr. J. L. Perdue, have opened a strenuous campaign against mosquitoes and flies in Greenville, and have issued orders for every property owner or lessor to remove from their premises any and all kinds of debris and weeds. The order will be rigidly enforced by the police, it is announced.

Prospects that Alabama's delegation to the republican national convention in Cleveland in June will go uninstructed loomed strong as leaders of the so-called O. D. Street and Pope M. Long factions opened a spirited fight for control of the state convention which assemblies in Birmingham on or about May 20.

A large trunk filled with quart bottles of imported whiskey was seized at the L. & N. passenger station in Mobile just half an hour before it was being sent to Birmingham. C. A. Lewis, of Toulminville, Ala., who was caught checking the trunk, was taken into custody by the police and charged with violating the prohibition law.

PUTTING MORE CONVENIENCES INTO KITCHEN

Unusual Conveniences Arranged in Kitchen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Virginia housewives, inspired by the efforts of their home demonstration agents, have been sprucing up their kitchens and competing with each other in putting in conveniences and labor-saving devices at small cost. The prize-winning kitchen in Albemarle county was improved for a total cash outlay of only $3.70, most of which was spent for paint and three new window shades. The woman who won the prize did all of the work herself with the exception of a little help from one of the men in the family in making a table and altering the doors to the kitchen.

Details of improvements. Some of the improvements this woman made may offer suggestions to other housewives. In a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture, the following details were given:

She filled in cracks and breaks in the walls and ceiling with plaster of paris, and then tacked gray building paper on them. This was treated with cream-colored wall paint. Cracks in the floor were filled and the whole oiled. With the man's help, windows were eased and old doors were made over and painted. A little old table was braced, enameled white, and fitted with casters, to serve as a tea wagon. An old food safe was painted white and put on casters. The woodbox was raised on legs, to be reached more easily, and the whole painted. A child's chair was made into a kitchen stool. On the back of the kitchen door a shelf rack was made for brooms and the mop, which had large nickel flags from old curtains sewed into their ends to serve as hangers. Three new window shades were purchased at a cost of $1.30, the largest single expenditure.

Perhaps the most unusual improvement in this kitchen was the making of a sink out of an old dishpan, which was enameled blue and cemented to a shelf built over an old drain pipe. A hole large enough to hold the stopper was cut in the bottom of the pan and through the shelf, and lined with cement. This connected with the drain pipe. There was not enough room for an adequate drain board, but a small one was improvised so that the water would drain back into the dishpan sink. A lower shelf was put in to hold the water bucket.

Handy Work Table. A work table about three feet wide and six feet long was designed and built from old lumber. One end was set against the kitchen wall, and the other had two drawers fitted with glass knobs salvaged from an old piece of furniture in the attic. A set of movable shelves was placed about two feet back of the drawers, allowing a convenient work space, while the other end of the table is used as a dining-table for the family. On these shelves were set containers for groceries made from lard cans, baking-powder tins, and other boxes, enameled blue and neatly arranged. Cookbooks and glass jars for other supplies completed the shelves. The work table was painted white and given a coat of waterproof varnish. An ingenious place for small equipment could be hung up, such as basting spoons, potato masher and egg beater, was made of a rack for buggy whips, also enameled blue, which was found in the store formerly run by the family.

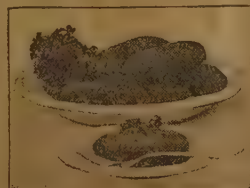

A lamp with a tin reflector was changed from its former position and placed to throw light over the stove. The fixture was painted to match the wall. A rack was placed back of the stove from which to hang frying pans. A towel rack was placed near the stove and another back of the door. Little changes of this sort often mean a great saving of effort and time in doing the housework.

ECONOMICAL PLAN TO USE ALL LEFT-OVERS

Cut Off and Reserve Tail-Ends of All Meats.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If you know the tail-ends of steak or chops will not be eaten, why not cut them off before serving and reserve them for a stew, hash, meat balls, or other "made" dish at another meal? It is economical to cut meat into individual portions before serving and keep the part not needed at the meal out of sight in the kitchen, where it will not tempt the appetite unnecessarily.

Meat left-overs kept too long and allowed to spoil are a total loss. Remember also that overcooked meat is often wasted meat. Fuel saving is often food saving. The United States Department of Agriculture reminds us.

Another thrifty idea is to make a good deal of gravy after cooking a roast as many of the good meat extracts are in the roasting pan. Save what gravy is not served at table to warm up the leftover slices for use in a "shepherd's pie," to thicken croquettes, or to combine with vegetables, macaroni, or noodles.

Will Clean Brushes

Cornmeal will clean hair brushes quite as well as ammonia and there is no danger of injury to the back of the brush. Take a cupful of cornmeal and fill the brush, rubbing the bristles gently with the hand. As it becomes discolored from absorbing the grease shake it out and replace it with fresh meal until the brush is clean.

GRAPE JUICE USED TO MAKE DESSERTS

Also Favored as Flavoring for Beverages.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Grape juice, whether canned commercially or at home, can be used for a number of delicious desserts, as well as for a refreshing beverage. The following dessert recipes, using unfermented grape juice, have been suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Grape Sherbet. Mix 1 pint of grape juice, the juice of 1 lemon, and 1 heaping teaspoonful of gelatin dissolved in boiling water; freeze quickly, add the beaten white of 1 egg when almost frozen. This quantity is sufficient for eight persons.

Grape Ice Cream. Mix 1 quart of grape juice, 1 quart of cream, 1 pound of sugar and the juice of 1 lemon. Freeze.

Syllabub. Mix 1 quart of fresh cream, the whites of 4 eggs, 1 glass of grape juice, and 2 cupfuls of powdered sugar. Whip half the sugar with the cream, the balance with the eggs; mix well; add the grape juice; pour over sweetened strawberries and pineapple or oranges and bananas. Serve cool.

Bohemian Cream. Mix one pint of thick cream and 1 pint of grape juice jelly; pour into small cups and set on ice. Serve with lady fingers.

Test for Eggs

Boiled eggs which adhere to the shell are fresh. A good egg will sink in water. Stale eggs are glassy and smooth of shell. The shell of a fresh egg has a limelike surface. A boiled egg which is done and dries quickly on the shell when taken from the saucepan is fresh.

Cover Jars With Paper Bags

Save your paper bags and slip them over your jars of fruit, writing the name of the fruit on the bag. Twist the top of the bag tightly and the fruit will keep better and the jars will be free from dust.

GOOD ROADS

MOTORISTS PAYING FOR BETTER ROADS

(By WILLIAM O. EDEN, President Illinois Highway Improvement Association.)

It is a trite but true saying that the motor car is responsible for good roads as we know them in the year 1924 in the United States.

There is no place in the country where this is more true than in Illinois. In the current year motorists will pay in license fees to the state alone approximately $10,000,000 for the maintenance and building of roads.

Nearly every city in the state levies a wheel tax against motor vehicles. It is probably safe to say that the aggregate 1924 municipal wheel tax collected in Illinois will be $5,000,000. Thus the motorists of the state will pay approximately $15,000,000 this year for roads and streets.

It is claimed by some experts in taxation that this is a special tax, and that the legislation responsible for it is class legislation. However that may be, it is an historic fact that organizations representing the motorists of the state were the first to propose and agree that such a tax should be levied, in order that the state might be saved from the terrible transportation conditions under which it labored until the modern businesslike method of road improvement was evolved.

It has become a habit of some later day advocates of good roads to claim pioneerhood and to assert that whatever progress has been made in the state is due solely to their initiative and efforts. The transition which Illinois is now experiencing is due to a movement started by motorists and not by politicians, and is the natural outcome and continuation of a road building effort that was created more than a dozen years ago.

It may be interesting at this time, therefore, to give a brief sketch of the good road movement that has brought to Illinois many hundreds of miles of concrete and other permanent pavements in place of mud, sand and clay that were prevalent in the early part of the present century.

Road and Ditch Machine Lessens Strain on Team

In addition to being durably constructed and adapted for operation in either soft or hard ground, this scraper is provided on its under side with semi-cylindrical runners which not only decrease the strain upon the horses but also do away with the necessity of holding onto the handles while the load is being taken to the dump. E. Allen and F. Allen, Clare, Mich., are the inventors.

Plan Road Schools for Pan-American Delegates

Forty delegates will be brought to this country from Pan-American countries to make an intensive "shirt-sleeves" study of highways and highway transport under the terms of a plan approved by government, automotive, road machinery, road material and banking representatives at a meeting held in New York.

The proposal as outlined by Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Walter Drake, T. H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, and Dr. G. Sherwell, secretary-general of the Inter-American high commission, provides that the men to be invited will be named here, and all of their expenses will be paid by private subscription.

The immediate purpose is to give the delegates a sufficient understanding of developed highway transport to enable them to participate actively in the Pan-American Highway congress proposed at the last meeting of the Pan-American Union and which will be held as a separate project in 1924. The ultimate objective is the promotion of closer relations between the United States and the other countries of the Americas.

Roy D. Chapin, Hudson-Essex company; W. A. Beatty, Austin Manufacturing company, and Fred L. Kent, Bankers' Trust company, were named as an executive committee. Details in this country will be handled by the highway education board. S. T. Henry, formerly of the Engineering News-Record, will manage the project.

Three in School District

In a sparsely settled portion of Kansas there resides a man and his wife, with a son and daughter. This constitutes the entire population of the school district, and every year the man, his wife and son elect themselves as the three members of the school board. Then they vote a six months' term of school at $40 a month, and employ the daughter as teacher. Her only pupil is her brother, and he attends just when he feels like it. At least that was the procedure until the scheme was found out.

There is a great deal of "fisherman's luck" being dispensed right now.

Politics and not the people govern the United States now.

State School Superintendent Abreem has made a woeful mistake in advocating Federal aid for schools.

Secretary Denby took his down fall in silence and faded away. Sinclair and Doheny should take good care of him.

If the Senate Oil Committee keeps up its investigation much longer the bones of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln will begin to shiver.

The man who dances these days should be an athlete. Takes a real stout man to tote a 150 pound female very far.

The modernist religionists spouted so much vaporized gas they seem to have blown away. Hades must be a gas burner now.

The greed after money is injuring the cause of religion, ruining the schools and has already disgraced the nation.

It looks like pure politics and not good business judgement dominates the debates on the Muscle Shoals proposition.

The Republican party is finding that the "pouring of oil on the troubled waters" does not produce the desired results.

When a party politician takes the sore head like ex-attorney General Daugherty has, his political sun has set and he closes the door of oblivion behind him.

The naval aviators who started out to circumnavigate the earth are still making arrangements to complete the attempt. We think, perhaps, their great grandchildren will be able to welcome them when they get back.

Dry goods store advertisements used to make us blush with their corset ads. Now they feature their ads with pictures of waist high stockings and waist low dresses until a corset cut looks as innocent as a Sunday School motto.

Of all the pitiful and silly attempts to win wealth and notoriety, the misguided high brow who undertook to rewrite and modernize the Bible recently takes the cake. The fellow who undertakes to improve on the words of God always gets what is coming to him.

If Alabama with all of her wonderful wealth, can't school her own children we better quit. A howl for Federal aid is disgusting. Unless somebody calls a halt in the political machinations of the school teachers of Alabama, they are going to head us in to a mess that will be hurtful and disastrous.

TARRIFF TALK

It has come to our hearing that a movement is trying to be put on foot to induce the farmers to petition Congress to put a high tariff on certain farm products, such as cotton, cotton seed, peanuts, velvet beans and so on.

Certainly the Southern farmers are too intelligent and too well informed as to the effects of tariff legislation to allow themselves to be led into such an absolutely absurd and ridiculous step as this.

The present tariff, it seems to us, is so palpably framed for the rich and against the poor--so flagrantly an instrument of direct oppression of the farmers and the laborers--that we wonder that any one could be found who would hint tariff relief for the farmer at this time, unless it would be to council a reduction of the present iniquitous law and the lowering thereby of the price the farmer has to pay for the necessities of life.

Why seek a tariff on cotton? With whom do we compete or from whom do we need protection? Who competes with us in the peanut line?

If a duty was placed on cotton of a dollar per pound it would not raise the price paid the farmer one penny, while the spinner, who manufactures it and the exporter would be enabled to pocket millions by robbing the rest of the world.

Any person who attempts to put it in to the head of the farmers that the government can make a price for his produce, is either ignorant himself or is trying to pull one over the farmer for selfish or political reasons.

This country needs only a tariff for revenue. If we, having all the natural advantages that nature has given and the accumulated wealth and experience of a hundred and fifty years, can not learn to live and do well without a "protective" tariff, then our country is a failure and a joke.

"Protective" tariffs are only intended to make millionaires out of the few at the direct expense of the many and that is all they are doing now or have ever done.

What business has the government at attention to "government aid" and devote their time and energies to producing crops on a business basis? There is not an argument possible in favor of tariff intervention on the farm because the profits all go to the man who handles the product and not to the man who makes it.

All such talk is rankest folly.

BE DECENT

One Time, when we were a young man, a party of us young folks, boys and girls, charpered by a gentleman and his wife, went out to a noted fishing resort for a week's camp.

The place we went to was a private preserve and large mill pond and the man who owned it was so clever that he allowed the public to camp and fish there as much as they pleased, allowing them to use free some nice camping houses he put up to accommodate all visitors.

Our party arrived there in the forenoon and were intensely shocked to find the camp houses all closed, the boats all locked and a decided coolness on the part of the owner and his employees.

Upon an investigation of the situation with the owner, we did not blame him at all. A party from another neighboring town had just left the camp the day before we arrived. The owner showed us how they had appreciated his kindness and courtesy.

In the camp house they had used for a kitchen and dining room, fish scales were all over the place and on the floor were several places where they had dressed their fish and actually left the offal lying on the floor.

They had basely abused this man's splendid hospitality and disgraced themselves when you look at it right. Still, they came from Cuthbert Georgia, which was, at that time, a great school town and prided itself on its class.

The owner had become so disgusted with their behavior and lack of appreciation that he had decided to cease all of his public hospitality.

This is a true story and may have an appreciation in even these modern days.

Very often now young people motor off to some neighboring resort or community for a picnic and general frolic, which is perfectly all right, provided, they will always appreciate and respect the hospitality and kindness extended to them.

Don't ever be indecent nor insulting on these trips, but always try to be courteous and respectable gentlemen and ladies in your behavior, and win the esteem instead of the disgust of your hosts.

Always bear this fact in mind and observe it, not alone on your personal account but for the sake of your home, your parents and your town. Never bring disgrace upon your own community.

NEED NOT COUNT US

There will be one airplane for every 1,000 people "in a very short time," and the airplane will be used as casually for intercity transportation as the taxicab now is for short trips within the city. Anthony H. G. Fokker, Dutch aviation expert, predicted before the Cleveland chamber of commerce.

Declaring that if planes are handled "by the right man" and are well made, commercial aviation is safe. Fokker said that the planes are available if suitable landing fields are provided. Instead of lagging in vision, should lead in vision.

WANTED: A MONKEY CAGE

The Birmingham Age-Herald in its issue of April 7th, had in it a picture showing that a member of the Illinois Western University, while on a hike, had taken possession of a monkey cage, thereby striking the members of the faculty of that institution. The presumption is that the girls sought the most suitable environment.

A number of years ago, there developed in our country a monstrosity in the form of a man which was called a DUDE. He wore clothes that were out of the usual order; he attracted much attention and was notorious for the fact that he did nothing and was nothing but a hanger on. We can not imagine what was the object of his creation, unless it be that after his death, his body should be embalmed and preserved to be exhibited to future generations as the chief monstrosity of the closing days of the 19th Century.

Something worse than the 'DUDE' has appeared on the scene. Not many days ago, there came to Verbena a lot of girls who to say the least of it, attracted a large amount of attention and criticism. They had abbreviated britches called "Knickerbockers" pinned at the bottom with leggings and pierced out at the top as the of the wearer dictated. They looked somewhat like folks; and they may have been folks where they came from but as there was no monkey cage at Verbena in which they display themselves, they were permitted to run at large. If such garb is calculated to inspire in them the highest and loveliest attributes of womanhood, and if their parents think it well enough to allow them to indulge in unseemly parade, then it is nobody's business. We insist that the parent be strict in the community where they live.

Verbena girls do not wear britches, and it is not fair to have those who do, to come as a shock to the modesty of well behaved people.

C. A. HORNADY.

SOME CANDIDATES

A prominent political newspaper writer at Washington, in summing up the prospects before the Democratic presidential nominating convention in New York next June, finds no less than 25 names of prominent democrats who stand a chance of landing the nomination.

He does not think either of the parties now contesting for the plum will be able to land.

He says that Al Smith and Underwood will be able to combine their strength, representing the Catholic foreign and Wall Street vote and will have about 420 delegates, but as it will require over 729 to nominate he says, both of these candidates will lose out, for, owing to the character of their support, they can not possibly hope to trade with any other faction. He says McAdoo will have about 440 votes to begin with, but as he is distinctively the candidate of labor and the soldier boys, there is no other bunch who he can hope to annex.

His final conclusion is that some compromise dark horse, not now considered at all, will win the plum after a long drawn out and bitter fight between the various factions.

Rev. C. D. Messer filled his regular appointment at Mount Carmel in southern part of Montgomery county last Sunday. Owing to his ability, honesty, virtue, and upright christian life, Rev. Messer has become one of the well known Protestant Methodist preachers in Alabama.

Mr. J. R. Short, of Maplesville route 2, was in town Monday. Mr. Short is one of the recent jurors in Clanton who did his full duty. A few more terms of court like the one recently held and with men of his type on the jury and old Clanton will be one of the most lawabiding counties in the state.

Mr. Ed Smitherman, of Maplesville, was here Monday. Mr. Smitherman served as deputy sheriff under Mr. B. L. Jones and has many friends and people in all parts of the county who honor him for his honesty integrity and straight forward way of dealing with his fellow man.

Miss Edna Lowe, daughter of Mr. Butler Lowe, was at home Saturday and Sunday. Miss Lowe is teaching Latin and English in the Barbour County High at Clito. She is a graduate of the Clanton County High and since that has graduated at the University of Alabama. Miss Lowe is quite an admirable young lady in addition to being so well prepared for service in life.

Mr. J. B. Penter, of Birmingham, has recently moved his family to Clanton. They are living in the nice bungalow building opposite the high school. Mr. Penter has been in Clanton for some time in charge of the street work. He is a fine example of the old adage, "Still water runs deep." We are more than glad to have him and his worthy family added to our list of home builders.

DOING FINE

Our old friend, Mr. M. J. Jones, who is known by everybody in this section, was in to see us Tuesday. He is located now at Grady and is engaged in the saw mill business. Says he is doing fairly well and making a little cash on the side. We are glad to see him looking so well and especially glad to learn that his efforts are meeting with success. He is a mighty clever man.

COMPLETED SATURDAY

The preliminary survey of the south end of the B. & M. Highway, through Chilton county, was completed last Saturday to its intersection of the present old highway some two miles south of Clanton.

This survey crosses the railroad at the deep cut near the home of Mr. Jasper Dennis, and goes from there by way of Enterprise church and White City to Prattville.

This route, however, has not been definitely decided upon, but will probably be the one which will be finally adopted.

The Federal engineers are said to favor this route, as does Commissioner Scruggs and possibly Commissioner Suttle.

The survey follows a sandy ridge, or plateau, almost all the way after it crosses the railroad there is said to be very little bridging and comparatively a small amount of grading to be done.

If this means that the work on the highway will be started soon, and in earnest, we are willing to accept any route now to get a road.

A THIRD PARTY BREWING

There was never a time when the American people should have been more careful in selecting their candidates for president than in the year 1924. Coolidge will probably receive the Republican nomination. Unless the unexpected happens he will be re-nominated. Much, then, depends on what the Democrats do. If the Democrats nominate a liberal there is every indication that they will win in the November election. On the other hand, if the Democrats nominate a conservative of the Coolidge type, there will be the greatest bolt to a third party that this country has ever known, and the bolters will not be confined to any one party. —Mountain Eagle.

Every mother knows the nameless dread that comes whenever the little one turns up feverish, listless and without appetite.

Always the same anxiety, the fearful question—is it going to be scarlet fever, diphtheria or some other dangerous contagious disease?

Every mother knows that a laxative is the first thing required, but too often the ordinary laxative fails to do a thorough job because it has not sufficient action on the liver.

Liv-o-lax meets the need because, besides cleansing the stomach and bowels, it clears out congested liver and so brings quicker relief.

Children love to take Liv-o-lax because it tastes good and does good. It is made only of pure vegetable ingredients, is not at all drastic and causes no distress.

You can get Liv-o-lax, 30c, at your favorite drug store.

SPRING FIGHTS

An old poet wrote once that "In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

Perhaps there is a whole lot of truth in that, too, for June marriages are proverbially popular and frequent, but from recent developments, in and around Clanton, it seems like the balmly zephyrs, the singing birds and the beautiful flowers of spring are reacting in an opposite direction from love on some of our worthy citizens for fistie encounters and other turbulent episodes have been just a little bit frequent during the past week.

Nothing so very serious has developed so far but it is a mighty good time to stop fighting before some of you get really hurt, and besides, we tried it a few times, in our younger days and found it to be awful hard work.

We are anxious to see the weather settle down to business a little better, and maybe the Jassitude developed by real hot sunshine will cool off the exuberant fistie spirit to such an extent that no more of these unfortunate fights will disturb the serenity of our peacefulness.

ANNUAL EASTER SINGING

Please remember the annual singing that takes place at Poplar Springs every year and make your arrangements to be on hand.

All singers are cordially urged to come and bring their 1924 song books.

Pleasure in Solitude

How few people are really good company for themselves! Most of us, when left alone for more than the briefest space of time, are bored. This is not in itself a grave matter; for most people are not often left alone. Their real misfortune is that they lack the curious eye, the active imagination that can create for them anywhere and at any time—even in society—a solitude, with the outlook and the mood that solitude best fosters. It is only the poet, active or potential, for whom the vacant or the pensive mood means pleasure.

The outward shows of sky and earth, of hill and valley, he has viewed; and impulses of deeper birth have come to him in solitude.

In common things that round us lie some random truths he can impart. The harvest of a quiet eye. These words and sleeps on his own heart.

"Divine Sarah" Received Over Thousand Proposals

"Sarah Bernhardt as I Knew Her" (Hurst and Blackett), recently published, contains Miss Therese Berton's intimate reminiscences of the great French actress—"as told to Basil Woon." Mme. Berton sums up Sarah Bernhardt's career in these words:

"She was born a Jewess, baptized a Catholic. By birth she was French and by marriage she was Greek. Throughout her life she was first an actress, secondly a mother, thirdly a great and tempestuous lover. The happiest period of her life was during the infancy of her son Maurice."

Sarah Bernhardt as far back as 1892 told Mme. Berton that she had "received more than a thousand proposals of marriage, and that she could remember the name and date of every one of them."

Shortly before her eighteenth birthday, Sarah, as a debutante from the conservatoire, made her debut in a minor part. The critics were not overwhelmed. Furious at their cool criticisms, Sarah was "found moaning in her dressing room." For five days she hovered between life and death, and then confessed that she had swallowed the contents of a bottle of liquid rouge.

Asked the reason for this strange and terrible act, she answered, "Life was useless. I wanted to see what death was like."

On their sketching tour in Brittany, Gustave Dore and Sarah entered a farmhouse asking shelter for the night.

After dinner, Dore was shown to a bedroom and the painter supposed that Sarah had been given another, but the next morning, on looking out of the window, he was amazed to see her washing herself at the yard pump, her clothes full of straw and filth. She was in merry mood.

"They took me for your boy pupil, and gave me a bed with the cow in the barn," she told him.

On another occasion, word was sent that the prince of Wales was coming to call on Sarah at the theater, and she was requested to be ready to see him at ten o'clock. At that hour she was customarily on the stage. The stage manager suggested advancing the time of the whole piece. She settled it in her own characteristic fashion. "Let him wait," she said, "After all he is not king yet."—London Mail.

MAHOMET AND THE MOUNTAIN IN MONTANA

And between Plentywood and Pandhandle was born the first vocational congress for girls. From Plentywood, 400 miles as the crow flies, to Montana State college, at Bozeman, girls make their way November after November, to satisfy the longing question: "What shall I do?" Others along the South Dakota line come 300 miles. Sometimes rail and auto bus connections are so poor that it takes three days each way for the trip, but they make it, these Montana high school girls, for what they find in the congress.

It may be just accident, but I don't happen to know of a single Montana girl drifting around the big cities hunting just any sort of a job. The first United States congresswoman, yes. The assistant director of a great bureau in the United States Department of Labor, yes. But drifters, no.

The personal story of Una B. Herrick may throw light on the willingness of Montana girls to make good in their own state. Widowed, left with a family and without money in New York, she decided first to leave New York. "Oh," she says, "I loved New York—I do yet! But my idea was and is that a woman can find a greater field of usefulness, more return in money, more friends and a saner sort of happiness in a small community."

Teaching, studying and "waiting my chance," she has come to be dean of women's work and social dean of the Montana Women's college. The vocational congress came because Mrs. Herrick recognized the inspiration from knowledge of what other women are doing, that gets automatically pooled in big cities, and felt the shut office of Montana girls from this knowledge and inspiration. It was the old affair of bringing the mountain to Mahomet. Each fall distinguished business and professional women take their accumulated experience to the Montana girls. The impression one carries away, according to one of these visitors, is that all the value of the congress pales beside the value of the by-products now established—standards of dress, of conduct, of community recreation, and of democracy—shared by the girls themselves from year to year.

For herself—"No, I don't go back to New York every year now, like I used to. I'm more apt to go over to the west coast when I have a vacation. I look out across this country—anywhere this side of St. Paul—with a feeling of knowing every one I meet; of having the right to be a working woman; of being at home; of proprietorship. That's the feeling the West gives us."

PHARMACY COMPOUNDED WITH FRIENDSHIP

Wouldn't you expect the first woman in the United States who's become president of a state board of pharmacy to be a bit "hard boiled" and cynical? Or at least to hail from a city where she had a good acquaintance among other voting pharmacists? Honors go to a citizen of New Prague, Minn. New Prague boasts of less than 5,000 citizens, of all ages and sizes. That has left plenty of room, apparently, for one citizen to spread—no cynicism, but enthusiasm.

Starting at fifteen, of necessity, Marie Pleisner, prescription druggist, put her heart into her work. "I have enjoyed every minute of it," she answers folks who want her formula for success in a new field for women. "I enjoy washing a showcase. I enjoy dusting a prescription bottle as much as I enjoy selling a photograph in the gift shop annex for $2.95, cash in hand."

"You can make good anywhere. The small town offers the same opportunities the big city does—if you apply yourself and do your job well."

New Prague has received more than honor through her woman pharmacist. Marie Pleisner believes in her town, and puts the belief into practice. As member of the park board, and president of the Garden club, she sees to the planting of flowers in vacant lots where weeds grow heretofore. She holds a Red Cross medal for volunteer service rendered at home during the war.

But the real reasons for living and working in a town in preference to a city, and more personal, move vital to the philosophy of a friendly woman. They are, she holds, two. "First, personalities. You know the people, and they know you better in a small town. "Second, your interest in the town is greater because it is your town. You are trying to build up, to see it grow and improve."

Dogs Carry Cards

A new fad among the women of Paris is the lapdog visiting card. French bulls and toy spaniels, that go visiting with their mistresses have their own tiny pasteboards tucked away in little pockets of their outdoor coats. Such dogs have two sets of cards, which are duly left for the dogs at the houses where they are calling with their mistresses. One card gives the dog's pet name and pedigree and the other the name of its mistress.—Kansas City Star.

MUSCLE SHOALS

Ford Proposal Versus Congressional Record

Chapter I.

A STATEMENT OF THE ALABAMA POWER COMPANY, SUPPORTED BY REMARKS FROM THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

Senator Brookhart said in the Senate recently:

"I believe that if those voters knew how the figures of this Ford proposition are juggled in the majority report made in favor of the bill, they would all vote the other way."

The Facts In The Case.

Statements recently made by some of those interested in the Ford offer have criticized this company for having submitted its offer; for the part it has played or failed to play in the development of the state; the making by this company of a contract with the government during the war and other matters.

But it is becoming well understood by the public that behind the attacks on this company is the selfish ambition of property owners at Muscle Shoals who will be directly benefited by the proposed Ford developments. They have from the first waged an industrious campaign of abuse, threats and vilification against this company and against individuals in public or private life who dared to criticize the Ford offer in public or to oppose it as being contrary to the public interest.

There are some who believe that the Ford offer is best for the public, but very few have examined it or know just what it means to the public.

The Gorgas Contract.

The war-time contract of this company with the government made in 1918 gave the government the right to enter upon the company's land and construct in addition to its Gorgas plant and build a transmission line on its right of way 90 miles long to Muscle Shoals to supply power to the nitrate plants. In this the government expended $4,700,000.00 and the Power Company agreed to purchase the government's property after the war at its fair value. In due course this value was fixed by two government boards in 1923 at $3,472,457.25, and was paid to the government in cash by this company September last. This was 75 per cent of the war cost, a greater percentage than the government received from any war-time expenditure made by it so far as any records have been published. Statements made which question the fairness of that contract have heretofore been denounced by this company as false and untrue and made in reckless disregard of the facts, and that statement we now repeat.

Those interested in putting the Ford offer through Congress have for their own political and selfish motives attacked that contract, but that is merely a subterfuge to draw the public attention away from the real issue.

(To Be Continued.)

Those Who Are Informed Say—

Secretary of War.

"I think the Alabama Power Company, which is under the Public Service Commission of Alabama, would be inclined to take a broad and generous view of any matter in which the government would be involved. Their record seems to indicate that. They turned over property at Muscle Shoals to the government at the beginning of the war, which has cost something like $500,000, and as far as I have been able to observe, I do not think they would be contentious about those matters."

Major General Williams, Chief

Of Ordnance:

"The government found itself very greatly in need of power. The Alabama Power Company had already projected this extension and all plans had been drawn and they came to the assistance of the government at a critical time, putting at its disposal their facilities and the plans which they had already made." (All officials of the government who had anything to do with the contract or any negotiations with this company have never spoken otherwise.)

Rep. Hill, of Maryland:

"A few years ago the secretary of war, Mr. Baker, considered the Alabama Power Company 'generous and public spirited.' Today it is attacked as a greedy corporation by some of those who have advocated the Ford offer. I wonder how Ford will be regarded five years from now if you accept his offer with a possible profit of 8 per cent on fertilizer alone?" (Mr. Hill then read the letter from the Power Company to the government donating the Muscle Shoals dam site to the government on which the Power company had expended about $500,000.)

"I never saw Mr. Martin before he came to our committee. I have never seen him except in relation to hearings on Muscle Shoals. I do not know whether he claims to be a philanthropist or not, but here are the thanks of Secretary of War Baker to his company:"

Many Severe Change of Life Symptoms Relieved by the Use of Cardui, According to Florida Lady.

"For some time, then, I did not need Cardui." Mrs. Wester goes on, "but later, when change of life came on, I had pains across my back and sides. My head ached down into my shoulders. . . . I was weak and run-down, nervous, and did not eat. I didn't rest well nights. "My husband, who was a great be-liever in Cardui, having seen what it did for me in former years, went and bought six bottles; insisted I take it steadily, which I did. It helped me. I did not suffer so with my head and back. My limbs that had felt weak and shaky grew stronger and Cardui helped me through this period. I feel I did a great deal for me. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Harlan Fiske Stone of New York Is Selected to Be Attorney General.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S selection for the new attorney general to succeed Harry Daugherty may not please the more "progressive" of the western Republicans, but it is likely to meet the approval of the party generally and probably of the country. Harlan Fiske Stone of New York is the man chosen, and in him Mr. Coolidge believes he has found what he required for the place—an authority on law and an able executive. Mr. Stone and the President are lifelong friends and both are graduates from Amherst. For fourteen years Mr. Stone was dean of the Columbia university law school, and he is a director of many corporations, including the Atlanta and Charlotte Air Line railway. He is a big, forceful and able man, and Mr. Coolidge relies on him to give the Department of Justice a thorough housecleaning. Politics, geography and factions were disregarded in this choice of a new chief law officer, but the Coolidge campaign managers believe it will prove to have been good politics. They call attention to the President's sympathy with the ideas of the western progressives as evidenced in his offer of the navy portfolio to Judge Kenyon, and it is now asserted in Washington that the Coolidge supporters would be more than willing to have a western progressive nominated for vice president. The men most talked of for that place are Judge Kenyon, Senator Borah and Senator Capper. Moreover, it is said Mr. Coolidge wants one of that group named for temporary chairman of the Cleveland convention to make the keynote speech. Mr. Stone visited the executive office Wednesday and was introduced to the administration leaders.

SHARP admonition to the majority leaders in the senate and house by the President brought on an access of activity in pushing vital legislation toward enactment. In a series of conferences with those leaders he made known his attitude, which was reflected in a statement by Senator Watson of Indiana:

"Now that Attorney General Daugherty has seen fit to resign," Mr. Watson said, "a new situation presents itself in the senate. It seems to me that it is the duty of the Democrats to join with the Republicans to bring the senate back to its legislative functions."

"It has been regrettable, although unavoidable, that four months of this session—with the most constructive legislative program before it of the reconstruction period following the war—have been devoted almost entirely to the endless discussion of personalities involved in the oil leases and alleged misdoings in public office."

"The senate must devote itself unflinchingly if it hopes to conclude consideration of the legislative program and adjourn by June, which we ought to do. The general prosperity of the country would be aided by congress enacting its program without delay so business could adjust itself to new conditions called for in new laws."

The senate finance committee worked day and night on the tax reduction bill, on which the leaders of both parties profess to wish speedy action. Early in the week the committee unanimously approved the house provision for a retroactive reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on 1923 incomes paid in 1924, and it is considered certain that the senate will accept this. The taxpayer will pay one-half of the next installment, due June 15, and three-fourths of each of the last two installments. If the tax has been paid in full a refund of one-fourth will be made the taxpayers. Of course numerous changes in the house bill were made by the committee, mainly for the purpose of raising additional revenues. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon read to the committee a long argument for the elimination of the increases in rates on estate taxes in the house measure and the elimination of the gift tax. His recommendations were followed, and new excise taxes were added on radio and mah jongg sets.

THOUGH public interest in the various investigations in Washington died down somewhat after the resignation of Harry Daugherty, the "probers" went right on with their inquiries. The Daugherty committee obtained some evidence from H. M. Peck of Oklahoma City, a former special assistant to the attorney general, supposed to indicate that Daugherty and Fall aided the Miller brothers of the 101 ranch in defrauding the Ponca Indians of land and possible fortunes in oil. Then came Capt. H. L. Scelfe, a former Department of Justice agent, who has been once before heard and frequently mentioned in the inquiry. He told a long story about war-time graft, especially in the aircraft industry, and implicated Secretary of War Weeks, Daugherty, Guy D. Goff, former assistant attorney general, and Charles Hayden, a Boston banker and director of the Wright-Martin Aircraft company, all of whom, Scelfe declared, should be indicted for "conspiracy to obstruct justice" in failing to prosecute the aircraft company for alleged graft. He also denounced former Attorney General Palmer and T. L. Chabourn, a New York lawyer, both Democrats. Captain Scelfe bolstered up his accusations with numerous letters and documents. He said he worked up these war-graft cases but was called off by the higher-ups.

Thomas F. Lane, former legal adviser to the aircraft division of the War department, testified that his copies of reports on aircraft frauds had been taken from his desk and he had been discharged because he was going to appear before the committee. Captain Volandt of the air service admitted taking the papers and said Secretary Weeks had them. Thereupon, Mr. Weeks was subpoenaed and went before the committee Friday to explain his connection with the prosecution of the aircraft graft cases.

AL JENNINGS' sensational story about Jake Hamon and the Republican nomination of 1920 having been shot full of holes, the Teapot Dome committee did not find a great deal to do last week. J. B. Dryche, who was a confidential man for Hamon, said Jennings' testimony was "bunk." He said Hamon was not in the habit of giving away his money but was a great "kiddier" and might have told the stories of huge expenditures when talking to Democrats. Dryche's evidence, by the way, did not shed much luster on the purity of Oklahoma politics.

George White, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, was on the stand Wednesday and Senator Spencer, Republican, insisted on getting from him testimony concerning the Democratic campaign fund, though relevant. They bickered over this for a long time and then White was permitted to say that Edward Doheny's contribution was $34,900, and not $75,000, as Doheny himself had said. The committee adjourned for the week, awaiting the presence of William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the Republican finance committee in 1920.

Harry Sinclair was indicted by the grand jury for contempt of the senate in refusing to testify. He pleaded not guilty and gave bond of $5,000.

SOME Democrats in the senate started a move to try to force the resignation of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on a ground that he is a stockholder in various concerns, but Senator Reed of Pennsylvania vigorously defended the secretary and Senator Robinson and other Democrats declined to support Senator McKellar, who led the attack, so it virtually collapsed. Senator Dill of Washington then came to bat with a resolution calling for the resignation of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy. This did not seem a very popular move, even with Democrats, and at this writing no action has been taken on it.

WISCONSIN'S Republican primaries were easily won by Senator LaFollette, whose vote was about twice that given Mr. Coolidge. The President, however, will get several delegates from that state. In the Democratic primaries Gov. Al Smith of New York defeated McAdoo. Smith says his name was entered without his consent or knowledge.

AS WAS expected, General Luden-ton died found not guilty of treason in connection with the Munich "beer-cellar putsch" of last November, by the Munich court. Hitler, Kriebel and Weber were convicted and received sentences of five years in prison. Their actual time of service will be short. Ludendorff protested the sentences of his comrades. He was greeted with vociferous cheers and will be elected to the reichstag by the radical nationalists known as the German People's Party of Liberty.

FRANCE, which persists in considering Germany the loser in the World war, and insists that Germany should carry out her pledges in the treaty of Versailles, was not unnaturally peeved by a note delivered to her last week by the German government. It was in reply to the demands of the allied council of ambassadors that the allied military control mission be permitted to resume its activities in Germany to check up on these five disarmament promises by Germany:

Pass laws prohibiting the import and export of war material—make recruiting for the army conform to treaty provisions and suppress the prewar general staff, demobilizing all excess officers.

Surrender all documents relative to war material on hand and the production of war factories at the time of the armistice.

Deliver the balance of war material not authorized by the treaty, especially equipment and uniforms.

Transform factories manufacturing war materials into plants making peace products.

Reorganize the state police (the schupo) into local police forces, with the policemen not receiving military instruction and not living together in barracks like soldiers.

Berlin's answer is a refusal to let the mission ascertain whether these pledges have been carried out, a statement that the allies and Germany should negotiate an accord covering that, and a proposal that the League of Nations handle future questions concerning the disarmament of Germany in its general dealings with world disarmament. The note contains a direct challenge to France's right to maintain a large army.

The committee of experts on German resources in foreign lands estimates that $8,000,000,000 gold marks ($20,000,000,000), has been hidden by Germany in other countries. The Dawes committee's report has been given to the reparations commission. Chancellor Marx of Germany has warned the world that it is not certain Germany will accept this report and Premier Poincare has gone no further than to express the hope that the committee would be able to offer "elements of a solution."

AFTER an all-night session the British house of commons rejected the policy of a capital levy, which was the chief plank of the Labor party in the recent elections. John Robert Clynes, government leader in the house, admitted the laborites could not hope for the passage of such a measure in the present parliament, but maintained the country would ultimately be forced to it by its crushing burden of debt. The government evaded inevitable defeat in connection with the recent bill by consenting to revision of an eviction clause.

ARGENTINA began on April 1 a most extraordinary experiment in the form of a law by which everyone in the country, citizen or foreigner, who has worked for 25 years, for himself or others, is retired on a pension amounting to his present salary. Those with years yet to serve must pay 5 per cent of their salaries into a national pension fund, from which the rewards to the elder workers are paid. Employers must augment the general fund by contributing another 5 per cent of their pay rolls. Salaries of workers are to continue during sickness or other disability.

Lesson for April 13 ELIJAH AND THE STRUGGLE WITH BAAL

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:17-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—"No man can serve two masters. . . . Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Matt. 6:24.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God Hears Elijah's Prayers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Elijah on Mt. Carmel.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Conflict between Jezebel and Elijah.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Elijah Won the Victory.

1. Elijah's Message to Ahab (vv. 17-18).

When Jezebel became the wife of King Ahab, she waged a savage warfare against God's prophets, killing all she could find, thus seeking to abolish the true religion and set up idolatry instead. Elijah suddenly appeared, announcing the suspension of molatire (1 Kings 17:1) as a judgment upon the people for their idolatry. He sounded three striking notes in his message:

(1) "As the Lord God of Israel liveth"—He knew that he represented the living God, therefore did not fear.

(2) "Before whom I stand"—Because Elijah stood before God, he could stand before Ahab.

(3) "There shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."—Drought was the punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17).

II. A Challenge to Baal Worship (I Kings 18:17-46).

As soon as Elijah had delivered his message concerning the drought, he retired from the king's sight, while the penalty of the king's sins should be visited upon the land.

1. Elijah Shows Himself to Ahab (vv. 17, 18).

(1) Ahab's question (v. 17). His aim in this question was no doubt to intimidate Elijah, to awe him into submission. The devil goes about as a roaring lion (1 Pet. 5:8).

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by the idolatry of Ahab and his family.

2. The Bold Challenge (vv. 19-24).

(1) The people assemble (vv. 19, 20). At the urgent request of Elijah the king convened the people.

(2) The ringing call to decision (vv. 21-24).

a. The question asked (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal.

b. The silence of the people (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king, or ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshipped.

c. The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided, one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The one who answered by fire was to be the God.

3. The Test Applied (vv. 25-29).

(1) Offering by the prophets of Baal (vv. 25-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people as to whether Baal was a real god.

(2) The offering by Elijah (vv. 30-33).

a. People invited near (v. 30). There are no secrets in God's worship.

b. The altar repaired (vv. 30-32). Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation.

c. The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar.

(3) Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). This was a model prayer.

(a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). All real prayer rests upon covenant relationships.

(b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36). Elijah was jealous for God's glory, but the only thing that he asked for himself was to be known as God's servant.

(c) It was for the salvation of the people (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He wanted them to come to know God.

d. The result (vv. 38, 39).

(a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed, not only the sacrifice, but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trenches.

(b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was the God.

(c) The Execution of Baal's Prophets (v. 40). Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their King. Idolatry was treason against the King.

Important Event
A woman ran out of a house shouting "Fire!" A passer-by started on a run for the fire station, while another dashed into the hall and being unable to see or smell smoke, turned to the excited woman, and asked: "Where is the fire?" "I didn't mean fire! I meant murder." A policeman arrived at that moment and demanded to know who was being murdered. "Oh, I didn't really mean murder," wailed the hysterical woman, "but the biggest rat you ever set eyes on chased our cat across the kitchen just now."

LEGAL POINTERS

Rocks to Avoid When Steering a Business Course

If a building upon a property is a substantial part of the purchase and is destroyed by fire before the day the purchaser is to take the title, the contract is at an end unless it is otherwise agreed.

Interest may be charged on claims from the time they become due, which if not specified, dates from the time when statement is rendered, or from the date payment is demanded.

Consent of the Insurance Company should be obtained to leave a dwelling house vacant and to make any substantial alterations in the property.

The object of recording a deed is to preserve the evidence of it and to give notice to all persons who thereafter desire to deal with the property.

Each individual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amount of the debts of the firm, except in cases of special partnership.

Be sure to get a deposit (no matter how small) from any prospective purchaser, as any deposit will, in most cases, insure a sale.

The abbreviation "Inc." following a business name indicates that a company doing business under that name is incorporated.

The word "Limited" in connection with a firm name indicates that a limitation of responsibility for each member is fixed.

An agent renting property should give receipt for deposit, subject to references and owner's approval.

A mortgage may be given to secure the performance of a contract as well as the payment of a debt.

Never loan money on real property unless the owner executes both a bond and mortgage to you.

You can avoid the responsibility of an endorser by writing "without recourse" above your name.

A judgment always carries interest at the legal rate, dating from the day it is rendered.

Be sure to have all interrelations of a deed noted at the foot of same before execution.

On releasing one of several joint obligations, all of the others are automatically released.

In case of exchange of property by an agent, full commission shall be paid on each side.

If one party to a contract fails to perform his part, the other may sue for damages.

Never accept a deed that is not signed, sealed, witnessed and acknowledged.

Never take title to property from an infant unless the court orders the sale.

Never accept the deed of an incompetent, or an habitual drunkard.

Do not forget that a minor may act as witness to a deed.

Never accept the deed of a minor.

Prof. Showalter, of Chatanooga, and Collins, of Georgia, both very noted composers and musicians, will be on hand and a number of other celebrated singers.

Full particulars will be given in both papers later.

EXCUSE US

At the request of the Democratic party we print this week, the qualified list of voters. In consequence we have been forced to leave out almost everything else.

We have not office force enough to handle a job like that on such short notice and hence we ask you to overlook all short comings. We have worked ourselves down and done our best.

A number of interesting and important communications were crowded out for which we are sorry and they will appear next week.

This has been an expensive job to us for which we make no charge, and we hope you all will accept our efforts to accommodate the party in the same spirit in which we have extended them.

We thank You

THE VOTING LIST

If your name does not appear on the qualified list printed, and you know you are entitled to vote, go to the court house this week and get same corrected. This is a matter that must be attended to at once, if at all, so take fair warning and look after it immediately.

A DESERVED HONOR

We notice with pleasure that the State Hospital Association which has been in annual session in Montgomery this week, elected Dr. V. J. Gragg, Pas first vice president.

They could not have made a better nor more competent selection in the state and we congratulate them on the wisdom displayed in their choice.

SEND US YOUR JOB WORK

A COTTON MILL

Tuesday night, the Chamber of Commerce held a public session at the Court house to which all citizens were invited.

A large crowd was on hand and the question of securing a cotton mill for Clanton was gone in to with enthusiasm.

Options were arranged for on several locations and the prospect looks encouraging for us to secure a mill in reality this time.

Instead of knocking now, let every citizen of this whole section get in earnest and do his and her part and we can land this mill without doubt.

EVERYBODY FISHING BUT US These last few spring days have put nearly everyone in town on the fishing lists.

Some wonderful luck has been enjoyed by some of them in catching "Tropies" out at the river. This is the first time we ever heard of them in such vast numbers and they are not all caught yet.

Large crowds are out still every day and fish is becoming a common diet with some folks.

SOME SPLENDID WORK

The city is rushing work on the east end of second avenue and are making a wonderful improvement out there.

Quite a number of citizens are also having sidewalks put in up to the grade and before you know it, almost, we who still walk will have no mud nor pitfalls to contend with.

STRAW HAT DAY

Next Sunday is Easter and is the day for spring dresses and straw hats to make their debut for this season. Cold or hot, rain or shine, don't forget to rush your straw next Sunday and be in style.

INDIAN GRAVE

Health of this place is very good at present. We are glad of the fact that spring has opened again as beautifully as it has.

Farmers are all very busy now planting their crops and preparing for the oncoming war with general green.

Miss Clara Bell Jones has made a recent visit to the Mitchell Dam. She of course reports a nice time.

Our singing society is good at present, especially when Prof. Alonza Askins and Miss Baxter are present.

Mr. Prat Billingsley made a pleasure trip to Billingsley Sunday afternoon. We suppose, he was trying out his new Ford.

Mr. Cleane Billingsley and several others from this community motored to the singing at Bethlehem Sunday afternoon in Mr. Billingsley's new Ford.

Let us call attention to Mr. Alonza Askins and others to the following 23rd psalm. As it is made to fit the present time.

The Ford is my car I shall not want another, It maketh me to lie down in greasy places, It leadeth me beside the filling station, It restoreth my gas bill, my tank runneth empty, I prepare a break down for me in the presence of mine enemies.

It anointeth my face and hands with grease, Sunday expenses will follow me to my grave.

Thank you. If this misses the waste basket, I will come again next week.

A Child that Mopes Isn't a Well Child

—W. L. Hand.

A normal child wants to play. If the little one is sullen, lackadaisical and irritable, something is amiss. First off, the child needs a laxative. But mothers are so often disappointed when the favorite laxative fails to restore the youngster's spirits. This is because there is a bilious condition usually and the laxative used hasn't the needed effect on a sluggish liver.

My preparation, Liv-o-lax, was made to answer this frequent need. While it can be used in place of calomel, to relieve liver and bowel congestion, it is just as pleasant to take as any of the usual children's laxatives. It isn't a bit drastic, causes no distress and the children love to take it.

Liv-o-lax is available at your own drug store and is just as effective for adults as it is for children.

AFTER AN OPERATION

Mrs. Wilke Couldn't Get Back Her Strength Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rochester, Minnesota.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days' time I began to feel better. In two weeks I knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. I will give any information I possibly can."—Mrs. JAMES WILKE, 833 E. Center Street, Rochester, Minn.

Odd Superstition
An old superstition in Iceland is that every bride must invite all her friends to a dinner in her own home, and every article of food must be prepared by the bride herself. If she is successful in pleasing her guests she not only receives praise for her own skill, but helps along her younger sisters, who are then assumed to be equally good at cooking, and consequently have a much better chance of getting married.

Tricked
Getting the idea from seeing a vaudeville performer swallow swords, Jacob Zlenke, of Chicago, bought ten butcher knives and essayed to swallow them one by one. One was enough. It stuck. "I'll bet there's a trick to it," Zlenke wrote on a pad for one of the hospital nurses.

An Easter Message of Hope

"CHRIST is risen!" is the regular salutation all over eastern Christendom on Easter Sunday morning. It is the re-echo of the wonder cry of the first Christians as the realization at last forced itself upon them that the impossible had happened; Christ is risen! They had found it such a bitter thing to lay their beloved Master dead in the grave. Death always is bitter, usually almost impossible to bear up against.

Of His death the disciples were certain; of their grief there could be no doubt. Every one of us who owns a little plot of holy ground, consecrated to us by what we could see through tears of an open grave of falling clouds of earth going to earth, can sympathize with them. We know what the blackness of that darkness is, from whence there comes no response to our cry.

"Christ is risen!" The message came on the first day of the week, with the risen Savior Himself as its proof. Sorrow fled, the blackness of the grave was changed into brightness of joy unspeakable; "Christ is risen!" The grave had not imprisoned Him! Death had not conquered Him! His own pierced body was there again, ended with thrilling life once more. Ask His mother. She knows her Son. In the ecstasy of love, too full of joy even to wonder, hear her answer—"He is risen, indeed!"

Al, Christ is risen! And the grave has not hurt Him. Nay, He is the more glorious for it! His body is now superior to time and space, or to any of their laws; just as the Easter lily is superior to the bulb who hid in the ground; or, as the waving corn field is better than the bare grain in the sack.

And the loved ones, even the little ones we laid with such sorrow in the grave, they, too, will rise in like manner, all the better; by, ever so much better for the death which makes the resurrection possible! Just as we, too, taken apart, bit by bit, by the tender alchemy of the grave, as the watchmaker takes apart a watch, shall be put together again, purified, glorified, to go on forever, and forevermore.

Easter Day

HE churches are filled with flowers. Many people are wearing flowers.

The church bells are ringing, people are hurrying to church in a new, vigorous, glad spirit. The choirs are singing. The congregations sing, too.

"Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia!" The air still holds some of the winter's chill within it, but there is, too, the warmth of spring to be felt.

Everyone feels it. Everyone is smiling, happy, gay.

They are wishing each other "A Happy Easter."

Children have been given gay Easter eggs and they have been given cho-late bunnies with sweet chocolate expressions on their little chocolate faces; even their ears are alert in their chocolate fashion.

New clothes are being worn. Or old ones are spruced up. There is new life, new courage, new joyousness in the air.

"Alleluia, alleluia, alleluia!"

Risen With Christ

It is not possible to be risen with Christ and yet remain on the level of those who neither know nor serve Him.

Betty Needed the Money

By MARTHA WILLIAMS
(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"If only we could have a car!" Dalry murmured plaintively, her head a little aside. She knew the pose became her wonderfully, hence it was one of her favorite phrases.

Downright Betty, her common-sense, commonplace sister, stamped an impatient foot as she swung back: "Well, you know we can't. Where'd we keep it if we had it? On the mantelpiece, or in the pantry? The hall is too cluttered to hold even an extra whip—"

"Betty, stop! You hurt!" Dalry moaned. "It is certainly bad enough to be a pauper, without having it thrown in your face—for nothing at all."

"If you don't like the estate in life whereunto you were born—get out and hustle! I'm going to," said the undaunted Betty.

Then to be sure Dalry stared. "Hustle?" she repeated. "Now, what can a girl do—I mean if she's a born lady?" Of course, common sense has heaps of chances.

"And I'm going to grab off a few of them," Betty retorted stoutly. "You've heard of the cigar factory they're starting up in town? My name is down plain for a job in it. Piece work, they say, so until I go there I'm practicing all on my little lonesome, and mean to stick hard at it till I get somewhere."

"What good will that be, I'd like to know?" from Dalry, almost fearfully.

"Betty flung back with a frown: "Only this—all comes have to learn the trade—at five dollars a week, while learning. I'm going there cigar-perfect—so I'll be head of the class, with twenty-five or more coming to me Saturdays in about three shakes of a dead lamb's tail."

"H-how c-can you be so—so vulgar?" Dalry sobbed. "And—you can't do it. How ever will you get to town, when we live so far out?"

"By riding the ponies my mother gave me—my two stout legs," said Betty. "We may be too far out to take boarders—folk born to board want everything soft. I'm another sort. Walking three miles a day don't scare the one bit—I rather like the thought—and I know I'll love the money. Only think, Dal, if the factory lasts, by next year I may manage a car—got arrears of taxes in the way this season—but you know we're bound to keep a roof, even if we live on ashake and butter-milk."

"You—don't actually think you ever could buy a car?" from Dalry, breathlessly.

Betty giggled. "I learned the multiplication table backward," she said. "Suppose I average even twenty a week—see if you can do the trick of multiplying twenty by fifty-two."

"But—but all our friends will cut us dead—if you go mixing in with low-down people," Dalry was almost hysterical, despite the hope of the car.

Betty's mouth set grimly. "We won't lose a single friend," she asserted stoutly. "Maybe because we have so few to lose. Arch Trent may feel he can't take you to any more dances, but that will be better for you, and besides save slipper bills. Now that our rich kin are out of mourning, you'll have no more windfalls to party fancy. They'll feel they've been so generous they—needn't think of us again for years."

"You are spiteful—I hate you!" Dalry sobbed tempestuously.

Betty snatched her upright, shook her soundly and sprawled her on the old dog couch that was always her own haven in deep trouble. She loved her pretty, foolish sister, but not as she loved independence. And they were spending the very last installment of her dead brother's insurance; there was nothing beside it save the small, comfortable home and the ground about it. Six months of hard, steady thinking made it plain to Betty that she must have work outside her home. There was not room for gardening, poultry, or even bee-keeping; besides, she had no money to make a start at anything. She had been brought up in the old fashion: "To pray to God, to love man, to knit and sew." But so far no man worth loving had crossed her path—knitting and sewing were at the finger-tips of all the women she knew. So her assets narrowed to a stout heart, a clear head and high temper—perfectly controlled. Also and further, she did not know how to be afraid. That is to say, for herself—Dalry was different. She was full of a soft stubbornness that was like loose sand. No use to ask a promise of her—when she would, she wouldn't, and there you were. Betty's prayer for her was a husband, able to master and maintain her, but wishing for him was like sighing for the man in the moon.

Betty made good, and a little more in her first working fortnight. Thereby, of course, she got the envious ill-will of the best. Not one of them went higher under five weeks, and even the three who did it made nothing like so much. Piece work, you see, demands and rewards deft diligence. Betty was deft diligence incarnate—first at her machine, last to leave it—ready to volunteer for overtime in any emergency. Naturally the manager rated her above ruble; injudiciously he held her up as a model for those less apt. So the rancor against her throve, deepening daily, but it lacked edge until one wildly stormy evening, when Manager Sefton called a cab, ostensibly for himself, and took Betty home, asking another girl to ride with them, but having his invitation stiffly declined. Betty thanked him brightly, but did not ask him in; she knew better than he how perilous it would be to her to have him linger. But wise as she was in the ways of the female Egyptians, she did not dream to what lengths their malice could go.

After a month of surface calm, cool avoidance of Betty and significant looks if Sefton even spoke to her, came the explosion—rather the bomb—a letter from the parent company bidding Sefton dismiss Betty or face a strike of all the rest. She was a trouble-maker, said the complaints—spy, tale-bearer, general blot on the factory landscape. The workers, by this time fairly competent, had chosen their hour well—when the factory was snowed under with waiting orders and no other workers in sight.

Sefton, greatly troubled, told Betty the whole truth. That was wise—nothing else would have availed. She listened, never batting an eye. Her cheeks flushed slightly, her head went up like a deer's. "Thank you, I'll go without a word," she said clearly.

"You will not!" boomed a big man she had never seen before, who was ambushed at the door of the inner office. "I know the truth," he went on. "Sefton tried to save you by telling the truth. Sooner than you shall be driven from work by your own competence the factory will shut down. How do you think the stockholders, the town that gave us the building will like to see that? Of course, if it comes to a showdown, they'll be taken care of, but with this tale told in print it will be many a day before any other enterprise ventures to risk time and money here. Come along with me—I'm going out to tell those girls all this. I want them to have the lesson of their lives—that stupid, malicious treachery doesn't pay."

"Go tell them, but I can't come," said Betty, her eyes suddenly wet. "You see, I'm so sorry for them that they were little enough to undertake a thing so spiteful."

There was no strike. A subdued and fearful force lost all its bravado as the big man boomed at it. Especially when it ended with the announcement: "Hereafter Mr. Sefton goes back to the main office—Miss Betty Craig will take his place."

She held it just a year, for the big man, impressed by her ability, selfishly decided he needed her in his home. There, as Mrs. Elbert James, she helps him and his money to do a lot of good, especially for women in need of work and of better working conditions. Sefton went back to the factory rather willingly. He had seen Dalry on his visits of inspection, she having at last agreed to stay in the office with her sister. She would be wholly happy as Mrs. Sefton if it were not that she feels Betty has the money and consequence that should really be her own.

Better Meals Result of New Range in the Gallery

When the yacht puts out to sea or the dining car starts on its run, it is nowadays able to cook more and better food in less space than formerly because of the ingenious alcohol range in the gallery. The range has a vertical broiler which heats to a temperature of 450 degrees and which will broil thick steak in ten minutes. A thermometer on the outside tells when the temperature is high enough to do the required work.

Each unit of the stove can be used separately, so that the camper or the automobilist can take as large a stove as he desires, and the yacht can be equipped with one that will just fill the space devoted to it in the gallery. The Pullman stove, as adopted by one road, has five compartments, including a plate warmer, and occupies a space in the gallery 18 by 27 inches.

The burners make the alcohol into gas before it is lighted and the fuel consumption is reduced from 25 to 40 per cent below that of ordinary alcohol stoves. Heretofore practically the only way steaks could be cooked in such limited quarters as those of a dining-car gallery was with a hot plate over an alcohol flame, and that was never satisfactory.

From Rose to Rose

A member of a diplomatic corps tells a story of a Persian who came to this country on a special mission. Among those who entertained him was a wealthy man who invited the Oriental to his country house. The morning of the guest's arrival the host visited his apartment, and was astonished to see him hopping about the floor in the strangest way imaginable. The host ventured to ask the reason for this curious action. The Persian replied: "You see, this carpet is green, with pink roses here and there. Green is a sacred color with us, so I am obliged to hop from rose to rose. It is good exercise, but rather fatiguing."

It has been estimated that the increase of London's population during and since the World War is no less than 600,000. Vast numbers were attracted from the provinces by the lure of plentiful employment and high wages. Now, having acquired the taste for London, they do not return, even though employment is not now plentiful and wages are not what they were.

The cow milked well the next morning and Dodd recovered a battered tin pail and a torn hat from the stall occupied by the mule.

Mighty Waves Seen

Waves of extraordinary height, mis-called "tidal waves," are sometimes encountered at sea or along the coasts. They are due either to earthquakes under the sea or to a combination of several ordinary waves, which if a heavy sea be running, is sufficient to account for a wave of unusual height. Such a one was recently encountered by the British steamship Maine, near the southern edge of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. The wind was rising after a hard blow and an ugly swell about 25 feet high was running. Then a huge wave was seen towering above the other seas, a mile away, and rushing toward the ship. It swept the vessel from end to end, and was estimated by the officers to have been from 50 to 60 feet in height.—Boston Globe.

DAIRY FACTS

SPRING CLEANING IS FAVORED FOR BARN

Now is the time to prepare to fight the fly by giving the dairy barn a thorough cleaning.

The dairy barn is supposed to be clean at all times, but the spring always finds the ceiling and corners covered with cobwebs and considerable dust and dirt. Right now, says S. W. Mead, assistant dairy husbandman of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, while you have the time before the spring plowing, is the time to brush the walls and ceiling and then give them good coats of whitewash.

The following mixture will give good results:

Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water. Cover during the process to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve and add a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water. Then add three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in while hot. Next add one pound of clear glue dissolved in cold water hung over a fire. A half-pound of whiting will give it luster. To the above mixture add five gallons of hot water and leave standing for a few days. Cover to keep out dirt. Applied hot a pint of this wash will cover a square yard.

The whitewash may be put on with a whitewash brush, but can be applied to half the time and just as well by the use of a spray pump. The spraying outfit used for your fruit trees will do, but must be cleaned thoroughly after using.

The floors, mangers and gutters of the dairy barn should be scraped free of all dirt, washed and scrubbed, after which, when dry, they should be sprayed with a 2 to 3 per cent solution of some good coal-tar disinfectant. Be sure to soak well all cracks and crevices.

The disinfecting should be done at least once each month and the whitewashing every three or four months. This will go a long way toward discouraging the fly and will also help to prevent the spread of disease.

There are, of course, many other means of controlling the fly, such as carting the manure away from the barn each day to as great a distance as may be practical. This is very important, especially during the warm months. Spraying the cows and also the walls and floors with a good fly repellent will help. No one thing can be said to control the fly except sanitation, and there we have the keynote to the whole situation. Flies breed in filth.

Distinct Advantages in Having Cows "Face In"

There are several distinct advantages in having the cows face toward the center of the stable. The animals are more conveniently fed—which is, perhaps, the biggest item. Cows on either side can be served in less time with silage or grain supplied from a push cart or feed carrier, operated in a central feeding alley, than when the push cart must be taken clear around the outside of the stable where the space between the stanchions and walls is apt to be more cramped than is the case with the central alley. Hay, also, can be distributed with less litter and dust.

Next, perhaps, in importance is the fact that where the cows face in there is usually better light for milking through much of the year. Where stables are electrically lighted this factor is not of so much importance. Still, an abundance of natural light in the vicinity of the milk pail is always of advantage. In addition to the factors indicated, is the further one that a barn arranged in this fashion always looks cleaner and more attractive than is the case where the central passageway is flanked on either side by manure gutters. Furthermore, it can be built a couple of feet narrower without interfering with its utility or efficiency.

Good Practice to Teach Calf to Eat Some Grain

It is a good practice in teaching calves to eat grain, to begin by feeding them some ground corn or sifted ground oats. If this is done for a few days, gradually increasing the amount fed, they may be fed whole corn or oats or a mixture of both, this mixture equal parts by weight. Many good feeders give this mixture of whole grain until the calves are seven or eight months of age, then change back to ground feed, claiming that an eight-months calf does not chew its food as well as a younger one does, and loses a considerable percentage of whole grain which passes through it undigested.

Cow Is Best Money Maker

Put the cow to work and she is the most efficient money-maker on the farm today. A cow producing 25 pounds of 4 per cent milk daily makes one pound of butterfat a day worth about 50 cents. This cow needs rations and hay and silage which should not cost more than 15 cents daily, leaving 35 cents daily above the cost of her feed. Where can you invest your time and efforts to better advantage? Give your cows a chance. They will do better when properly fed.

Early Chicks Are Most Profitable

Practical Suggestions Regarding Successful Feeding and Raising.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Early hatched chicks are by far the most profitable, whether grown to maturity for laying or sold as poultry flesh, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and the following suggestions in regard to the successful raising and feeding of young chicks have been found to be practical.

The brooder house and stove heater which are used for caring for the chicks during the first few weeks of their lives must be in working order before the chicks arrive. The most common style of brooding is the use of a stove brooder in a colony house, keeping from 850 to 500 chicks in a flock in each house and placing the houses about 150 feet apart on a good grass range. A house 10 by 14 feet makes a suitable colony house which can be readily moved if built on runners. Chicks brooded early in the season will do better in a large house, about 10 by 20, partitioned so that one side is used for a brooder stove and the other for a cool exercising room. Wire netting should be placed in the corners of the brooder house to prevent the chicks from huddling and crowding in the corners.

Feed Chicks Sparingly

Chicks should not be fed for the first 36 to 48 hours, after which they should be supplied regularly four or five times daily with easily digested feed which contains little waste material. They should be fed sparingly until about the fifth day, when they can be put on full rations. An excellent feed can be made of sterile eggs taken from the incubator, boiled for 15 minutes, chopped, and mixed with a dry mash of equal parts of cracked meal, bran and cornmeal, using a sufficient amount of the grain to make a dry, crumbly mixture. Dry rolled oats are excellent for chicks and can be used as one feed; the other two or three feeds being the commercial grains.

At two weeks of age the chicks can be given a dry mash in a hopper, consisting of four parts, by weight, of rolled oats, two parts bran, two parts cornmeal, one part high-grade meat scrap, one part middlings and one-half part dried buttermilk. Commercial chick feed should be fed three times daily in addition to the dry mash. Milk is an excellent feed for chicks and should be provided either as a liquid or in the dry form to secure the best growth.

Feed Coarse Grain

When the chicks are one month old, they should be fed a coarser or intermediate chick grain, and at about two months of age the scratch feed can be changed to equal parts of wheat and cracked corn, fed two or three times a day.

Work With Pest Poisons Seen in Motion Picture

"Poison," a one-reel educational motion picture visualizing the activities of the insecticide and fungicide board, has been recently released by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The film shows the numerous ways in which the American farmer, the greatest user of chemicals in the world, employs poisons of various sorts to destroy insect pests and diseases which attack his crops and live stock, and how the insecticide and fungicide board protects the public against fraudulent materials by examining all insecticide and fungicide offered for sale in interstate shipments. Various laboratory scenes illustrate the chemical analyses given the materials, and field scenes show how the worth of the "poison" is determined by actual test.

The seizure of "fake" materials, which not only fail to "cure" but often cause serious losses by actually injuring plant or animal, and the punishment of their purveyors, are also included in the film, which sounds a warning to users of insecticides and fungicides to beware of untested poisons and to use only tried and proved articles.

"Poison" will be circulated through the educational film service of the department and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods or may be purchased at the laboratory charge.

Farmers Are Beginning to Find Value of Sudan

Farmers are just beginning to realize the value of sudan grass for feed. Some broadcast or put in with a drill, about twenty pounds to the acre, and don't put it in too deep—about one inch is right. This will make a fine temporary pasture for hogs. It keeps coming up just like alfalfa does, and the more it is eaten down the more it starts up. You can turn in on it about the middle of June and from then on until frost in the fall, it gives a wonderful amount of feed. Put in with a lister and cultivated as corn. It stands more readily and makes good hay for horses and cattle. Use about two or three pounds to the acre. It makes more hay and better hay and is a sure yielder than any other quick crop you can use. It will cut from two to four crops a season.

Sudan grass being an annual and having fibrous roots similar to wheat or oats, is as easily controlled and eradicated as millet. Sudan is a good seed crop, too.

Iowa State College Girls Organize Club

Work Deals With Practical Phases of Farm and Home.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A college girls' club has been formed by former members of the farm boys and girls' 4-H clubs, now attending Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. These young women, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, assisted in many ways at the recent short course held by the Iowa college for club girls from the counties. A committee of the college club met the young visitors at the railroad station on their arrival for the short course. Another committee showed the girls the interesting places on the campus during their stay. And forty members of the college club served the junior banquet given for short-course students by the college. Members of the organization met once each quarter for dinner together and to make plans for welcoming all new club girls who may come to the college.

4-H clubs are organized and conducted for farm boys and girls, ranging in age from about ten to twenty years, by extension workers. The work of the clubs, dealing with practical phases of farming and home making, is planned to train the mind or head of the boy or girl to think, plan, and reason; to train the hands to be skillful; to attain the best possible health for efficiency and enjoyment; and to train the heart to be kindly and sympathetic toward the work and toward associates; hence the term 4-H, or head, hands, health, and heart clubs.

Discover More Cars and Trucks Owned by Farmer

The United States Department of Agriculture recently discovered that 923 farmers in 1917 owned 1,000 automobiles and motor trucks.

It was shown furthermore that nine-tenths of these cars were farm business cars. Two-thirds were of the low-priced type and most of them were several years old. About one-fourth of the number were motor trucks, and the fancy roadsters, coupes and sedans composed less than 10 per cent of the total.

A few narrow-minded individuals still are howling that the farmer is doing too much joyriding. That he should lock his car up in the barn and walk and enjoy some real prosperity after a few years, but only a few are howling in that key. Time is just as important to the man on the farm as it is to the man in the shop. He buys a motor because it saves time in cutting hay. His binder is faster than the cradle, and likewise his motorcar is faster than his team and his truck can haul more in less time than he formerly hauled with his horses. It's too bad, of course, that the motorcar can be used for pleasure occasionally. It gives the hovers an opportunity to howl, but let 'em howl. If using a motorcar for pleasure occasionally is a misfortune, we're glad to have it to contend with.

Good Demand for Higher Grades of Beef Cattle

Cattle feeders who finish on grain for market fare very well during the past year, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Prior to the war cattle ranging in weight from 1,200 to 1,350 pounds were about 17 per cent above the price of range cattle. In 1922 cattle of this weight sold about 36 per cent above the price of range cattle. In 1922 good to prime cattle were about 50 per cent above the price of feeder steers, whereas in September, 1923, they ranged to about 70 per cent above. The high industrial activity has given a good market for good beef and has stimulated a demand for the higher grades of cattle which come finished from the feed lots of the corn belt.

Farm Hints

Ice houses are scarce, but the need for them is boundless.

Raising good calves properly is one way to build up a good dairy.

Two slogans for the live stock man: "Feed or get fooled," and "Keep the best; sell the rest."

Get the spray outfit ready and pay particular attention to having the valves work properly.

It would appear that big dealers in farm products have been better sold on the co-operative idea than are many farmers.

Better give the grass a good start before turning out to pasture. Early grass has little strength, and early pasturing kills it.

Sweet clover, five years ago considered a troublesome weed by most farmers, now stands ahead of alfalfa in acreage in Ohio.

"Better late than never," does not apply to spraying for peach leaf curl. Get busy with the spray when the buds first start to swell.

"Hogs like to roll around in the mud," some opponents of sanitation for hogs say. Children would too if parents didn't convert that natural inclination.

X-Rays Made by Glowworms

That properties peculiar to X-rays may be contained in the light emitted by glowworms is the opinion of some scientists, expressed in recent interviews. A Japanese has experimented with three hundred of the worms and their rays, altered through cardboard and copper plates, were said to have shown elements closely resembling those given off by various radioactive minerals.—Popular Mechanics.

Woman Raises Turkeys

When ill health caused Miss Margaret Maloney of Concord, Mass., to abandon her ambition for a medical career some years ago, she took to raising turkeys as a diversion. Now she has become a big shipper of the birds, has originated several kinds of turkey foods, and has written a book for the guidance of those who aspire to raise turkeys.

Ford Steel Body Truck $490

f. o. b. Detroit

Why Commercial Users Prefer the Ford

There is much significance in the fact that more than 75% of all commercial cars of one-ton capacity or less in the United States are Fords.

This overwhelming preference for Ford haulage units has its basis in the low cost of Ford transportation, the rugged construction of the truck itself, and its unusual adaptability to every line of industry.

Mechanical excellence, simplicity of design and ample power are further factors that have contributed to the popularity of the Ford One-Ton Worm Drive Truck.

The Ford One-Ton Truck equipped with an all-steel body and cab is now available as a complete unit, priced at $490 f. o. b. Detroit. Screen sides and canopy roof that may be easily fitted to this unit are supplied at small additional cost.

Would You Destroy These?

Mining, Manufacturing and Agriculture are the basic industries of the nation. The progress and prosperity, yes the very existence of each and all of these, hinge on adequate transportation—of which the railroads furnish the greater part.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

A loss of 20 per cent in the oats of the state is one of the results of the freeze which was finally determined on April 1. Practically all Fall-sown oats were killed and none were re-sown. About the usual amount of Spring sowing was indulged in. The present condition of oats is 58 per cent of normal, a very low condition due in most instances to poor stands left where oats were not entirely killed.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Passmore, Atlanta tourists, were held up and robbed near Scottsboro. The couple had stopped about three miles out from town near Dry Creek bridge on the Lee highway to inquire from the negroes the way to Scottsboro. After giving the directions, one of the negroes drew a gun and demanded money. Mr. Passmore handed over $86 and a watch, he reported to authorities.

Demand for the city of Montgomery to purchase additional fire equipment, increase its fire department personnel, removal of fire headquarters to a fire-proof building and discontinuance of the practice of responding to alarms in the suburbs unless two additional trucks are purchased and placed in service, was made by the Southeastern Fire Underwriters Association in a letter to Mayor W. A. Gunter, Jr.

Col. Hartley A. Moon, adjutant general, announces the organization of the Thirty-first Divisional Signal company, in Mobile, one of only 18 similar companies of its kind in the United States. This organization will serve as the signal unit of the Thirty-first Infantry Division, composed of National Guard troops of the states of Alabama, Florida and Louisiana.

At a meeting of prominent women of Gadsden with city and county officials, plans were discussed for the establishment of a detention home or house of refuge. Conviction of young girls on vagrancy charges and their sentences to serve in the county jail has brought out the need for some other place in which to detain these girls.

D. A. Brumfield, engineer in charge and a party of 14 to whom have been assigned the work of surveying the route of the new highway from the Montgomery County line to Fort Deposit, a distance of some 13 miles. This highway will be of gravel and will connect the road from Fort Deposit to Greenville with the city of Montgomery.

The work of pouring the first concrete arches that support the highway across the main dam at Muscle Shoals was successfully completed during last week. These arches are 32 feet wide and the span is 38 feet, each arch containing 425 cubic yards of concrete. Complete forms for four of these arches and centers for 12 more are in place.

Validity of a $750,000 bond issue by the city of Dothan for the purpose of erecting a power plant was upheld by the Alabama Supreme Court when a decision was rendered in the case of D. C. Carmichael, et al. vs. City of Dothan, affirming the judgment for the Houston circuit court, from which the case was appealed.

A committee on boll weevil control for Margego county to cooperate with farmers in purchasing calcium arsenate and blackstrap molasses is announced as follows: Judge William Cunningham, Sam Boozer and J. L. Lawson. The committee will assist the National Boll Weevil Control association in fighting the cotton pest.

The people of Opelika are happy over the announcement of the building of a new union depot. Opelika's fondest dream for years is to be realized, according to positive assurances made by railroad officials.

Montgomery is soon to have more traffic signal lamps installed. Seventeen additional corners have been selected for operation of the new lights.

Rebecca Glass, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Glass, of Greenville, sustained a broken hip when she fell from a tree at her home.

Gov. W. W. Brandon will make the Memorial Day address in Troy this year, April 28. The Albany-Decatur Chamber of Commerce gave a private picture show, showing the evils of bad roads to a number of local ministers and other invited guests at the Princess theater.

Gamboges Panola, two-year-old Jersey state champion milk and butter fat producer in the two-year-old class, died at the home of her owner, J. F. Conway, of Taylorville, near Tuscaloosa. The animal was valued at $500 and there was $250 insurance on her life.

A recent ruling of the Walker county road commissioners will probably result in the town of Dora having a good road from the business section of the city limits to connect with the county road. It is said the county will give the gravel to connect the business section to the main highway.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company will rearrange and remodel its building in Montgomery and erect an additional building on the lot adjacent. A new switchboard for the operators will be provided. The estimated cost of the improvement is $100,000.

Building permits to the amount of $192,385 were issued by the Bessemer building inspector for that city during the month of March.

VARIOUS MEATS AND VEGETABLES FOR STEWS

Much Depends on Season and on What is on Hand in Making Irish Stews.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Irish stew" usually consists of beef, lamb, or mutton, with a flavoring of onion and a good deal of boiled potato in large-sized pieces. By using other combinations of vegetables and different meats, a large variety of stews can be made, according to what happens to be in season or on hand. It is best to brown the meat in all cases before simmering it, and the vegetables have a better flavor as a rule if they are cooked separately from the meat and added to it shortly before serving. In practically all the southern stews and gumbos the vegetables are fried first in butter or fat and then simmered in very little water until tender. Onion is usually cooked with the meat after being fried a few minutes. The directions for making a stew may be found among many other recipes, in Farmers' Bulletin 1324, which may be obtained as long as the supply lasts, by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Brown Stew of Lamb or Mutton.

Cut lean lamb or mutton into small pieces, season these with salt and pepper, dredge them in flour, and brown on all sides in hot fat. Remove to a saucpan and half cover the meat with hot water. Let simmer until tender. Thicken the broth with a little flour which has been browned slightly in an equal amount of fat. Serve with plain boiled or baked potatoes and a green salad.

Vegetable Combinations.

If a combination with vegetables is liked, these should be cut into small pieces and added in ample time for them to be thoroughly cooked without the necessity of actually boiling the stew. Starchy materials such as rice or macaroni should be cooked separately, although potatoes cut small can be cooked satisfactorily with the meat at the simmering temperature.

The variations which can be made upon the plain stew are suggested by the following list of vegetables and seasonings, which may be added singly or in various combinations: String beans, lima beans, cabbage, carrots, celery, okra, onions, peas, peppers, potatoes, tomatoes, and turnips; curry powder, celery seed, garlic, thyme, marjoram, parsley, bay leaves, lemon juice and capers.

PRACTICAL PLAN TO LESSEN GAS BILLS

Several Things Can Be Cooked in Oven at Once

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The gas oven consumes more cubic feet of gas per hour than any of the other burners. One way to reduce the cost of this gas, when it is necessary to bake or roast, the United States Department of Agriculture points out, is to cook several things in the oven at once. This can be done without appreciably lessening the amount of heat received by the principal article to be cooked. For example, when roasting meat, the potatoes may be browned in the pan with the meat or baked in their skins; or a vegetable such as tomatoes, eggplant, or celery, may be scalloped. Apples may be baked for breakfast, and a baked pudding may be prepared. Possibly there will be room in the oven for cooking two desserts at once or for cooking them successively during the time required for baking the meat. Corn pudding, as an accompaniment to meat, is a suitable dish for baking while the oven is in use.

Cakes, as a rule, cannot be so successfully handled as other foods, when several things are being cooked in the oven. Frequent opening and shutting the oven door may cause them to fall, and most cakes are baked at a much lower temperature than meats. The maintenance of exact temperatures when baking bread is also important, and if anything else is put in the oven at the same time it must be second in consideration to the bread. An oven thermometer is practically a necessity in such a case. A little practice and good judgment, however, will enable one to choose among many foods which might just as well be cooked in the oven as any other way, utilizing the oven fuel to the fullest extent.

To Wash Silk Crepe

To wash silk crepes or georgettes use warm water and white soap. Do not rub, but squeeze the garment through good suds. Rinse several times, iron when partly dry on the wrong side and crosswise of the material, stretching a little as you iron.

Clean Clotheslines

Any housewife who has trouble with pulleys lines marking the clothes on account of being left out in all kinds of weather can avoid this by running a good, strong cord through the pulleys and taking in the lines as soon as the clothes are dry.

Ideal Polishing Cloth

Velvet is the ideal polishing cloth and will outshine chamgo leather or linen. It works like magic on brass, silver, shoes, furniture and floors.

BOSTON BROWN BREAD SHOULD BE STEAMED

Excellent Substitute When Tired of Other Kinds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When tired of other kinds of bread, why not have "Boston brown bread" for a change? The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following recipe for making it:

Boston Brown Bread.

2 cupsful graham flour 1 1/2 to 2 cupsful sour milk 1 cupful cornmeal 1 tablespoonful salt 1 teaspoonful soda 1/2 cupful sirup or molasses 1/2 cupful seeded raisins

Sift together the dry materials, returning the bran to the flour mixture. Add together the sweetening, shortening and one and one-half cupsful of sour milk, or buttermilk, and blend with the flour mixture, to which the raisins have been added. If necessary, add a little more milk until a thick batter is formed. Beat well and place in greased tin, such as coffee or baking powder cans, filling not more than two-thirds full. Place cover on cans and steam three hours. It is excellent when baked about five hours in a fireless cooker, especially when a hot radiator is used to keep the heat at sufficiently high pitch. If no radiator is used, the bread should be steamed one hour before putting into the fireless cooker.

Rye flour, rye meal or home-ground wheat meal may be used in place of graham flour.

In place of sour milk and soda one may use one and one-half cupsful of sweet milk and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. If real molasses is used, one-quarter teaspoonful of soda should be added to neutralize the acid of the molasses.

Ease in Footwear Quite Important to Everyone

Shoes that let the feet maintain their normal position in standing and walking keep their attractive appearance and serviceability longer than those with heels too high or too small, says the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, in discussing the economical use of leather. High heels have a tendency to become worn down on one side, which causes excessive strain on the seams and uneven wear on both the soles and uppers, as well as being a constant menace to the health of the wearer.

Feet that have become distorted by improperly fitting shoes may need remodeling by a series of gradual changes. The habitual wearer of high heels probably will find low heels uncomfortable for a week or so, because such heels bring into service muscles that have long been inactive, while relieving the strain on others trained to balance the body in an unnatural position. Likewise it may be more satisfactory to go by easy stages from a narrow, pinching toe to one that will permit the foot to spread out to its natural size.

Make Mop Handle Secure

When your mop drops out of the handle turn on the hot water and let it run on the part which screws into the mop. The water makes the wood swell and the handle is secure in the mop and you can proceed with your cleaning.

A Homemade Shoe Cleaner

One of the most satisfactory shoe scrapers on which to clean shoes before entering the house is a scrubbing brush nailed securely to the back porch.

Lesson for April 20

ELISHA: TEACHER AND STATES-MAN

LESSON TEXT.—II Kings 6:15-23. GOLDEN TEXT.—"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with Good."—Rom. 12:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—God Caring for His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Elisha's Goodness to His Enemies.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—How to Turn Enemies Into Friends. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—What Elisha Meant to His Nation.

I. Elisha, Elisha's Successor (I Kings 19:15-21; II Kings 2:2-15.)

1. Elisha's Anointing (I Kings 19:15-21). In obedience to the Lord's command, Elisha went forth from his hiding place in Horeb to anoint Elisha as prophet. While Elisha was plowing with oxen Elisha passed by and cast his mantle upon him.

2. His Training (II Kings 2:2-8). Elisha came into the life of Elisha in the field, where he called him forth from the plow, and there was thenceforth real friendship between them, such that Elisha clung to his master to the very last, in spite of three urgent requests for him to remain behind.

3. Elisha's Double Portion (II Kings 2:12-15).

(1) Elisha's cry (v. 12). "The chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." This implies that Elisha was the true national defense.

(2) Elisha takes his place (v. 13). The taking of Elisha's mantle indicates his assumption of his place as a prophet.

(3) Elisha's spirit upon Elisha (vv. 14, 15). This is proven by the use of his power to divide the Jordan. Also it is proven by the testimony of the sons of the prophets.

II. Elisha's Ministry (II Kings 8:10).

1. The Trenches Filled With Water (Chap. 3:16-20). Jehoram, in alliance with the king of Judah, went against the Moabites. His army was in great straits for lack of water. When they appealed to Elisha, he bade them show their faith by digging trenches in desert soil. The Lord sent water to fill the trenches.

2. Increase of the Widow's Oil (Chap. 4:1-7). This woman's husband had died, leaving a debt, and the creditor was about to make bondmen of her two sons. Elisha caused the scant supply of the widow's oil to be so increased that she sold enough to pay the debt.

3. The Shunammite's Son Restored (Chap. 4:8-37). Because of hospitality shown Elisha, he sought to help his hostess by promising that the Lord would give her a child. The joy brought by the fulfillment of the prophet's announcement was short-lived, for while yet but a lad he was taken away by death. In her sorrow she went to Elisha and he restored the child's life.

4. Heals Deadly Pottages (Chap. 4:38-41). In time of famine they made a vegetable soup from whatever growing plants they could find. By mistake a poisonous plant had been gathered. By putting meal into the pot, the soup was made healthful.

5. Fed One Hundred Men (Chap. 4:42-44). To the astonishment of his attendant, he fed one hundred men with twenty barley cakes and a sack of uncooked grain.

6. He Healed Naaman, the Leper (Chap. 5:1-10). At the instance of a captive Jewish maid, Naaman, the great Syrian general, was brought into touch with Elisha. Without even coming to see Naaman Elisha, through his servant, bade him dip seven times in the Jordan. He obeyed and was instantly healed.

7. Recovers the Lost Axe (Chap. 6:1-7). While the sons of the prophets were cutting timber to enlarge their quarters, the head of a borrowed axe, which had been lost in the muddy waters. When shown the place Elisha cast a stick into the water and the axe floated to the surface.

III. Elisha's Heavenly Defenders (II Kings 6:8-23).

This shows the secret of Elisha's power.

1. The Syrian King Sorely Troubled (vv. 8-12). The king directing warfare against Israel. He located camps so as to intercept Israel's army. Through Elisha God made known the enemy's movements (v. 9).

2. The Syrian King Tries to Trap Elisha, but, though surrounded by the Syrian army, a mightier host of heavenly defenders were round about him.

3. The Syrian Army Trapped, Elisha led the Syrian army into Samaria. He ordered that they should be fed and sent back to their land.

He Came to Save Sinners

When a prominent man dies, we are anxious to get his last words and acts. The last act of the Son of God was to save a sinner. That was a part of the glory of His death. He commenced His ministry by saving sinners, and ended it by saving this poor thief.—D. L. Moody.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Report of Dawes Committee on German Problem—Johnson Won't Quit.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE plan submitted is fair and reasonable in its nature, and, accepted, is likely to lead to ultimate and lasting peace. The rejection of these proposals by the German government means the deliberate choice of a continuance of economic demoralization, eventually involving her people in hopeless misery.

Regarding which, at the close of his opening letter, General Dawes submitted to the reparations commission a long-awaited report of the committee of experts which he headed. At the same time the report of the second committee, on German contributions, was presented. Both documents must be considered by the reparations commission before the government can act on them.

The Dawes report is a triumph of common sense, skillful adjustment and diplomatic wording. As the chairman said: "It must be considered not as a list of penalties but as suggestions for assisting the economic recovery of all European peoples and laying upon a new period of happiness and prosperity unimagined by the world." He declares Germany's production will enable her to meet her own requirements and to make payments for reparations account from taxes, railroads and industrial debentures. 1,000,000,000 gold marks the first year, 1,200,000,000 the second year, 1,500,000,000 the third year, 2,000,000,000 the fourth year and 2,500,000,000 the fifth year and thereafter. This sum may be increased progressively in accordance with Germany's prosperity. German taxation must be at least as heavy as that of any of the other powers; her railway system should be converted into a joint stock company and mortgaged for 11,000,000,000 gold marks; her industries are expected to provide 5,000,000,000 gold marks, represented by first mortgage bonds, a gold bank of emission with headquarters in Berlin and under control of the allies, with a capital of 400,000,000 gold marks will redeem the rental mark in ten years. The allies are asked to restore to Germany free economic activity within her territory. This means the surrender by France of economic control of the Ruhr, though not necessarily the abandonment of military occupation. The experts say Germany will benefit from peace in the event of 800,000,000 gold marks, partly to capitalize the gold bank and partly to meet expenditures while the budget is being adjusted.

An external board of control, including an American, with allied, neutral and German members, is the experts' solution of the difficult problem of guaranteeing that Germany will execute the terms of eventual settlement under their plan. According to the report of the second committee, the Germans have 2,000,000,000 gold marks abroad, and loans are suggested for attracting the capital back to Germany.

ADVICE from Berlin say the Dawes report in some of its aspects is a bitter disappointment to the Germans; that the industrialists are that it is reflected as utterly unacceptable, and that the Nationalists look upon it as "a shameful attack on German sovereignty." Foreign Minister Stresemann is in an uncomfortable position because the figures proposed by the experts are far beyond the sums which he has insisted Germany is able to pay. Whether or not Germany will accept the report depends in large measure on the result of the forthcoming elections.

Though France may insist on some changes providing for continued control of the Ruhr, her acceptance of the report as a whole is forecast by the attitude of the inspired press of Paris. The Matin, for instance, says that to the questions "Can Germany pay?" and "How much can she pay each year?" the experts "have responded positively and clearly. They have said Germany can pay and how much she can pay annually. Not only did they answer the question but they have constructed a machine for payments which is a remarkable piece of clockwork. Tomorrow, if desired, the machine can be put into movement. If it is desired! That means Germany. What is Germany going to do? The only question for the reparations commission to put up to Germany is: demand a yes or no answer. And the only thing France has to say to her allies, 'Do you underwrite the work of your experts? If you underwrite it, will you help to make it work? Will your pressure go to the extent of using force?'"

The Temps thinks the Dawes plan offers the best basis of settlement of the reparations problem which has yet been proposed, and says the French army is ready to back it if necessary.

Great Britain is pleased with the Dawes report, generally speaking, but doubt is felt in London that France will agree to the abandonment of the Ruhr control and the four years' partial moratorium for Germany.

HUGO STINNES, the richest man in Germany, if not in the world, died Thursday after several operations in a Berlin hospital. He was only fifty-four years old, but through relentless methods and extraordinary business genius he had built up an enormous fortune that made him the most hated and most feared man in Europe. He took every possible advantage of the misfortunes of his country and his countrymen, and so far as is known never did anything to relieve the distress which soft-hearted Americans have given and are giving millions to alleviate. The passing of Stinnes may have some effect on the reception and success of the Dawes committee plan. It was believed in Germany that his peculiar talents qualified him especially to take a leading part in the economic readjustment of the country.

Stinnes has been a prominent member of the National party, which last week scored big victories over the Socialists and Communists in the Bavarian elections.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON of California sustained a severe blow in his fight for the Republican presidential nomination last Tuesday, when Illinois in its primary election gave President Coolidge a plurality of something like 130,000. Michigan and Nebraska Republicans also declared their preference for Coolidge emphatically, the three states adding at least 110 delegates to his column. Mr. Coolidge was thus placed within 22 votes of obtaining the nomination on the first ballot in the Cleveland convention, according to the estimates of his managers.

There were rumors that Senator Johnson was about ready to abandon his campaign to the extent of stopping his speechmaking, but this he denied in a formal statement, asserting he was "neither discouraged nor demoralized." Johnson had banked heavily on the three Middle West states that have so heartily turned him down. To date he has the 13 delegates from South Dakota, and LaFollette has Wisconsin's 28 votes. But the delegates already chosen instructed for Coolidge or favorable to him are 533 in number, and only 555 votes are necessary to choose. Twenty-one states still have to elect their delegates to the convention.

Michigan Democrats expressed a preference for Henry Ford over Senator Johnson. In Nebraska they chose an unstructured delegation; and Illinois their "regular" organization succeeded in preventing the election of any McAdoo delegates.

MUCH publicity having been given recently to the huge contributions made by Doheny, Sinclair and others to help pay the campaign expenses of both parties in the last presidential campaign, Senator Borah and some progressive Republicans and Democrats of both houses are preparing a law to put an end to excessive election expenditures and to secret and large contributions to party funds. They plan to have it passed at this session of congress so it will apply to this year's national election. It will provide for:

1. Limitation of the total campaign expenditure by any political party.
2. Limitation of the amount that may be contributed by any individual.
3. Publicity of contributions to liquidate deficits in party hands after an election, as is required of contributions before the election.
4. Penal punishment for violation of any provisions of the law.

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE has made public the radical platform which his Wisconsin delegates will submit for adoption at the Republican national convention. It includes all the senator's well-known ideas and is designed to appeal to almost all progressives or radicals. Its rejection by the convention is certain, and it is supposed the Wisconsin bunch will then withdraw and join with other elements in nominating LaFollette on a third ticket.

CHAIRMAN SMOOT of the senate finance committee introduced in the senate the tax reduction bill as approved by the committee. The measure carries the Mellon income tax rate schedule, the provision for a 25 per cent reduction in the income taxes of 1923 payable this year, a 25 per cent reduction in the income taxes to $10,000, and repeal or reduction of many of the excise taxes.

The senate committee toward the end of the week took up consideration of the soldiers' bonus bill and the indications were that it would be reported substantially as it was passed by the house.

SENATOR BURTON K. WHEELER, the implacable prosecutor in the senate investigation of the acts of Harry Daugherty, was indicted last week by a federal grand jury in Great Falls, Mont., on a charge of unlawfully receiving money as retainer fees to influence the issuance of oil and gas prospecting permits by the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office. With him were indicted Gordon Campbell and L. C. Stevenson, oil men. It was alleged the offense was committed after Wheeler was elected senator but before he was qualified for the office.

Wheeler rose to defend himself in the senate Wednesday, giving a brief outline of his career and his version of the transaction upon which the charges are based. He said he tried and won a case in Great Falls for the Gordon Campbell syndicate before he went to Washington and was paid $4,000 of his $10,000 fee, but that he had refused to appear for Campbell before any department of government in Washington. He declared the indictment was "part of one of the most damnable conspiracies ever started in the United States" and that the foreman of the grand jury which indicted him is one of the most bitter political enemies he has in Montana. At Senator Wheeler's request, the president term of the senate, Albert B. Cummins, was instructed by resolution to appoint a committee of five to investigate the circumstances surrounding the indictment of Wheeler.

CONSIDERABLE testimony was heard by both the Daugherty and the Teapot Dome committees last week, much of it suggestive but none of it at all conclusive. The oil lease investigators were hurrying to conclude their work. Howard D. Manington, who was wanted by the Daugherty committee to tell about the "little green house" and the alleged deals connected therewith, arrived from France and was at once subpoenaed.

DISPATCHES from Riga say that Turkestan and surrounding districts have revolted against Bolshevik rule and that the rebels, mostly fanatic Mohammedans led by czarist officers, are threatening Khiva. The soviet government is hurrying large bodies of troops to the scene.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI and the Fascist won an overwhelming victory in the Italian elections, but this was a foregone conclusion, for the election law had been so arranged that it could not be otherwise.

ROAD BUILDING

HIGHWAY SIDEWALKS PREVENT ACCIDENTS

The increase in automobile traffic of late years has brought among others one very serious problem, the protection of pedestrians who have to travel along the public highways.

Recent figures compiled by a large life insurance company, covering casualties on highways of a certain state for the heaviest traffic season, showed that out of 427 deaths in automobile accidents, 47 per cent of them were of persons who were walking along public highways and were struck by motorists.

As a result of the alarming increase in accidents of this type, authorities have instituted campaigns of various kinds to reduce casualties. They have broadcast rules which pedestrians should follow when forced to travel along the highways. People are warned to be carried lanterns after dark and to walk on the left side of the road so that they will be oncoming vehicles in time to get out of the way.

But all these precautions cannot eliminate these accidents altogether; they can only reduce the number.

Realizing this, state, county and city authorities in various parts of the country are now building concrete sidewalks along the highways in the more heavily traveled regions to safeguard pedestrians. And this plan as shown in the illustration is really the only one which can prevent accidents to pedestrians along the highways.

"Widen, Repair," 1924's Sign for Road Builders

Highway builders of America have agreed on two vital planks in the 1924 road improvement platform.

The first will safeguard the annual investment of more than $1,000,000,000 for highway construction and extension by the establishment of definite and systematic maintenance and repair.

The second will make this huge investment pay record dividends by raising degree of improvement justified by its traffic.

In some cases this will mean doubling the width of existing arteries; in others the straightening of all dangerous curves and the construction of subways, overhead bridges and traffic "gyrations" to improve traffic conditions and eliminate danger.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, first emphasized both of these needs in outlining his basic principles of highway management and financing during the coming year. He urged all states where the first or "backbone" system of pavements is nearly complete, to concentrate now on building the big channels up to their proper earning capacity, and to set aside a certain part of all road revenue for the annual repair and maintenance of its built roads.

Improved Highways Will Help Roadside Markets

The rapid spread of a good idea is noted in the marvelous growth of the roadside market plan in the United States. It is stated by a bureau which has studied the situation that fully 500,000 wayside farm markets will be in successful operation during the summer of 1924 in this country. With the coming of the auto into common usefulness, with the opening of good roads leading from the city and town back to the farm, and with the exposure of the extortion prevailing on the way between the producer and the consumer, a lot of consumers and producers have reached the sensible conclusion that they had better get together for their own mutual well-being and do their commodity dickering direct.

Assist Better Highways

The President of the United States is so much interested in good roads that he has appeared in a movie film which is good road propaganda, sponsored by Henry Ford. The hero of the little two-reeler is a country boy, who is presented by the President with a scholarship for a prize essay. Later the boy becomes a civil engineer, devoting his life to the building of better roads in order to make his section of the country a better place in which

PLUCK!

If you had some musical and mathematical ability, a family tradition of matrimony as your only course, an orphan's flattened purse, a horizon bounded by—the ten souls in your village—and the two hundred in your village—and all these conflicts and difficulties, would she ask at fate, marry the first man who called at her, or work out a career?

Norwood Baker—that masculine-sounding name proves she's a real Southerner, you know—faced all this and worked out a career. The chronicle runs thus:

"For years I kept thoughts of earning my livelihood to myself, to avoid argument that a girl of the aristocratic Calhoun family could have only one career. A teacher discovered a talent for music. At the little college of music I became discouraged by methods all new to me—I taught at the handsome sum of thirty dollars a month, six of it going for transportation. Meanwhile, a wealthy gentleman, who had studied shorthand and typewriting, instructed me in return for legal work.

"That summer, I arranged to teach at the State Church orphanage for just my board and laundry. I left home at midnight, arriving at 8:30 a. m., to be told my place had been given to a young lady the night before. Imagine my disappointment! Though I was only nineteen, I was made a 'cottage mother' to supervise, alone, 15 children ranging from six to sixteen. The second week I had to entertain the governor's wife. Of course everything went wrong. The world seemed topsy-turvy.

"Next, I was to become social worker in a mill village. The day I should have commenced work the mill office assistant resigned. Would I substitute temporarily? Then, for the first time, the tide turned. The president asked me to stay in the office. From him, a fine executive, and the manager, a detail man, I got wonderful training. I found when it came to figures I could eat 'em up with glee.

"During the war I glided in running a construction quartermaster's office for Uncle Sam, handling thousands of dollars daily. Now I have another 'man's job' as treasurer, endowment fund manager and students' banker for Converse college, Spartanburg, S. C.

Though the modesty says this final success is due to 'accident,' others credit the power of her 'smile,' combined with firmness and decision you would not think of mistaking."

BEAUTY IMPORTED

Main Street is stupid. Main Street is blind. Main Street drives out youth and joy and vision. So says in substance the creator of a new famous book. So say the girls who try to escape from humdrum lives by escaping to the city, each from her particular gray corner or her especially hateful Main Street sort of town.

Down in Kentucky there are some folk who reverse this process. Humdrum gray lives there? Yes, indeed! Escape both wise and necessary if the Kentucky mountain folk are to grow into Americans with their fair chance at life, liberty and pursuit of happiness? Absolutely. Urge 'em all to move to Louisville, St. Louis or Chicago! By no means! Let's bring instead, the best that Any Place has discovered to these mountains and mountain people! So say the interested folks down there in Kentucky.

This story is of a gracious woman at what she calls her "life's sunset period, with wonderful real lights over the mountains to the east and the blue grass of the north. There are equally high colors in the lives of 225 mountain boys, who range from fifteen to thirty-five years of age, and from the A. B. C. to the eighth grade certificate. It is pioneer work. No woman has ever lived with these boys, and I live a very thrilling life at old well-known Berea college."

Perhaps one must have known Laura Drake Gill of Boston and New York, magazine writer and one-time college dean, personally, to sense how much charm and richness of fine experience she is contributing to the "thrilling" pulsing life of Berea on the edge of the mountain country.

What every woman must know, Miss Gill feels, is that Berea Street is too isolated for the joys de vivre as the French gallantly phrase the joy of living, to come in, that many of the good community organizations are eager to be of service, and that all they lack is a hearty invitation from some one who wants more of the beauty of life imported into her town and who will get her fellow citizens to help distribute it.

In England the game of checkers is known as draughts; in France, jeu des dames; Holland, damerd; Poland, dama; in the Arabic of Egypt, damah. A SPECTACULAR TREAT IN STORE

According to an advertisement we carry this week, next Thursday evening, May 1, will see put on at the Ball Park, at the High School a performance that will possess one distinctive feature—it will be something absolutely new to the people of this vicinity—and more wonderful still, will be entirely free of all cost to any and all who care to witness it.

We refer to the public naturalization ceremonies to be engaged in by the local Ku Klux Klan, when more than 100 new members will be naturalized, or inducted in to the realms of the wonderful Invisible Empire.

We think we are safe in the assertion no public performance of this nature has even been staged in Central Alabama before.

After these solemn rights have been conferred upon the new citizens, a splendid fireworks display is also on the bills for the entertainment of those present.

Refreshments will also be served to the crowd and every courtesy will be extended to the public to make the occasion especially enjoyable.

Arrangements will be made to take care of your car so you need not hesitate to drive right down to the park when you come. Parking room will be provided and guards will be on duty to see that your car is not interfered with while you enjoy yourself.

The public, including men, women and children are all cordially invited to come and join with the K. K. K's in this May day celebration. You will not be expected to spend anything but an hour or so in pleasure and innocent enjoyment.

STATE CAKE CONTEST

Under the auspices of the Alabama Power Co., a state wide cake contest has been on for the ladies of the state. Tuesday was the day when the local contestants brought in their cakes to the Power Company office here.

There were all prize winners in appearance, but Mrs. S. J. Klecker was the lucky one to win out here, and may her luck will follow her in this final contest.

The cakes were afterwards sold to the highest bidder and the proceeds divided between the Methodist and Baptist churches.

A PECULIAR PHENOMENON

From about 10 to 12:30 o'clock yesterday a brilliant circle like a rainbow encircled the sun.

The oldest person we saw had never witnessed anything like it before and occasioned considerable comment.

Some people said it indicated a flood. Some said it was a sign of rain and others claimed that a famine, or some other great disaster, was being predicted for us.

So far as we are concerned we do not even give a guess, though it was quite freakish looking.

OUR HIGHWAY QUESTION SETTLED

Cooper, Verhena, Mt. Creek and Marbury Get Service. Prattville Route Abandoned

The Highway Commission met Tuesday and settled finally the route for the B. & M. highway so far as Chilton county is concerned.

This question has been cussed and discussed for months and a thousand conflicting rumors circulated until a great deal of bitter feeling was developed in several quarters, but now so far as Chilton county is concerned, all is smiles again and we are all satisfied.

The proposition of detouring the road through the sandy wastes of Autauga county was always absurd, but in these peculiar times many peculiar things can happen, and interested money interests do accomplish some very unreasonable things occasionally. But our Commissioners stood by the only reasonable solution of the matter that has ever existed, and ordered the road to follow the route designated by 90 per cent of the directly interested tax payers.

That is President Rogers and Commissioner Skuggs did, but Mr. Suttle still flew his influence and vote directly in the faces of this popular demand and remained faithful to that interested few who wished to exploit property values in a section that natural causes have rendered incapable of development.

Messrs. Rogers and Skuggs are to be congratulated in this particular instance for their allegiance, and consideration of the people who foot the bills.

This route will be equally as cheaply constructed as the other one could have been, will pass through a thickly populated territory all the way and thus be of great service to a large number of the people who are footing the bills, will be more interesting to travellers and furnish a much better insight into the value of the agricultural possibilities of our section. Besides, little towns are located every few miles along the course where tourists, and other auto drivers, can always conveniently secure service in case of trouble.

It is said that the contract will also be let for this section of our highway by June, so the prospect is good now for work to soon be in progress on the entire 37 miles of the B. & M. Highway that crosses our county.

We are all happy now, so lets go to work a little harder and get that cotton mill landed.

CHILTON HI WINS

Game of base ball played between Chilton Hi and Thompson Hi of Sylvania last Friday was not featured by any especially spectacular playing on either side.

The visiting team was too greatly outclassed by the local boys to produce any thrills or doubts in the minds of the fans.

Chilton won by a easy score of 10 to 6.

EASTER SERVICES SUNDAY

Owing to the absence of Dr. C. C. Wilkerson, at the bedside of his father, who is quite ill, there were no services Sunday at the Methodist church, so, at the Baptist church they had the benefit of part of the Methodist choir and congregation.

The Knights Templar turned out in a body, in full regalia dress, and were given special seats in the central front rows. They made a fine appearance and are a splendid body of men.

A special musical program was arranged for the occasion which was exceptionally well rendered by the large choir and greatly enjoyed by the large audience that assembled for the service. A quartet rendered by Mesdames Armstrong, Upchurch, Middleton and Ellis was beautiful beyond expression, and was a distinguished tribute to the artistic musical ability of each of the singers. They deserve special congratulations on their beautiful offering.

Dr. Ezell, the pastor, preached on the subject of Christ's resurrection, a most able, convincing and appropriate sermon which held the large audience in silent and solemn appreciation to the close.

All in all, the most beautiful Easter day was especially observed by the people of Clanton in a service that was grand, solemn and beautiful.

FIRE AT ICE PLANT

Last Wednesday just before noon the boiler room at the Wade ice plant caught on fire and, for a few moments, it looked like a serious conflagration would result.

However, the prompt arrival of the hose reels and the turning on of the water, soon brought the flames under control and the fire was extinguished without much damage resulting.

It is supposed to have caught up in the fuel shaving pile while the fire man was outside and spread so rapidly that no one could get to the whistle to sound an alarm.

We are pleased that Mr. Wade got off so lightly and that Clanton still will have plenty of ice.

MR. G. W. JONES SICK

The many friends of "Uncle Dock" Jones are sorrowing over the fact that he is quite sick, and has been for some time.

He is a well known old citizen of Chilton county and has a large circle of devoted friends who miss him sadly.

He is now at the home of Mrs. Anna Jones, in West Bend.

A LIBERAL POLICY

The Birmingham News is again offering five four-year Scholarships free to the boys and girls of Alabama.

They are exercising in this yearly donation a wonderful liberality and are doing a great work for the boys and girls of the State.

DRESS MAKING

Dress making wanted by graduate in designing and fitting. 509, 10th St.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thomas went to Birmingham Sunday.

MOVED BACK

We are pleased to announce that Dr. E. R. Steele and family, who lived here for quite a time and then moved to Prattville, will move back here this week.

Dr. Steele will have his office, again over the Upchurch Drug Store, but will be located in the corner rooms this time that look out on both second avenue and seventh street.

He has many friends in this section who will be glad to know that he has returned to make his home with us.

THE COTTON MILL

We are informed that every thing looks pretty, so far, in regard to locating a cotton mill here in the very near future.

All of the requirements of the Textile company will be complied with by the citizens of this section. A satisfactory site will be furnished and what ever locally owned stock desired will be taken up.

In fact, it looks like now that it will be a matter of put up or shut up with the mill men, so we feel really optimistic over the outlook.

But, remember, the mill is not located yet and it is too early to lay down your guns and quit pulling for it. Keep your system keyed up in high and work in season and out of season for success.

When we break the ice, and land one industry of prominence here, the battle will be almost over, for others will naturally follow of their own volition. One industry naturally induces others to follow. One cotton mill will bring others and they, in turn, will draw other industries in their wake. With all of the manifold inducements this section has to offer outside capital, when once the Rubicon is crossed and the industrial tide begins to flow in our direction, this entire section will hum with industrial plants of many kinds.

We have the finest climate in the world, taking everything in to consideration. We have no excessive cold nor no blistering heat. Crops have never been known to make a clean failure here. We have no foreign trouble. We have a soil adapted to all kinds of vegetables and fruits and we grow cotton as successfully here as in any other portion of the cotton belt. Then, in addition to all of these natural advantages, we have, located in our county, two of the most powerful hydroelectric plants that exist anywhere ready and capable of supplying any amount of the most reliable power in the world.

Besides all of these potent industrial factors, the records show that Central Alabama is one of the especially favored sections when it comes to health conditions. We are noted for our freedom from all kinds of epidemics, and our vital statistics run surprisingly low.

There is no argument that can be offered by anyone to contradict these facts, and we do not see what else large industrial plants can ask for to make of this section an ideal home for them and their business.

Mr. John Deramus, a prominent young business man of Verhena, was the guest of Clanton friends Sunday. Mr. W. J. Benton, of Verhena, attended the Easter services held at the Baptist church here last Sunday.

EASTER WEDDING BELLS

The marital instincts and celebrations always attributed to June, the month of roses, will have to hustle up this year or be utterly outclassed by the chiming wedding bells of Easter Sunday.

The following well known young people of Clanton and vicinity fell victims of Cupid's machinations and were gathered into the fold of sober and sedate marital life before the blooming of June roses or the lazy lull of the long summer days:

TIPPETT-MADDUX

Mr. Arthur Tippitt, a young man employed by the Alabama Power Co. and Miss Evaree Maddox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Maddox.

GILLISPIE-MADDUX

Mr. Louis Gillespie, son of Federal law enforcement officer, Walter Gillespie and Miss Celestia Maddox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Maddox.

FARMER-WILLIS

Mr. Middleton Farmer and Miss Ella Willis.

WYATT-JONES

Mr. Henry Davis Wyatt and Miss Pearly Mae Jones.

POWELL-BAKER

Mr. Lester Powell and Miss S. B. Baker, who live on Route 5.

According to the records at the Court house these are the happy young people who could not resist the call of Easter and who launched their boat on the sea of connubial bliss last Sunday.

The Chilton County News wishes for all of these young voyagers a long, prosperous and happy trip together.

CATCHEN-BALDWIN

Mr. W. F. Catchen and Miss Cora Baldwin, of Clayton, were united in marriage last week.

Miss Baldwin formerly resided here and this happy event will meet with many good wishes here.

MOVED TO CLANTON

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Jones have moved back to Clanton. They are occupying the home of Mrs. Gordon Jones at West End.

Mr. Jones is an old Chilton county boy who has many friends and relatives in Chilton while Mrs. Jones will be remembered prior to her marriage as Miss Ethel Sewell.

We are glad to have this esteemed young couple become a part of Clanton.

HAS RETURNED

Dr. Arthur Johnson, who has been absent for several weeks taking a special post graduate course in the treatment of the eyes, ears and throat, returned last Sunday night, and can now be found daily at his office where he is prepared to give his clients the benefits of the very latest discoveries in the treatment of these diseases.

SEND US YOUR JOB WORK

ONE WAY TO LIVE

We heard it said that a man appeared on the streets in Clanton recently traveling on one crutch and a stick and using only one foot to walk on.

He spent most of the day in soliciting alms on the streets and was quite successful.

Late that evening they say he threw his crutch and stick on a passing freight train and swung himself aboard with all the agility of a professional hobo.

Deserving poverty and affliction is often ignored by good people because of such cheats and swindlers as this. Such characters deserve a home in the pen at hard labor.

TO OIL THE STREETS

A large tank car of crude oil has been already set in here for the purpose, and work is going forward to sprinkle the down town streets with this product and do away with the dust.

By putting gravel, where needed on the streets in the business district and then giving them a thorough dose of oil most of the dust will be eliminated. This will be a great boon to the people who have to pass about, on business or pleasure, on the busy days when the streets are dry, for, at present, the dust is almost strifling when traffic is brisk and so many cars are passing.

Day by day, in every way, we become more town-like and more sanitary.

THE NEW ROAD MACHINE

The catapillar tractor and the heavy scrape that came with it are giving great satisfaction as road builders and workers.

A road can be thrown up in the center and the ditches opened out to any depth desired with this machine and it can do a wonderful amount of work in a day.

The B. & M. highway, which was in splendid shape before the recent big rains, is said to be pretty rough again now. We judge the authorities will soon go over it again and, if they use this new machinery we look for the road to be put in such shape that it will last all summer.

Good roads are badly needed and we are glad that the prospect is good now for some lasting repairs.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT

There are seventy-five farmers in and surrounding the village of Warrington, Ala., who want a better school house and a better school for their children. Those seventy-five each contracted to cultivate to cotton two acres, making a total of 150 acres, and turn the cotton over to the school fund. If they each grow one bale each on the two acres, that would be 65,000 pounds cotton. If the price was 20 cents that would be $13,000 to be used for a better house and a better school.

That spirit is the right spirit. It is the spirit that helps. It is the spirit that builds. It is the spirit that succeeds. It is the spirit of help yourself, or do your part of bearing your burdens, or refusing to wait for the other fellow. It is the genuine American spirit.

ROAD BUILDING BEST WAY TO PLANT TREES ON ROADSIDE

(By JENS JENSEN, Lincoln Highway Architect.)

Roadside planting should be a part of the general character of the landscape, so that the roads themselves do not appear as a definite line apart from the rest of the landscape, but a means to an end and that is in sympathy with its surroundings.

The highways are the points from which the traveler sees and enjoys the surrounding country. It is, therefore, of importance that the roadside planting does not shut out adjacent lands. Out on the plains, the open country and the freedom of it is a real charm and inspiration.

Even roadsides lined with rows of trees in the avenue fashion would be a mistake. This not only would change the broad expanse of prairie country but would tend to checkerboard the prairie landscape. The same idea may hold good in mountainous countries where the valley is the object of beauty.

Scattered trees planted promiscuously along the highway, as one sees them in the forest, are more in keeping with our landscape and with the American mind than stately avenues of monoliths. It is rather lanes that we want, or pikes, as they are called in the South, where trees seem to enjoy the roadside and each other's company. There is nothing stiff or set about it. A lane or a pike is tolerant even to the shy but sweet violet that may be permitted to scatter its perfume along the highway.

I have seen pikes in Kentucky that come as near to what I consider a beautiful American highway as anything I know of. They are serviceable, beautiful and cool on hot summer days. Native plants of all sorts find a happy home along these roadsides and give their beauty and their wonderful message to the passerby, and in them nest our birds that thrill us with their songs.

We want this expression of freedom along the open road. We want shadows and we want sunlight. We want the comfort of shady lanes, and we want the beautiful outlooks over the surrounding country.

I have passed over prairie roads with nothing but wavy plains in green and brown before me, and way off in the horizon the purple riches on the crest of a prairie wave. Those are inspiring things, and they stimulate a love for our native land.

All roadside planting should be determined and based on the country, and the native vegetation through which the road winds its way. In this way the roadside planting will become a part of the general landscape, and enhance the beauty of its surroundings as far as this is possible for a highway to do. For instance, swamp or lowland landscapes are of a widely different character than prairie or hilly country, and the vegetation fitting for these different types of landscapes are equally different.

Every plant has its proper place in the out-of-doors. To find this place is worth while, because here it reveals its greatest beauty and gives us joy in the fullest measure. Trees adapted to their environs may grow to great age and mobility, and in this way highway planting will become a most important task in the making of our rural landscapes.

Roadside planting, the development of state reservations and rural parks are equal in importance to city planning, and are far greater in scope and vision than the latter. A period of great cultural advancement is always measured by the vision and the outlook for the future. Roadside planting belongs to such a period.

Immense Road-Building Program for California

Highway work in California scheduled for 1924 is expected to reach $15,000,000. In addition there will be approximately $7,500,000 for maintenance work from the two cents per gallon gasoline tax, which is 50 per cent more than the sum available during the last year.

Figures compiled by the Automobile Club of Southern California indicate that the state must provide highways to accommodate one-tenth of the automobiles in the United States owned by residents, and an additional quarter of a million motor vehicles annually brought into the state by visiting tourists from all parts of the country.

New highway construction in southern California during 1923 totaled $3,494,596, which was in addition to the uncompleted contract of 1922 and the street paving done by municipalities. In addition to this work $425,767 was spent in building bridges on county and state roads.

Tourists in Connecticut

Exactly 371,266 automobilists paid fees to cross the three trunk line toll bridges in Connecticut during last July, August, and September, in comparison with 339,917 during the same period of 1922. The state highway department announced in making public a statement of receipts from toll bridges for the last summer. Those three months have always been productive of greater revenue to the state than any others, due to the large amount of summer motoring.

Doctor Tells How to Care for Child's Teeth

We have been taught to believe that dentists have much to do with good teeth. The work of the dentist, however, only begins after the teeth are here, when they are all formed and in whatever condition they are developed in the jaw, which is the result of the prenatal influence, whether good or bad, so far as the teeth are concerned. It has been said that a clean tooth never decays, but the teeth must be sound in the beginning to make this true. Prenatal influences and care are very necessary, and also as much care and attention in regard to diet and hygiene should be given when the child is from two to five years old.

The sixth year in a child's life divides the preventive and reparative care necessary, and the limit should not be reached before this care is given. Care in the kindergarten age is better than when in the first grade at six years, and the nursery or preschool time is better than the kindergarten.—Dr. Harold Cross in the National Health.

"Nobody. Just the same I am going after my wife."

St. Augustine Like a Page From an Ancient Romance

St. Augustine is so different that it seems incredible that it is but 40 miles distant from Jacksonville, one of the most cosmopolitan cities in the country. One must go back three centuries to appreciate this quaint city where the old and the new meet; in the older portion of the town, the streets are so narrow that pedestrians must move out of the streets to let two cars pass. And so tight is the fit that centuries of passing hubs of wheels have worn grooves three inches deep in the cornerstones of the houses. One Sunday we visited an old Spanish cathedral where we saw a relic said to have miraculous curative powers for the faithful.

It was hard to believe ourselves in America as we wandered about the ancient streets. Many of the barred windows and doors open directly upon the streets; and one day we saw a horse poke his head through an open window and take an apple off of a table inside.—World Travel Magazine.

Army Ants Clean House.

The Indians of Guiana respect the "army" ants because of their house-cleaning propensities. Every house, from the rude thatched benab of the Indian to the solid wooden ones of civilization, are more or less infested with very large roaches and other insects, and also huge tarantulas, which come only to obtain the roaches. The "army" ants come not infrequently in tremendous armies and in the course of a few hours leave the homes cleaner than they have ever been before.

In these great tribes there is but a single queen. Her sole duty, after the colony is once started, is egg-laying. Periodically a brood of young queens and males are hatched. These little ants are winged and as soon as they are mature all of them leave the tribe in what is called the marriage flight. Each queen finds a mate. The pair and the males soon die, but each young queen founds her own new tribe and, after bringing up the first workers, herself, this little crowd sets about to rear about themselves another great sand of "army" ants.—Detroit News.

Ford Proposal Versus Congressional Record

Chapter II.

A STATEMENT OF THE ALABAMA POWER COMPANY, SUPPORTED BY REMARKS FROM THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

THE FACTS IN THE CASE—	THOSE WHO ARE INFORMED SAY—
$1,527,512.75 For Property Costing Over $80,000,000.	Rep. Kearns, Of Ohio: "Perhaps it would be well to state that Mr. Ford is offering for the government's real estate holdings at Muscle Shoals only $5,000,000. These holdings cost the government, to be exact, and without any accumulative interest, $35,343,296. For this real estate and with all the gigantic buildings constructed upon it, together with all the railroad engines, steel freight cars, steam shovels, picks and shovels, rock crushers, cement mixers, railroad tracks and numerous other machinery and tools, he is offering the ridiculously low and unreasonable price of $5,000,000."
Henry Ford acquires for $1,527,512.75 government property, which cost over $80,000,000. That property includes $500,000 of platinum belonging to the nitrate plants and platinum is the equivalent of cash. The result is the Ford Corporation acquires these plants for slightly over $1,000,000. That will be a little over 1 per cent of its cost. They consist of 4,200 acres of land with two great nitrate plants, dwellings, sewerage, locomotives, cars, repair shops and all modern improvements; two steam power plants, one of 6,500 horsepower (about the size of the steam plant on the banks of the Alabama River at Montgomery erected some years ago by Richard Tills and now owned by the power company) and another steam plant of 90,000 horsepower, which is 12 times the size of the "Tills plant," and nearly as large as all the power units at Lock 12. For the latter plant alone the power companies have offered to pay $4,500,000. All this is to be decided to the Ford Corporation.	Rep. Hill, Of Maryland: "There has been a good deal said about the alleged selfishness of the power companies making the offer represented by the Hill bill, now before the House. To me nothing can be more preposterous than the proposal of Sec. 19 of the McKenzie bill to spend $3,472,487.25 of good, present, actual government cash to build for the Ford interest a steam power plant, nearly 100 miles away from Muscle Shoals, that has no possible relation to the Muscle Shoals water power or nitrate plants, except that during the war the Gorgas plant furnished extra power from the Alabama Power Company to Nitrate Plant No. 2."
Taxpayers To Spend $3,472,487.25 For New Steam Plant.
The Ford proposal would take from the United States Treasury, cash to build in addition a 40,000 horsepower steam power plant for the Ford Corporation 100 miles south of Muscle Shoals and a connecting transmission line for the private use of the Ford Corporation, all to cost $3,472,487.25 to be repaid the government in installments.

Exclusion Vote Is Congress' Reply to Japan Note—Dawes Plan O. K.'d.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAPAN'S effort to dictate America's immigration policy has resulted, so far, very unfortunately for Japan. Ambassador Hanihara's warning that adoption of the exclusion clause in the Johnson bill would have "grave consequences" was considered important and insulting by congress. Thereafter the house had passed the measure by a vote of 322 to 71, the senate set its face sternly and voted unanimously in favor of that clause which provides for the exclusion of Japanese immigrants from the United States.

The administration, through Secretary of State Hughes, is on record as opposed to this clause and in favor of extending the quota limitation to Japan with the "gentlemen's agreement" retained. But in view of the unanimity of opinion in congress it is by many in Washington that President Coolidge scarcely can afford to take the measure. On the other hand, the pacifist organizations in the country have jumped to the front with demands that Mr. Coolidge put the mark of his disapproval on the legislation. Jane Addams, Amy Woods, Arthur Deering Call and other spokesmen for these associations urged that the bill would be a distinct setback to the cause of unity among nations. Since it has become known that the Russian Reds have been working through some of these peace organizations to break down our national defense and our form of government, their influence has declined. Still it may be that the senate, having given full expression to its resentment against the Japanese attempt to interfere with our legislation, will decide to modify its stand when it comes to the passage of the immigration bill as a whole. Not, however, in deference to the views of the pacifists and Jews.

The Japanese government and people are naturally disgruntled and disturbed. The Jingo press over there is demanding the resignation of the ministry and even hinting at war with America. Already a campaign has been started for a trade boycott, on the state of California if the exclusion measure is finally adopted. The government insists there shall be no retaliatory measures and, it is said to be ready to ask the League of Nations conference at Brussels on July 23 to approve a new international immigration basis. In America the question is looked on as being one of the admission or exclusion of immigrants undesirable economically. In Japan it is considered a question of race equality, and the Japanese feel that they are undervalued and insulted.

Possibility of war with Japan is of course remote, but the controversy is being utilized by both those who advocate the strengthening of our defenses and those who urge that we abandon the Philippine Islands before they are taken away from us by Japan—as they easily could be under present conditions.

HAVING been approved by the reparations commission and by the British government and accepted by the German government as a basis for settlement, the fate of the Dawes report seems now to rest with France. The other countries involved are almost certain to give the plan their approval. Prime Minister MacDonald announced in the house of commons his government's full and unreserved acceptance of the report and said it would urge all the other governments concerned to take the same course. Mr. Baldwin assured him that in this he had the support of the whole British people. Chancellor Marx called the conference of all the German states in Berlin and after a warm discussion the cabinet formally accepted the invitation of the reparations commission to adhere to the Dawes plan. The German reply makes no reservations and says the government "is ready to assure its co-operation in the experts' plan." Marx afterward said Germany would expect "complete and unrestricted disposal over the whole reich territory within the boundaries set by the treaty of Versailles," and suggested that fulfillment of the report would be endangered if "the immediate threat of disturbing interference" continues to exist.

"Oppressive and peremptory guarantees for the fulfillment of the plan's provisions are demanded from Germany, and they will be granted," Herr Marx said, adding, "hence I deem it not improper if Germany wants to see that it will not be threatened with military interventions which, even with the best of intentions of fulfillment, would form a serious hindrance to an attempt to convert the plan into deeds."

Premier Poincare in a public speech virtually declared France would hold on to the Ruhr and the Ruhr guarantees until the experts' plan is executed. French officials feel that the allies must reach an agreement on France's security before the Dawes plan is accepted, and that all the allies should agree upon the measures to be taken by them if Germany defaults again on its obligations. Poincare, it is thought, will demand the continuance of the operation and control of the railroads in the occupied zones until military necessities are protected and a certain number of payments are made.

British officialdom was worried by the attitude of Poincare and it was said Mr. MacDonald warned the French ambassador that its maintenance would endanger the continuance of the entente. Probably France will acquiesce after the demands of domestic politics have been satisfied. One thing that is worrying the French is the fear they will lose the full fruits of the Dawes plan by a nation-wide German plot to cut down the proposed revenues to the allies by ceasing the use of tobacco and beer and reducing to the minimum the consumption of sugar and matches.

DEMOCRATS and Insurgent Republicans in the senate are still seething with something like indignation over the rebuke administered by President Coolidge for the manner in which the investigation of the internal revenue bureau is being conducted and for the resolution of the committee to employ Francis J. Heney as investigator at the expense of Senator Couzens of Michigan. The President agrees with the secretary of the treasury that the investigators are devoting themselves mainly to efforts to implicate in tax dodging the concerns in which Mr. Mellon is interested, and says the hiring of Heney was improper. His admonition to the senators to conduct their investigations in accord with constitutional guarantees aroused resentment, and all through last week there were hot debates on the subject between the Democratic and insurgent leaders and the Republicans who support the administration. Governor Pinchot admits he employed Heney and defends it. Couzens was ill and the work of the committee was suspended.

ATTORNEY GENERAL STONE, it is said, has carefully examined the evidence upon which Senator Wheeler of Montana was indicted in Great Falls and has found the action of the grand jury was justified. Department of Justice officials say the evidence was turned up by chance while investigators were working up cases of violations of the postal laws, and the United States district attorney in Montana acted without any suggestion from Washington.

Among the witnesses heard by the Daugherty investigating committee last week was the delectable Gaston B. Means again. He told a story of how the late Jess Smith had collected at least $250,000 from bootleggers and had split with the former attorney general. He informed the committee that the night before Smith's mysterious death in the Daugherty apartment in Washington he asked Means to return a large sum of money to New York bootleggers, who were threatening exposure and to whom Howard Mannington already had returned $200,000.

Means also said Secretary Mellon had a contract to give liquor permits to "the Green River whisky crowd," and declared he had found enough evidence in the Bosch Magneto case to call for the indictment of former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, and that Daugherty and Jess Smith had decided that it would be better to hold this over Palmer's head to influence Democratic votes in congress than to bring prosecution.

George W. Stork of the Department of Justice gave evidence tending to implicate Francis B. Harrison in scandals, and the committee then took a recess to permit Senator Wheeler to attend the sessions of the committee that is investigating the circumstances surrounding his indictment.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE says steps should be taken by the federal government to put outdoor recreational opportunities within the grasp of all the people, and himself takes the first of such steps by appointing Secretary Weeks, Work, Wallace and Hoover and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt a committee to promulgate "a national policy which should not merely co-ordinate under federal guidance all activities in behalf of outdoor recreation but also formulate a program to serve as a guide for future action."

WITH considerable publicity the conference between British and Russian representatives for the re-establishment of trade and political relations opened in London last week. Almost before it got under way there were indications that it might come to naught. Prime Minister MacDonald opened the proceedings with a polite speech in which he warned the Russians that if they desired credits—which is what they do desire—they must make it plain that they are ready to respect their contractual obligations, and that the one way to do this was to keep their old contracts. He warned them further that Britain would not stand for subversive propaganda anywhere in the empire. The Russian delegates were conciliatory, but in two days the conference adjourned over the Easter holidays with the gentlemen from Moscow in doubt as to what to do. For meanwhile two of their chiefs, at home, Zinovieff, president of the Third Internationale, and Trotsky, minister of war, had come out with violent attacks on MacDonald. Both of them assert that Russia will not meet the claims put forward by the British and that an agreement is possible only if both countries start with a clean slate, after which the soviet government will meet any obligations the Russian delegation may sign at the London conference.

OUR army's globe-encircling aviators have been having some exciting experiences up in Alaska, which culminated in the forced landing of the plane piloted by Major Martin, commander of the squadron. A crack in the crank case compelled him to descend at Cape Igvak and the other planes proceeded to Chignik, 170 miles further west. Word of the mishap was sent out from there and two destroyers hurried to the rescue of Martin and his mechanic, who were found safe in an inlet and were taken to Kanatak where a new engine was to be installed.

NEW YORK'S two state conventions were interesting because for the Republican Secretary Hughes delivered the keynote speech, and gave up the prize to President Coolidge, while at the Democratic gathering Gov. Al Smith was formally put in the running for the presidential nomination. This was done through the adoption of a resolution presented by three leading women, and in response Smith agreed to make the race.

THE people of Greece voted by a huge majority in favor of the establishing of a Greek republic, and so the downfall of the Glucksbury dynasty is complete. The Persians, on the other hand, seem to have given up the idea of setting up a republic, Premier Sirdar Sipah having repudiated the plan. He is said now to be negotiating with Harry Sinclair for a loan of $10,000,000 in return for an oil concession in northern Persia.

Animal Comfort Being Increased

Everything Is Being Done in Most Practical Ways to Prevent Suffering.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Because of its experimental work it is necessary to use live animals, the United States Department of Agriculture has on various occasions been accused of practicing unnecessary cruelty. Also it has been blamed for permitting cruelty in the handling of animals, for example in transportation to market. Such accusations are without reasonable foundation, says Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, who maintains that the department's efforts have resulted in the prevention of suffering by millions of animals and human beings.

In carrying on experimental work, particularly that which has for its object the control of diseases, it is necessary to use a few animals, but in most cases the suffering of the subjects is negligible if there is any at all. If the objectors had had their way the suffering among animals and human beings from many causes would now be infinitely greater than it is. A few examples should make this clear to those who wish to see.

Clean Up Texas Fever.

Previous to 1900 the cattle of our southern states, an area comprising about 750,000 square miles, were affected with Texas fever, a disease which annually killed large numbers and which so sickened the others that they became poor and were relatively unprofitable as producers of meat or milk. Scientists of the department, by the use of a few cattle, discovered that the disease was carried from animal to animal by the blood-sucking cattle tick, and the natural conclusion was that the eradication of the tick would mean the disappearance of Texas fever. This proved to be the case. The department alone has immediately undertaken the stupendous task of cleaning up the tick from the herds of the South, and already nearly three-fourths of the vast territory has been cleared of it by dipping the cattle at certain intervals in an arsenical solution and keeping them off infested pastures until the ticks there have died. As a result, millions of cattle have been permitted to live in health and comfort and to provide wholesome food.

However, the greatest benefit from this discovery of the part played by the tick is reflected in the advance made in human medicine. The knowledge that diseases could be carried by insects was new to medicine and immediately led medical men to consider the possibility that the spread of some of the baffling diseases of mankind might be explained in this way. As a result of investigations in which two physicians deliberately sacrificed their own lives the dreaded yellow fever was found to be carried by a certain kind of mosquito and control measures were developed which have practically wiped this plague off the face of the earth. In the same manner it was found possible to control malaria, also carried by a mosquito, and a number of other devastating diseases have been found to be insect-borne. Was the sacrifice of a few animals, and even human beings, worth while? It seems a needless question.

Worked on Dogs and Sheep.

Within the past few years a scientist of the department, working on the control of internal parasites of domestic animals, in which work he used dogs and sheep principally, found that a certain chemical was effective in removing hookworms. His discovery is proving a great comfort to many thousands of animals, perhaps millions. But more medical investigators took it up and reports received from almost every corner of the world show that this cheap chemical is the most effective treatment now known for fighting the hookworm disease of human beings which weakens and depresses millions of people. Paying no attention to the human family, was it right to inconvenience a few dogs and sheep to save millions of their kind from an insidious pest against which they were helpless? One can imagine a mighty chorus of barks and bleats of approval.

Each year, particularly on the western ranges, thousands of cattle, sheep and horses are killed or made very sick as a result of eating poisonous plants. In order to determine the kinds and quantities of the plants which produce these terrible effects the Department of Agriculture has found it necessary to feed suspected plants to a few animals. Some of these unlucky animals suffer and a few of them die, but each year the millions of live stock on the ranches of the west are safer from poisoning, for bulletins issued by the government inform the ranchers of the dangerous plants so that they may eradicate them or keep their flocks and herds away from places where they grow.

The list of benefits from animal experimentation could be lengthened almost indefinitely, and in many instances more than the indirect economic benefit has accrued to the human race. The battle against animal tuberculosis has cost the lives of many of our domestic creatures, but there are now large areas free of this age-old plague and new counties are being added to the free list at frequent intervals. Need we ask if the development of anti-hog cholera serum has increased or decreased animal suffering? It is practically a sure preventive of the worst disease attacking swine, but some hogs had to give their lives during the experimental stages—and without their consent.

Work to Prevent Suffering.

The Department of Agriculture is doing all it can in the most practical ways to prevent animal suffering, sometimes indirectly by using animals to discover new facts and sometimes directly by enforcing laws providing for the human handling of domestic animals. The federal enactment known as the twenty-eight-hour law, enforced by the department, provides that animals being shipped to market must not be kept on cars more than 28 hours without unloading for watering and feeding and rest. Although the department receives an appropriation of only $25,000 a year for this work, it has done much to increase the comfort of animals on the way to the markets. Within the past three years, according to Dr. Mohler, violations of this law have been cut in half. Deaths of stock in transit have been reduced to considerably less than 1 per cent and traveling inspectors report much better conditions of handling, feeding and watering. The railroads have paid heavy fines and are making determined efforts to have their employees comply strictly with the law. It is now rare to see cars of live stock shunted between two rows of box cars in warm weather; care is taken to put them on the outside tracks. Bruised animals are much fewer now.

The United States has become the greatest live stock country in the world, and one of the reasons for the attainment of this position is that in this country much time and money has been spent in developing methods of preventing and eradicating diseases and adding to animal comfort. The scientist has been looking at the great herds and flocks that provide so much of our wealth and not at the individual that followed "Mary" to school.

Hens and Eggs Buy Home Improvements

Poultry Products Sold by South Carolina Women.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm women in Unionteston county, S. C., sold 5,441 pounds of poultry and 10,388 dozen eggs during 1923, as compared with 600 pounds of market poultry and 1,009 dozen eggs in 1920. This large increase in three years was accomplished, on the part of extension workers co-operatively directed by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges, by constantly emphasizing the value of pure bred poultry and of the need of grading all products. The home demonstration agent rendered all possible assistance in the marketing of these products, but the good results are attributed largely to the fact that at every meeting held, no matter what subject was discussed, poultry was advised as a means of increasing the home income. Out of 158 women enrolled in home demonstration work, 70 improved their flocks by the purchase of standard-bred cockerels or baby chicks.

In addition to selling poultry, 3,337 pounds of butter and fresh vegetables, amounting to $2,368.50, were sold in the county. The money earned by the women in these ways was divided into three portions. One part was laid away for a rainy day, one part was spent in supplying special needs of the children, or for food or clothing, and the third part was spent for home improvements. Among these improvements, 23 houses were remodeled by having additions, new floors, or new lighting systems. Eleven women bought gasoline irons, two made wheel trays and four bought kitchen cabinets; fifteen planted fruit trees and 138 planted local trees and shrubs to beautify the home grounds.

FARM NOTES

Make the hens scratch. It is good for them and they enjoy it.

Very sandy, acid or poorly drained soils will not support sweet clover.

The manifold luxuries of your own garden will make you scorn the corner grocery stuff.

Early-seeded oats will ordinarily outyield later seeding by six or eight bushels per acre.

If your incubator is being operated in a room with uniform temperature and well ventilated, it will give better batches.

Rye makes a very good nurse crop for clovers, and especially so when it has been pastured closely in the fall and winter.

Sometimes leg weakness becomes a serious trouble, and a great menace in raising baby chicks. This trouble occurs more often during the brooding season.

The best perches are not more than two feet from the floor, all on the same level to prevent crowding, and are movable so that they may be easily kept clean.

The green bug becomes active during the first warm days. Careful watch should be kept for the appearance of dead plants in small circular areas in the wheat fields. These should be plowed under or straw scattered over them and burned.

A NEW DAY DAWNING FOR THE SOUTH

The eternal cycles of time move in a mysterious but an inexorable manner. Years seem to pass slowly but really they are only brief epochs in the making of history.

History tells us, in after years, of the different events that occurred, day by day, in the natural order of things; events of no especial daily import but that were building the fabric that supplied the material for making the future what it proved to be in the course of time.

In the pioneer days of this great country of ours, wealth accumulated in the northeastern states first because they were the first to be settled up. Our fore-fathers landed on the bleak shores of Rhode Island and began to build this wonderful country along that coast at once.

After a little while Boston, Mass. became a great shipping center for them and most of the seagoing vessels that handled the trade of this coming land hailed from that port.

Soon these lusty mariners began to launch out further and further and in a short while they began to land negroes, in great quantities, as slaves upon these shores. The negro is essentially a warm climate animal and was not a success in that climate, nor as a laborer suited to the needs of the industries of that section.

In the meantime a few hardy Daniel Boons had explored the wilderness in search of conditions more suitable to their taste. As the years passed settlements spread, and finally the South began to develop its wonderful agricultural possibilities.

During this time thousands of negro slaves had been brought over and bought by the older settlers up in the cold New England states, but climate and conditions were unfavorable to slave service and these old fellows soon found that the slavery proposition was a delusion and a snare to them.

With proverbial Yankee shrewdness they began to figure out a way to dispose of their slaves and, at the same time, get their money out of them. They realized the favorable climate conditions in the South and the vast acres of tillable land that was being opened up, and saw their opportunity. They came South and introduced the experiment and it worked out to perfection. They unloaded their slaves on the Southern farmer and both parties were winners in the deal. The negro suited the farmer and the climate suited the negro.

A considerable period of years again rolled by. The slave owning southern farmer made his millions and became an aristocrat. Wealth piled up so rapidly that our northern neighbors grew envious and our southern aristocrats grew. Again the Shrewdness of the down east Yankee came in to play and he suddenly became shocked with the very thoughts of slavery, and his tender heart inspired the Boston spirit of abolition that finally was responsible for the civil war.

The war came and the negro was freed. The South was ruthlessly robbed, burned up and impoverished. Our northern brethren had soothed their tender hearts and, at the same time had brought low the proud heads of the southern aristocrat.

The abolishment of slavery was a blessing in disguise to the South. The spirit of snobishness was becoming unbearable and the lines of demarcation drawn by the wealthy slave owner against his less fortunate southern neighbor was detestable. No tender, human sympathy helped free the negro, but the envy and spite of our northern kingolks, and the bigotry of the wealthy southern farmer, were the real causes that culminated in that gracious work.

Since the war long years have gone in to the past again and a new era is dawning. Until quite recently our victorious northern friends have been able to keep our noses to their grindstone because they controlled the government, the money and the necessary resources that must be had for prosperity to smile and plenty to wait on every one.

By hard work, by self denial, by rigid economy and by the smiles of a kind Providence, a different day is beginning to dawn again in the South, and wealth is flowing this way in constantly increasing volume. The south has her head above water again and is independent. She can run her own business and does not need to kiss and fawn upon the hand that smites.

Already our Massachusetts neighbors are beginning to grow envious and are howling for help to the government because they can no longer compete with the south in manufacturing her own cotton. Prosperity again camps upon our hill tops and plenty smiles upon our people. This time there are no slaves and no aristocracy to humble. We have the climate, the soil and the people to go forward with.

The question now is, what will our Boston abolitionists trumpet up to appease their envy and feed their spite with this time?

The south has come to stay. The day has dawned. Prosperity is ours now with no false bottom to rest on. Let us thank God and be glad that the South is ours and that it is just what it is—the greatest country on earth.

FIRE, BELL A NECESSITY

Monday, at about noon, the boiler room at the ice plant caught on fire and came near burning up before it was discovered by people passing by.

For some reason the fireman failed to sound his whistle and give any alarm at all. He had probably walked out for a little time and the fire caught during his absence.

It was especially noticeable that this fire, right in the business districts, occurred and was put under control before the news spread a block either way.

Now, if the old Methodist church bell, that is rusting to dust over on the ground near their new edifice, had been secured by the town and put up in a central down in town location, the alarm could always be quickly sounded and everyone would know what it meant.

Don't you all feel like it would be a great fire protector to have this bell installed for that purpose so a crowd could always be gathered quickly in case of fire?

A town the size of Clanton, without an organized fire department and no fire alarm service is certainly taking big chances.

Pistol shooting and back-firing cars sound so much alike that neither attracts much attention these days.

Ford Steel Body Truck $490

L. O. B. Detroit

Why Commercial Users Prefer the Ford

There is much significance in the fact that more than 75% of all commercial cars of one-ton capacity or less in the United States are Fords.

This overwhelming preference for Ford haulage units has its basis in the low cost of Ford transportation, the rugged construction of the truck itself, and its unusual adaptability to every line of industry.

Mechanical excellence, simplicity of design and ample power are further factors that have contributed to the popularity of the Ford One-Ton Worm Drive Truck.

The Ford One-Ton Truck equipped with an all-steel body and cab is now available as a complete unit, priced at $490 L.O.B. Detroit. Screen sides and canopy roof that may be easily fitted to this unit are supplied at small additional cost.

NOTHING DOING

A considerable delegation from Clanton, Verbena and other interested places, went down last Friday to appear before the Highway Commission in regard to the routing of the B. & M. Highway from Clanton south.

They came back without accomplishing anything in particular in that line, in fact, one member of the party told us that the Commissioners gave them to understand very clearly that they did not want to hear anything more from anybody in regard to the final routing of the highway from here to Montgomery. In fact, he said, that they broadly intimated that when they got ready to locate that road they would be governed by the facts and data already before them and that discussion was useless.

This gentleman told us that he was satisfied that it had already been determined to detour the road by White City and Prattville and he is, like the rest of us, bitterly opposed to that proposition.

If this detour is finally made it will demonstrate to everyone that the road is not being constructed with the view of benefiting a majority of the people who are paying for it, but primarily in the interest of certain classes and individuals who are personally to be benefitted and accommodated by this absurd detour.

Facts are facts, and comment on this freakish proposition is unnecessary. The service to a 10 per cent minority will result right in the face of a 90 per cent majority. A great many inexplicable things occur in our government affairs these days.

HIGHWAY CONTRACT LET MONDAY

Contractor Cox, of Clanton, and Contractor Taylor, of Sylacauga, will do the Grading

Every citizen of Chilton County will no doubt rejoice to learn that the contract for 17 miles of the Chilton section of the B. & M. Highway was let last Monday.

Hope deferred maketh the heart sick" and we have certainly had cause for a great deal of "sickness" along that line. It began to look to some of us like the finances would all vanish before we got any road at all, but our anxiety is over now, for preliminary work on the grading has already begun and the contract calls for this part of the work to be completed by Oct. 1st.

Both of these contractors are experienced men on this kind of work and are hustlers, so we can all rest assured that the grading will go forward rapidly unless the weather conditions make it impossible.

The contract for the work was let to a gentleman from Connersville, Ala., and is entirely a separate contract from the grading. He is said to be an expert in this kind of work and will, no doubt, push his part to completion without any delay.

After much discussion by the Highway Commission and the State and Federal engineers, it was decided to finish this section of the highway with concrete Asphalt, and other finishing compounds, were all freely discussed and investigated, but, finally, the concrete finish was selected and the contract covering this important part of the work was let to an incorporated firm of Louisville, Ky., who specialize in work of that nature.

So much for that. Now, it is being broadly intimated, by some people who claim to know, that the balance of the Chilton county highway project will be let in June.

We do not give this out as an authentic piece of news, but merely as a rumor.

In regard to the location of this other section of the highway, we were informed by some of the citizens who appeared before the Commissions last Friday, for the purpose of protesting against the Prattville detour, that it was broadly intimated to them that no more delegations were wanted, and that in future all complaints could be filed, in regard to that matter, in writing. This delegation seems inclined to the idea that this objectional detour will be made finally and that our efforts against it will do nothing more than to possibly delay the work to some extent.

So far as we are personally concerned we do not now, nor do we ever expect to feel like this is a just consideration of the voters and taxpayers of Alabama who are furnishing the cash for this work, but, as we have said before, if it must go that route, whether or not, why let it go, so that we may get one good road, at least, in Chilton county.

From the very first, we have done and said everything we could in favor of adopting the original route, that was promised to the people by all of the propaganda and speakers who toured the State in the interest of the Road Bond issue, we do not feel now like it is just or right to go back on them in this matter, it is good philosophy to take "half a loaf" instead of going hungry and it is good philosophy to get all you can out of a government project after the control of the situation is utterly out of your hands.

We express ourselves candidly on such matters as these because we believe absolutely in being honest. One of our subscribers recently charged us with being antagonistic to the old highway route, because we said it was probable that the road would go by Prattville. He had failed to give us credit for anything we had said or done against that proposition and questioned our democracy. Such things as that happen, but the absurdity of them is manifest. Our readers know the facts and we have no apologies to offer. Our record is in print.

"My Children Just Love Liv-o-lax"

"For some time, I have been giving the children Liv-o-lax for the condition which I used to think called for calomel and castor oil," said a Charlotte mother.

"I think there is nothing more terrible than to have to give children those awful doses, which I wouldn't think of taking myself."

"Dr. Hand told me, in his drug store, how he worked up the formula of Liv-o-lax, just to do away with this unpleasant necessity, how Liv-o-lax, though a pleasant-tasting liquid remedy, acts on the liver in just the way required. Since I gave it one trial, I have been happy to have it in house, because the children just love to take it."

"And Liv-o-lax is an all-round family laxative. It is just as good for the grown-ups as it is for the children. Get Liv-o-lax at your drug store—Just one trial will convince."

BAPTIST MISSIONS GREATLY EXTENDED

THE WORK ON FOREIGN FIELDS SHOWS LARGE EXPANSION FROM FORWARD MOVEMENT

NEW COUNTRIES ENTERED

Southern Forces Now Have Missionary Fields on Every Side of Globe With Audience of 900,000,000.

DR. J. F. LOVE, Sec. Foreign Mission Board

Indicating the extent to which the foreign mission work of the Southern Baptist Convention has been set forward by the larger proceeds that have come to it from the Baptist 75 Million Campaign, Dr. J. F. Love, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, reports that since 1919, when the Campaign was projected, the following increases in the work of that board have been made: Number of foreign missionaries on the field has increased from 328 to 540, number of native workers from 627 to 2,820, number of churches from 505 to 891, number of church members from 49,659 to 103,328, number of self-supporting churches from 143 to 211, number of baptisms per year from 5,635 to 12,811, number of Sunday schools from 760 to 1,447, number of Sunday school pupils from 36,115 to 87,407, number of day schools from 612 to 796, number of pupils in day schools from 15,722 to 32,789, and contributions per year from $173,373 to $437,568.

Baptisms Gain Rapidly

Nearly as many persons have been baptized by the missionaries on the foreign fields since the Campaign began as had been baptized during all the seventy-five years of missionary operations prior to the inception of this movement, Dr. Love reports. This does not include Russia, where more than one million members have come into the Baptist churches in recent years. Nearly one-fourth as many persons were baptized on the foreign fields last year as there were members, all told, on the foreign fields when the Campaign began.

At the time the Campaign began Southern Baptists were operating only in Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, China, Japan, Africa and India. As a result of the larger proceeds made available from the Campaign the board has been enabled to enter the new fields of Spain, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Roumania, and Russia in Europe, and Palestine and Siberia in Asia. This gives to Southern Baptists a total missionary audience of 900,000,000, or more than one-half the total population of the globe.

Older Fields Re-Enforced

But of more significance than the entry into these new fields is the reinforcement that has come to the work in the older fields, in the estimation of the officials of the Foreign Mission Board. This reinforcement consists not only in sending out many new workers but providing larger equipment in the way of church houses, mission residences, schools, hospitals, orphanages, publishing houses and the like. Summarizing the growth that has come in the forces on the older fields since the Campaign began the following results are pointed out:

Number of churches, 78% increase; number of church members, 108% increase; number of church buildings, 45% increase; number of schools, 55% increase; number of pupils, 108% increase; number of residences for missionaries, 94% increase; number of foreign missionaries, 63% increase; number of native missionaries, 264% increase; number of hospital buildings, 21% increase; number of treatment centers, 81% increase; number of hospital beds, 104% increase.

Much Remains To Be Done

With all the increases that have come in the foreign mission work only a portion of the program that was contemplated for foreign missions has been accomplished as yet. It is in the hope of completing this program through more effectively equipping the work and workers on both the older fields and the new ones that the representatives of the Foreign Mission Board are cooperating with those of the 75 Million Campaign in an effort to complete the payments of all subscriptions to this movement.

HOSPITAL NOTES

By Rev. P. G. Carter, Former Pastor of The Clanton Baptist Church.

A little more than two years ago it was my privilege to help promote the Central Alabama Hospital, and to inscribe my name as a charter member. The two years record of the unparalleled success of this splendid institution has more than justified its existence, and demonstrated the fact that this is one of the best places in the State for the care of the sick. Frequently the hospital is the place where people go expecting to recover their health, but through incompetency, mismanagement, or neglect they go there to die. Not so with Central Alabama Hospital. It is one of such institutions in the State rapidly becoming recognized where its patrons go to get well. Indeed it is possible that some through lack of confidence, prejudice or ill advice went to the larger hospitals of the State only to meet their death might have been living today as the result of the individual careful attention and treatment that is administered by the efficient local hospital. Walking living monuments are in Clanton today whose lives have been saved through the local hospital if for no other reason than when seriously sick they were able to avoid the terrible strain and danger of a long railroad journey, and the vibration of the ambulances in transit to some city hospital. Can anything be more convincing to the unbiased or unprejudiced mind than the following statistics for the past two years up to April 12th, 1924—Number of cases treated:

Eye, ear, nose and throat.....	42
Amputations.....	16
Pelvic surgery.....	24
Appendicitis.....	57
General surgery.....	119
Medical cases.....	101
Children born.....	17
Total.....	376

Notwithstanding all these cases treated there have only been 25 deaths during its entire history. An analysis of these deaths will show that in most every case they were hopeless from the beginning, some of them being in a dying condition when they reached the hospital, and passing out very shortly after reaching the institution. This was true of two diphtheria cases, four appendicitis cases two cancer cases that were hopeless, and various others that could be mentioned in detail if space permitted.

Indeed it is just to say that if the circumstances of the deaths that have occurred were thoroughly investigated there is not a hospital in the state that can compare with this record, in its low percentage of mortality. With such a record as this it is a matter of surprise that the hospital is not taxed to its full capacity all the time. If because of the general good health of the people who live in the territory it serves, then the citizenship have reason to be thankful. If because of the rapidity of the recovery of those who have and do patronize this hospital then it is a strong recommendation for its efficiency and service. If through the lack of co-operation or prejudice on the part of the medical fraternity than it surely is time for this to cease in the best interests of those who should be the recipients of the splendid humanitarian service now being rendered.

There are some things that are essential to the success of such an institution. One is a competent efficient staff. The statistics quoted distinctly show that in Dr. V. J. Gregg as the Head Surgeon the Central Alabama Hospital has one who is establishing for himself an enviable record for the remarkable success not only of his surgical operations, but for the general medical care of those to whom he has ministered. Of the 238 surgical operations major and minor only nine have died which were performed by the different surgeons. These were recognized as hopeless cases from the beginning, and only performed at the insistence of the patient as the last ray of hope for a possible recovery. The facts show that there is no operation of whatever kind, or however important, whether it be appendicitis in its acute forms, tumours, intricate maternity cases or of whatever nature, but that this skilful surgeon has mastered them all. Not to be misunderstood however it should be noted that other doctors both local and visiting have performed some of the operations tabulated. With the efficiency of the Head Surgeon one who is entitled to honor in his own country, must also be conceded the medical skill and surgical knowledge and experience of Miss Annie H. Gardner a full graduate nurse of extensive culture and training who is the Superintendent of the hospital and has held and can hold similar positions in any of the large hospitals of the State. These two make a great team: As a personal inmate for three weeks I can also testify to the culture and splendid personal of the faithful, attentive and loyal staff of nurses that are employed. In fact the whole institution seems to be run in perfect harmony and fine business executive. None but a grouch could reasonably be dissatisfied in any way with the service and attention that is given.

These facts should be sufficient to convince any unbiased mind and to break down all barriers of personal prejudice or pecuniary purpose.

I have written this article of my own volition without any solicitation from other sources with the sole purpose in view of letting the public know and especially suffering humanity of the splendid service now being rendered at the minimum of expense by the wonderful Central Alabama Hospital located at Clanton, Alabama.

Avoid Using Castor Oil

—W. L. Hand,

Nobody likes to give or take castor oil. There is really hardly any need for it since the invention of Liv-o-lax.

And Liv-o-lax fills a double need. It has a marked action on the liver as well as the digestive tract, and so it can be used in cases of bilious attack, and when a cold is coming on, it takes the place of calomel and castor oil. Literally hundreds of mothers have earnestly thanked me for putting this good remedy on the market.

Children love to take Liv-o-lax and it is just as good for the same conditions in adults.

A bottle of Liv-o-lax costs but 30c at any drug store.

A GREAT REDEEMING ACTION

While it is a fact that the present Congress has failed to do any constructive legislation so far and has been a game of politics from the start to finish, we have some hope for the future.

Last week the Johnson Immigration bill was in the lower house. It is a wonderful stride in the direction of helping America for Americans, and nerves, and will receive the hearty endorsement of every true American citizen, from the mountains to the sea and from ocean to ocean.

Of course, the labor barons who have made their millions by importing cheap labor from the worthless criminal scum of the old countries, opposed this bill with all their might. But the house passed it by an enormous majority.

In the Senate it would have been a doubtful fight, had not the Japanese question in Washington come out with threatening letter demanding that the Senate kill it, or prepare to suffer dire consequences at the hands of the country.

It overshoot his mark that time and the Senate, to their everlasting credit, called his bluff and passed the measure by a vote of 94 to 2.

The bill practically excludes the yellow races, Japan and China, from further admission into our country. It also cuts, almost to the vanishing point, the terrible influx we have unloaded on us since the great war from those bohemian and social countries that have ruined and debased themselves, and are making their business to spread their influence in every direction possible.

No people believe that the present bill will veto this bill in an effort to control the foreign vote in the election.

If he does go to that length of gravity, unless Congress changes its mind wonderfully, they will pass it with all ease, over his veto. Every true American citizen without borders is standing behind our Congress in this commendable effort to restore the rights of the owners of this great land of freedom.

FOR TREASURER

Mr. L. B. Thorsby, announces next week as a candidate for County Treasurer.

OBITUARY

On April 12th, the Death Angel visited the home of Mr. Bookholdt and gently wafted his spirit home to rest who gave it. Dear Mr. Bookholdt leaves a wife and two children, a son and a daughter, and a large family of friends who will miss his loss. We are not allowed to say for your loss is Heaven's gain.

Mr. Bookholdt was sick for a long time, but bore his sufferings without a murmur. To know him was to love him and all we can do is to so live that we can meet him in Heaven. He said some time ago he was ready and waiting for the summons to come.

Our sympathy and prayers go out to his loved ones that they meet him once more.

Weep not, dear friends and loved ones, though he is here no more. He has gone to join the angels upon the shining shore. He is gone, but not forgotten. Never will his memory fade.

Sweetest thoughts will ever linger around the grave where he was laid. The pearls gates were opened and a gentle voice, said, come and with and farewells spoken he has reached his Heavenly Home.

One by one our loving Saviour gathers his flowers so rich and rare and transplants in his garden to bloom forever there.

He is sleeping, sweetly sleeping in a new made grave today. While we are weeping sadly weeping for the dear one gone away.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

HASLAM-DYER

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was that of Miss Lorene Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dyer of Stanton, and Mr. Gilbert Earl Haslam of Piedmont, which took place at the Stanton Baptist church, Saturday afternoon, April 5th at 1 o'clock.

The church was appropriately decorated with palms and Easter lilies. The nuptial music was furnished by Mr. Bolin DuBose who sang the "Song of Love" from Schubert. Mrs. H. G. Dyer sang "All For You" and "Three Questions."

Mr. J. W. Quinn played "Reverie" on the Violin, accompanied by Miss Elsie Schurter, who also played "The Girl's Wedding March."

Mrs. Vernon Dyer attended the bride as matron of honor, while Miss Ernestine Dyer, sister of the bride, and Miss Blanche Haslam, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids. Dr. T. H. Dyer of Atlanta served as best man, and Dr. Parson, of Atlanta, and Mr. A. L. Dyer, brother of the bride, were ushers. The four little flower girls were little Misses Helen Nix, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Nix of Maplesville, Helen Martin daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Martin, Plantersville, Margaret Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cox, Plantersville, Dorothy Rush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Rush, and Miss G. E. Rush.

These little girls were in geometric dresses in pastel shades.

The ring bearer was Master Guy Webb, Jr. of Piedmont, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Webb. Misses Mildred and Vivian Schurter, Miss Eoline McCulla and Miss Nell Fagan were the ushers and wore beautiful geometric dresses in pastel shades.

The bride was lovely in white georgette with crystal beads and wore a veil with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and valley lilies.

The attendants wore beautiful georgette gowns in pastel shades and carried shower bouquets of sweet peas.

Mrs. Haslam, as Miss Lorene Dyer is a very talented and charming young lady being socially popular among the college set. She received her A. B. degree from Howard College in January and taught in the Stanton Junior High School this past session.

Mr. Haslam's family is very prominent in Piedmont, where his father is Superintendent of the cotton mills. Mr. Gilbert E. Haslam will receive his M. D. degree from Emory University in June. After a short wedding trip the young couple will return to Atlanta.

L&N Taxes Greater Than Dividends

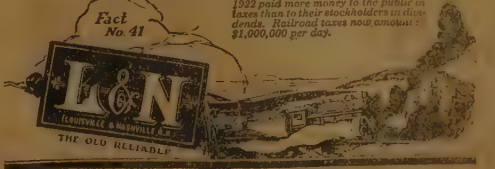

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad's tax bill for the year 1923 amounted to $6,372,340, or nine per cent more than was paid in dividends to the stockholders of the Railroad who assume all risk and responsibility for the Road's operation.

The L. & N. is called upon each year to make an increasingly heavy payment of taxes to the Federal, State, County and City treasuries throughout the fifteen states in which it operates. Taxes per mile in 1913 were $365; in 1923 they were $1,265, an increase of 246 per cent. The investment in L. & N. property in the meantime increased 55 per cent.

The Railroads pay taxes to maintain the government, improve the roads, provide schools and other public institutions, and for many other purposes in order to make the country a better place in which to live. It is apparent therefore that the payment of taxes by the railroads redounds tremendously to the public interest.

The L. & N. is always agreeable to the payment of its just proportion of taxes, yet it is manifest that it, and the other railroads of the country cannot bear their proper share of such tax burdens and at the same time effect desirable improvements and additions except they be permitted to earn a reasonable return upon the value of their property devoted to transportation service.

The railroads of the United States in 1923 paid more money to the public in taxes than to their stockholders in dividends. Railroad taxes now amount to $1,000,000 per day.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE YARDS

"Main Street can't train girls to earn a living," is a plaint that runs through thousands of letters, in one wording or another, from girls who seek careers. True, it is that courses in biology, in art, in medicine, are not to be found at any crossroads. But suppose a fury of desire to paint people—or to cut them up and remold them nearer to good health's desire—doesn't drive Mary off Main Street? Shall she forsake family and friends and all the comfortable, homely things one grows up with, for a casual career? If one's just the average girl, may not the little home town learn something of everything, help out if the great test comes?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.

Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.

The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Mary Marshall wouldn't go back to Marshalltown. After a generous portion of stupidity on my part and of shyness on hers, the story came out. John, Sr., was in a Washington hospital, shell-shocked. His chances for sanity lay in seeing Mary and John, Jr., every day. A job was found for Mary as correspondence clerk in the telegraph division of the United States Railroad administration. It was no charity job, either. "There isn't anything she didn't learn something about in that little dump of an office in the railroad yards," her chief said later. "She's all to the good."

For obvious reasons, Mary Marshall and Marshalltown aren't her real name and address. But the story is real to the core.

BUSINESS, BRAINS AND BREECHES

City jobs and salaries are time wasters, according to Ruth Fleschbach. She thinks she would probably earn the largest income of any person in Hays, Kan., and fully intends to make it larger within two years.

The chief set-back she has found is the belief of the average chair-warmer in the average big office that "only a man can do that"; it's contagious, and the girl wastes time accepting the dictum that business, brains and breeches are inseparable.

Ruth Fleschbach was orphaned when she was three. At seventeen she was teaching. At nineteen her savings had gone into a commercial course and she tried five jobs in one year looking for one that would pay more than $750 a week. For the sixth, "I corralled" a bunch of positions for part-time. Soon I was earning the $15 a week I had set out to get. But it kept me racing all the way from the city market (this was in Kansas City) to the far corners of uptown.

"I applied for every position I heard about, sometimes waiting in line with 50 others. When I answered one at the manager looked at me and the 'baby doll' who sat next me, and said: 'Two years' experience required.' My letter had said I had had ten months. So I looked at the baby doll and then at the manager and said: 'You won't be able to buy my services for $50 a month, then?' Two weeks later he had fired the pretty girl and I was on my way. In five years there I reached $90 a month, but that was the most any girl could hope for.

"In a fervor of patriotism I turned court reporter in Hays so the young man could go to the front. That paid me, with fees, about $150 a month." After other adventures Miss Fleschbach became successively secretary of the chamber of commerce and publicity director of a building and investment company. Her ambition is to start an advertising agency, "right in Hays to help the small town merchant advertise his goods and compete with the mail order houses."

HOW TO GET RID OF RATS IN THE HOUSE

Thorough Cleanliness Discourages Presence.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Thorough cleanliness and orderliness discourage the presence of rats and constitute a strong incentive for them to seek other quarters. To eliminate food and hiding places entirely is to eliminate rats. This is not always possible, but the nearer the approach to this condition the more simple the rat-ridance problem becomes.

The most important means of eliminating food and shelter are to store foodstuffs in rat-proof containers, to dispose of waste and garbage in light-covered vessels and to prevent the accumulation of trash, refuse and other similar material. Not only does lack of food and shelter reduce the breeding of rats, but increased hunger renders poisoning and trapping more effective.

The most efficient means known to the department for destroying rats is by poisoning, and poison is recommended for the purpose wherever it can be used with safety. Powdered barium carbonate is an inexpensive mineral, and seems best adapted for poisoning rats. It is both odorless and tasteless, and baits containing it are readily taken by these pests. It also has the advantage of being slow in its action, so that rats affected by it usually have time to leave the premises in search of water or to return to their burrows before they succumb.

A variety of baits used separately not only gives the rat a choice of foods but tends to make it less suspicious. One kind of each of the following classes of food mixed with barium carbonate is recommended:

(1) Meat or other animal substance.—Ham-brook steak, sausage, fish, liver, bacon, or cheese.

(2) Vegetables and fruits.—Thin slices of muskmelon, apple, tomato, or cucumber, canned corn, or squash or pumpkin seed; or mashed banana, boiled carrot, or baked sweet potato.

(3) Cereals.—Rolled oats, bread, corn meal, flour or cake. Kitchen scraps and garbage can be worked into the ration to advantage.

Baits should be fresh and preferably of good quality.

The powdered barium carbonate should be thoroughly mixed and worked into the soft baits in the proportion of 1 part of the mineral to 4 parts of the selected food. Add water when necessary to make the baits moist. Baits moistened to the consistency of a soft mush are particularly acceptable to rats in dry weather.

Barium carbonate should be sifted over sliced baits and rubbed well into them with the fingers or a knife. The slices should be thin and should be moistened if necessary in order to attain as nearly as possible the 1 to 4 ratio. Soft baits may be mixed with the hands or with a spoon.

A teaspoonful, or its equivalent, of each of the three or more kinds of baits prepared, should be exposed in places frequented by rats. In buildings baits should be set on strips of paper or boards where they may be easily removed.

A convenient and successful method of exposing baits is to place a teaspoonful in each of a number of small paper sacks and drop them in places accessible to rats or frequented by them. The sacks should be closed by twisting the top. Baits distributed in this manner serve to allay the suspicion of rats and will be taken by them more readily than if exposed in the open.

Barium carbonate is a relatively mild poison, but the danger from accidents cannot be overemphasized. Keep it out of the reach of children and irresponsible persons and from domestic animals and fowls.

VERY SIMPLE MATTER TO PREPARE COOKIES

Housewife May Imitate Cakes Made by Baker.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is a simple matter to prepare fancy cookies, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The top may be decorated by pressing onto each cookie before baking a plump raisin or pieces of other dried fruit and dusting lightly with sugar. Ground nuts may be strewn over the top, or halves of nuts, such as pecans, English walnuts, and almonds be pressed onto the surface either singly or in form of a design.

Again, the cookies may be coated with a plain icing when they come from the oven and halves of nuts or fancy forms in the shape of stars, diamonds, etc., cut from fruit paste may be used to further decorate the cookies. The plain icing may be mixed with shredded coconut, ground nuts, or a mixture of nuts and dried fruits and spread on top or between two plain cookies. Marshmallow frosting, soft chocolate frosting, maple frosting, may all be used as filling between cookies. In fact, the housewife may imitate a number of fancy cakes of the confectioner if she wishes to spend a little extra time and care on her baking.

The following recipe for rich cookies makes a good basis for fancy cookies, which are so useful to have on hand at holiday time, for afternoon tea, or the unexpected caller.

Rich Cookies.
1 cupful sugar 2 teaspoonfuls
1/2 cupful butter 1/2 cupful powder
2 eggs 1/2 teaspoonful salt
1 tablespoonful Spice or flavor, to water suit taste
2 1/2 cupfuls flour

Cream together the sugar and shortening; add to this the well-beaten eggs, the flavoring, and the flour with which the salt and baking powder have been sifted. This dough will be about the consistency of that for drop cookies. If rolled cookies are desired, omit the water, and increase the flour to three cupfuls, or enough to make a dough stiff enough to roll thin. Cut and bake as usual. Dried fruits, nuts, etc., may be added if desired.

Household Questions

Somebody has called the family breakfast the backbone of the nation.

The hot school lunch and bright pupils have a peculiar affinity for each other.

TALL WOMEN NEED TALL TABLES AND SINK

... Show Different Statures at Sinks.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The right working height for each individual woman is a matter of great importance for the comfort of the homemaker. When planning a new home, have the fixed working surfaces, such as the sink, tub, kitchen cabinet and pantry counter, placed at carefully determined levels. Tables which ordinarily came in standard sizes, can be raised by means of blocks or casters. In adjusting oneself to equipment already purchased it usually pays to have the height of the working surfaces altered if one is very short or very tall, or if the original builder placed the sink or other working surface at badly chosen levels.

The illustration, showing three women of different statures at sinks of different heights, is an excellent proof of the need for variation in working levels. Extension specialists, directed by the Washington Agricultural college and the United States Department of Agriculture, have found by experiment that the young girl who lacks an inch of being five feet tall should have the sink set so that its bottom, which would be at a point 6 inches below her elbow, comes 81 1/2 inches from the floor; a woman of medium height, 5 feet 3 1/2 inches, would work best at the bottom of the sink were 34 1/2 inches from the floor, while a tall woman, 5 feet 8 inches in height, would not be able to work comfortably unless the point 6 inches below her elbow, the bottom of the sink, is 36 inches from the floor.

Lesson for April 27

AMOS AND HOSEA PLEADING FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS (Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6; Hosea 6:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Hate the evil, and love the good."—Amos 5:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Became a Saint.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Amos Denounces Drunken Revelers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sins Denounced by Amos and Hosea.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sins That Destroyed Israel.

The kingdom of Israel reached a high state of prosperity in the time of Jeroboam II, and with it came a condition of luxury, corruption and wickedness. Our lesson is a temperance lesson and applies to other things as well as indulgence in intoxicating liquor. Our age and nation are intoxicated with pleasure, pursuit of gain and selfish ambition.

1. The Sins Which Ruined Israel (Amos 6:1-6).

1. Reckless Security (vv. 1-3). They were blind to the evils that surrounded them. They were living in a fool's paradise, closing their eyes to the approaching storm of judgment as predicted by Amos. They trusted in the mountains of Samaria for their protection. They regarded their city as impregnable. They no doubt regarded the utterances of Amos as the dream of a fanatic. The chief ones of the nation were so puffed up with pride that they failed to read the signs of the times in the light of history (v. 2). To disregard the lessons of history by dismissing the thought of impending judgment is to bring near the seat of violence" (v. 3).

2. Luxury (vv. 4-6). Periods of prosperity are always characterized by corruption and luxury. The luxury of Samaria expressed itself in:

(1) Extravagant Furniture (v. 4). They had beds of ivory, perhaps wood inlaid with ivory.

(2) Laziness (v. 4). They stretched themselves upon their couches—living lives of indolence.

(3) Feasted on delicacies (v. 4). The implication here is that they had their dainties out of season. This is what many pride themselves in. They buy what they desire, regardless of what it costs. In many instances men and women are living in gluttony while others are destitute.

(4) Adorned their feasts with music (v. 5). They sang idle songs, even invented musical instruments for this purpose. They prostituted the noble art of music to their sensual feasts. How like the times in which we live.

(5) They drank wine (v. 6). They were not content with ordinary drinking vessels. They drank from howls, indicating excessive drinking. They were so mastered by the intoxicating cup that their feasts, which were adorned with the refinements of music, ended in drunkenness.

3. Failure to Grieve for Joseph (v. 6). Joseph here stands for Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons. Ephraim became the principal tribe of the northern kingdom, so Joseph is used as a synonym for the nation. Many are indulging in infamous luxuries entirely indifferent to the groanings of others. There is need of a modern Amos to thunder God's judgment upon all those who are living in luxury and who are at ease in Zion—the inevitable issue of such living, the prophet assures them, would be that they should go into captivity (v. 7) and their proud city be delivered up to their enemies (v. 8).

11. The Remedy Proposed (Hosea 6:1-6).

1. Turn Back to God (v. 1). The only way for sinning individuals and nations to escape the judgment of God is with heartbreaking sorrow to repent and return to God. Hosea assures them that though God had torn and smitten them He will heal and bind up if they repent.

2. Believe in His Power to Restore (v. 2). This power even extends to a national resurrection for Israel.

3. Obedience (v. 3). It is through the obedient walk and communication with the Lord that they were to know His forgiving mercy.

4. The Issue (vv. 3-6). Such penitence would make restoration absolutely certain. Grace is even more certain than the laws of nature. Just as showers result in fruitfulness in nature, conformity with the righteous commands of the Lord will result in blessings from Him, for His Supreme desire is not for man to bring offerings of sacrifice but to walk in the knowledge of God.

The Bondage of Fear

Like the cellar-growing vine is the Christian who lives in the darkness and bondage of fear. But let him go forth, with the liberty of God, into the light of love, and he will be like the plant in the field, healthy, robust, and joyful.—W. H. Beecher.

Think

The greatest events of an age are its best thoughts. It is the nature of thought to find its way into action.—Christian Cynosure.

MESSAGE OF THE WITHERED ROSE

By ETHEL M. RICE

(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Why the grinch, Webster?"

The young man addressed continued for some moments to gaze moodily out of the window before he answered:

"Uncle William, women make me miserable."

"Humph! Rumpus with Charlotte?"

"Well, not a rumpus, exactly, but she gave me back my ring."

"So?" The gray-haired man smiled, apparently unimpressed by this surprising bit of news. "All her fault, I suppose?"

"Oh, of course, not entirely. She got pestered—I know I shouldn't have gone—oh well, if she cares to get over it, all right; At, she doesn't, she needn't."

"Webster," the older man sank into the comfortable chair by the open fireplace and motioned to his nephew, "Draw up that other chair and sit down. I want to tell you a story about a friend of mine. Will you listen?"

"Go ahead."

"Webster, this happened several years before you were born. The friend of whom I speak—Tom—we will call him by his right name—loved a girl just as you love Charlotte. She was a beautiful girl. They were engaged, and were to be married the following September. It was mid-summer when the quarrel took place, a misunderstanding, and determination on both sides not to 'give in.' They parted—just as you and Charlotte have done—and she gave him back the ring. Days passed; weeks; and all this time the boy was craving her companionship; thinking always of her; knowing that he had but to go to her and admit his share of the blame, yet too proud to go. And she? She, too, was proud and obstinate. In the meantime, another suitor saw and made the most of his opportunity. Desperate with longing and disappointment, she said 'yes' to the wrong man. Two months later he married a broken-hearted woman. She lived three years."

Uncle William paused and gazed long into the glowing embers of the fire, as if in them he visioned the memory of bygone days. Then, without lifting his eyes from the picture, he went on:

"I went to the marriage ceremony. I'll never forget it, nor the tragic look on that young bride's face." Again he paused.

"Was Tom there?" ventured the boy. "Yes, Tom was there, and they both realized too late—their mistake. I remember she carried yellow roses—tea roses, I think they were—and halfway up the stairs on the way to her dressing-room she paused, and leaning over the banisters, tossed them out among the guests. All but one, Tom she kept. And as she passed Tom on her way out, she pressed it into his hand."

"Did Tom ever marry?"

"No, he never married."

The two men in silence watched the last ember flicker, die down, flicker again and go out. Then the younger man arose.

"I'm going to Charlotte," he said.

"Springtime! A day when all nature seemed to be bursting with the sheer joy of new being. Springtime! The air filled with music of the twittering and calling of birds. Springtime! Mating time."

"Alone at last, little wife."

The girl smiled happily.

"Alone at last," she repeated, "Webster, who would think, to see us now, that we ever could have quarreled?"

"We're never going to do so again, are we, dearie?"

"No, never, Webster. Wasn't it a pretty wedding, even if it was ours? The only disappointment was that your good Uncle William couldn't be here."

"Your Uncle William, you mean. Yes, I'm sorry. It's a pity that the 'flu' couldn't have held off a few days longer, if he had to have it. I'm glad he's on the mend, anyway. Oh, that reminds me."

He drew from his pocket a small package and handed it to Charlotte.

"Uncle wished me to give this to you, to be opened when we were alone."

"Do you know what it is?"

"No, dear."

"Let's open it together."

There was a note which they read together:

"My dear little new-niece—From an old man who might have been spared a life of loneliness had he but realized its value, comes this priceless motto: 'Bear and Forbear.' Cherish it as you do your marriage vows, for therein lies the secret of your future happiness. I learned it—too late. Webster will tell you the story. I, too, once loved—your mother, William Thomas Akers."

Silently they opened the package. Within lay a crystal jewel-casket, bound with gold. Inside of this, resting on its bed of crimson, lay a single withered, yellow rose.

Her Idea

"He had bored the fair young thing to tears."

"It costs a great deal more than one would think to become a broad-minded, intelligent man of the world," he remarked.

The young thing saw her opportunity, and took it.

"I know it does," she said, "and I don't blame you for saving your money."

HER BACK ACHED LIKE TOOTHACHE

Virginia Lady Says She Was Run Down, Suffering Severe Backache, But Took Cardui and Improved Wonderfully.

Metz, Va.—At "Cherry Grove," an historic Westmoreland County farm, near here, lives Mrs. E. L. Mozingo, who tells of an interesting experience with Cardui. Mrs. Mozingo was in a very run-down condition, she says, with no appetite and a severe backache. Several of her friends advised her to take Cardui and she wisely followed their advice.

"It was wonderful how much I improved," said Mrs. Mozingo. "This past summer," she continued, "I was again in a run-down condition. My baby is fourteen months old and as I had nursed him this took all my strength."

"I thought about Cardui and sent for a bottle—began to take it again. My baby had never come back on his feet since my baby came and my back ached like the toothache."

Shortly after I began to take Cardui again, my baby came back on his feet again and I have been better ever since. Now I never feel better in my life."

Mrs. Mozingo was advised by her friends to take Cardui. Now she herself "wants other women to know what a wonderful medicine it is." Ask those who have taken Cardui. They are sure to try it yourself.

Delicious, Flaky PIE CRUSTS

BAKE your favorite pie from a crust made of self-rising flour. The wholesome, flaky texture will reveal to you a new delight in pie making. Many excellent cooks find self-rising flour without equal for all kinds of delicious pastries.

Mrs. G., who has been a self-rising flour enthusiast for 21 years writes: "I like self-rising flour for pie crust because it makes a crust so light that anyone loves it. . . . I also make a great many tarts. Self-rising flour is especially fine for short-cakes. I make them of every kind of fruit, both fresh and canned, as well as with creamed chicken, fish or oysters."

Self-rising flour comes with just the right amount of pure phosphate baking powder already mixed in to give perfect baking results. Nowhere can you buy a more healthful food—nowhere can you obtain more value for your money than in good self-rising flour.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES FOR Making Perfect Discs with Self-Rising Flour. (1) See that your oven is hot; (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water; (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt; (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter; (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly.

The Art of Selling

Store Owner (to clerk)—Why did that woman leave without buying anything?

Girl—We didn't have what she wanted.

Brain and Growth

Dr. Hrdlicka says that the brain grows after the body's development ceases. The brain develops, with use, to the age of fifty or sixty, in some cases to an extent that the size of the head is actually increased. Aside from this physical development, the body seldom grows after the early twenties, although Dr. Hrdlicka says that under proper exercise, diet and living conditions the body may grow until about the thirtieth year.

DAIRY FACTS

FEED FOR DRY COWS IS MOST IMPORTANT

There is a tendency on the part of many dairymen to neglect the dairy cow when she is dry. Oftentimes she is put into some back pasture and forgotten, or if it is winter the grain is taken from her and she is given little attention.

The dry cow is going to be the producing cow, and her ability to produce during each succeeding lactation is partly dependent upon her condition at the time of freshening, writes C. L. Blackman in Wallace's Farmer. No dairy cow can do herself credit unless she freshens in a good, thrifty condition, for great demands are made on the cow at freshening time. The cow that is thin before freshening presents an emaciated appearance after freshening.

It is during the period shortly after freshening that the average cow milks heaviest, and a cow in low condition then can never do her best. Even if the cow is fed well after freshening, she must use large amounts of the feed to restore her depleted body.

Men who make large records have learned to take advantage of the tendency of good dairy cows to produce more milk than their feed warrants shortly after freshening. That is, at this time the cow in good condition milks the dash off her back, as we say. The cow that is in low condition has no reserve to call on, and consequently her milk flow decreases. Once the milk production is lowered for any length of time, it is practically impossible to restore it to its proper place. Thus, by not feeding the dry cow, the amount of production is decreased and her efficiency as a producer is lowered.

One of the well-known dairy feeders in Iowa has said that the feed given during the dry period was the cheapest feed used, meaning that it gave the largest returns. Do not lower the ability of your cow to produce by neglect during the dry period. Feed her liberally, so that she may have reserve strength and "flesh" to supply the demands made upon her.

Cows Freshened in Fall Are Highest Producers

That a definite relation exists between production per cow and income over feed cost is shown in Department Bulletin 1068, Relation of Production to Income From Dairy Cows, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The group that produced the most per cow ate the most on an average and always had the highest average income over cost of feed. At 100 pounds of butterfat per cow a year, the average income over cost of feed was $10. At 400 pounds of butterfat a year, the average income over cost of feed was $108. As production increased 4 times, the average income over cost of feed increased 10.8 times.

A former edition of this bulletin was exhausted by the heavy demand for it, and a reprint has just been issued. A reprint also has recently been published of Department Bulletin 1071, entitled Influence of Season of Freshening on Production and Income From Dairy Cows. The figures in this bulletin show that, on an average, the cows that freshened in the fall and early winter produced more milk and butterfat and had a higher average income over cost of feed than those that freshened at other times of the year.

Copies of these two bulletins may be obtained as long as the supply lasts by application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Soy Beans Are Valuable Source of Cattle Feed

Soy beans are a comparatively new source of protein to the dairyman. Results have shown that this plant proves a very valuable source of protein as a roughage as well as a concentrate. The beans may be ground and fed in the grain mixture. Because of the oil nature of the bean it is difficult to grind the seeds very finely.

The oil contained in the seeds has considerable commercial importance and several plants have been started in Iowa to extract the oil. The cake remaining is quite similar to cottonseed or oil meal, and compares very favorably with them in feeding value. Soy beans have proved to be about one-third more valuable when ground than linseed oil meal. The cake contains less oil than the cracked beans, but has about 7 per cent more protein. Soy beans are very palatable and may be fed in considerable quantities. The Iowa experiment station found that when oil meal was worth $45 a ton for milk production, cracked soy beans were worth $60 per ton.

Plan to Supply Minerals

Cows fed a legume hay and a balanced grain ration, such as the 4-2-1 mixture, usually need no mineral other than plenty of salt where they can get it at all times. However, cows fed crops that grow on acid soils may need minerals because these crops are usually deficient in mineral. If mineral is lacking its lack may be supplied by adding three or four pounds of wood ashes, lime or steamed bone meal to each 100 pounds of grain mixture. Never use raw bone meal.

STAYING HOME FROM WORK MEANS MONEY LOST

Many Women Know This by Experience

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You As It Helped These Women

Mrs. McDole's Experience

Ludington, Michigan.—"I suffered every month and was very irregular, had headaches all the time, was thin and pale, with no appetite. I had taken all kinds of medicines, and every doctor told me I would have to face an operation before I would be well again. I was doing factory work, and I had to stay at home so much that I was getting discouraged. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did so with good results. I am now feeling fine. I have advised all my girl friends, who have such troubles as I had, to take your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. THRESSA MCDOLE, 425 S. Rath Ave., Ludington, Mich.

Los Angeles, California.—"I was in such a condition that I was scarcely able to walk, even to do my housework. I had no energy, was depressed and often wished to die. I am a chef, but was totally unable to do any cooking. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it with success. After the fourth bottle I felt much better, and after the tenth I never felt better in my life, as it resulted in a complete recovery. I certainly recommend it to all I hear complaining and you can use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. MARY SULLIVAN, 923 E. 46th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Black Hole of Calcutta

The "Black Hole of Calcutta" was an apartment in which 156 English prisoners, captured by the Nawab siraj-ud-Daula, were confined over night of June 20, 1756. This apartment was 15 feet by 14 feet and 10 inches. It had only two small windows, obstructed by a veranda. The crush was dreadful, and after a night of terrible suffering from pressure, heat, thirst and want of air, there were left alive in the morning only 23 survivors.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble. Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

JUSTICE! HAVE WE ANY?

In regard to public road working, the ones who did not have the money to pay $5.50 have to work seven days which nets each man about seventy eight cents per day.

Is it right because a man can not pay $5.50 to secure a road exemption to be forced to work for so small a sum per day? Another thing that is not right the overseer in beat 10 is working his men 10 hours per day while in beat 5 the overseer is working his men only 8 hours per day.

As to truck owners having to pay $24.50 for state and county license and two cents on every gallon of gasoline burned and in addition to this our probate judge and county commissioners are imposing another tax on the truck owner while Coca cola, Lime cola, Cherokee and all gasoline and kerosene are not imposed on by the additional $11.50 tax.

All these license and gasoline taxes are supposed to go for the improvement of the public roads and from the fact of our highway they are made worse and worse.

I notice one man that is running a county commissioner has published that he believes that every buggy, and all other vehicles should have to pay license and one of the same commissioners that is trying to be re-elected.

It is a fact that we are all overburdened with taxes and licenses already without any more being added. So the only way to get rid of so much taxes and license and unfair road laws is to get out and keep out such men as would try to impose such laws on the people. Now let us see how a man stands on such things before you cast your ballot for him. Now we have a good man that will take half the amount of money and do twice as good for the county.

Let us be careful whom we put into office to make our lives over us in our county and handle our money.

THAT COTTON MILL

The Prospect Still Looks Good. Chamber of Commerce Ready to Do Their Part

The cotton mill situation still looks favorable. In fact, if the mill men really mean business we see no reason why the deal should not be promptly consummated and this long hoped for industrial plant become a reality.

In pursuance of the requirements of the mill men, the Chamber of Commerce has gone forward and secured options on several different sites for the location of the plant and they stand prepared to deliver either of these, at short notice, when the selection of the mill men is made. This was what was asked for and the request has been promptly complied with.

The mill men are expected to be in town this week to look over the situation and make their formal selection of a site. They will be met and all of their reasonable demands will be met. The people here are in earnest and mean to do business, so, the prospect is bright so far.

Now, good folks, don't rest on your oars and consider the work all done. We want a cotton mill and must have one. If these people do not come across, keep your irons in the fire and keep them hot, for there are many other mills looking for a southern location and we want to land one while the exodus is on.

We have the most ideal location in Alabama for a cotton mill, or for several other kinds of industrial enterprises, and it is absolutely up to us to let these facts be known.

We have the room, the raw material in abundance, the climate, the best health in the state, plenty of local labor, unlimited power that is absolutely ready and dependable at all hours and a citizenship that is equal to any in the world.

Keep your hand on the throttle and your eye on the rail until we land some of these industrial plants and then go to work to make them glad they came among us.

We expect every citizen, regardless of his political convictions to unite in this effort for the common good.

MR. MESSER WRITES OF THE CONTEST

Clanton, Ala., April 29th, 1924
To my friends and supporters in Chilton county:

In 1922 I made the race for Probate Judge of Chilton County. This campaign is history. A contest was instituted by me in good faith with the belief on my part and the part of my friends and supporters that success was very probable. The subsequent investigation, in spite of the deplorable condition in which the record of voters was found to be kept, sustains this belief.

I have found, however, that this contest cannot be waged to a successful termination on account of the following technicality:

The law requires that the contestant be a qualified voter. I find that I am not a qualified voter on account of the following state of facts. In 1903 and prior thereto I had been a resident of Coosa County, Alabama when on Dec. 26th 1903 I moved to Lee County. I paid my 1904 poll tax in Coosa County, which at that time, under the decision of the Supreme Court of Alabama, was proper, but the Court has later held that this payment was improper and should have been made in Lee County where on Oct. 1st, 1904 I was a resident.

It is not that I failed to pay the State what I was due but that it was paid in the wrong county. I am not a lawyer or cognizant with the technical phases of this matter, but I do know that I had the advice of public officials that I was properly qualified and the Probate Judge of this county, in his wisdom and judgement, found that I was a qualified voter and so published in this county's qualified list of voters.

I wish to state to my friends that I have been represented by council whose ability is not exceeded in this county or state, and who have handled this matter with the utmost loyalty, and I wish to express my most sincere thanks to them.

To my friends, I will say that I regret beyond expression the outcome of this case, and more than that, that the people of this county will have to bear for 4-12 more years with present conditions in this county. I thank my friends for their loyalty and wish to take this opportunity to express to them my heartfelt thanks and gratitude for their friendship and loyal support of the past.

WHAT NEXT?

In some towns in Louisiana the citizens have established a regular patrol who police the roads for several miles each night and capture the boys and girl joy riders who drive out to lonely places and park their cars and hold "petting parties."

It is a shame that such a course as that has become needed in any community, and it is doubly shameful that such conditions prevail in almost every community.

This is true of our town and of every other town that we know anything about. To us it is a sad and serious truth. We may be old fashioned in our ideas and ideals, but to our mind, there is nothing more beautiful nor more spiritual than a fair young girl who can face the world with a happy smile and an innocent countenance, nor is there anything more disgusting, nor is there anything more horrible, nor is there anything more deplorable, than to see a young girl wearing a smile that is palpably made to order, and travelling along with a swagger that indelibly stamps her as "one of the boys."

These joy riders and "petting parties" are being engaged in by the boys and girls who will be the fathers and mothers of the next generation. Do you feel like the things they learn at these lonely parties will qualify them for raising up a generation that will make the world wiser and better?

You all know and we know that these "petting parties" are of nightly occurrence. What are we going to do about it? Are the parents going to keep their daughters at home? Or will we travel on the road of last resistance and see our young people ruin their lives?

If arguments and advice fail we should adopt stronger measures.

Last week Mr. Wolf and family, who have been identified in Clanton for several years as the proprietors of the Best Shoe Shop, packed up their business and moved to Birmingham.

NEW COMERS

Mr. Elliot, a real shoe maker as well as repairer, from Prattville has secured the business house just vacated by the Best Shoe Shop, and has opened up his business there. If you want a fine or fancy pair of shoes made to measure and to order, go down and see him. He does some really classy work.

SOLDIER'S HOME

Not many people in Chilton county and Alabama realize what an important institution the "Soldier's Home" at Mountain Creek really is and the noble work that is being done there to care for the disabled Confederate Veterans.

This institution is under the able and wise supervision of Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Fowler. This couple never spares any time or means in seeing that the Confederate Veterans there are properly cared for and the services rendered that is necessary for his or her comfort during the remaining years that they live.

This Home covers twenty-five acres of land and consists of nine cottages, recently recovered and the tops painted green, a well equipped hospital, a fine auditorium, and in the near future will have new water tank, new mess hall, new lights and out buildings recovered.

If you have never visited it you should do so and see with your own eyes this beautiful, sanitary and well kept institution right here at our own doors.

Mr. L. E. Eddings and his son, Orin of Marvel, were here last Saturday. Mr. Eddings is quite a prosperous truck farmer and merchant in northern Bibb.

CROP SITUATION

From the most reliable data we have been able to obtain from quite a number of our farmer friends from over the county, equally as much cotton is being planted as was last year. In some sections the planting has been completed and in a number of farms cotton chopping is going forward.

For the past two weeks the weather conditions have been some what more favorable, and the small plants are growing off nicely under the warm sunshine and showers.

The boll weevil has also been reported as on the job in two or three locations. It is the general opinion that a much more general and concerted effort will be made to poison this pest this year than has been true in the past.

No bumper corn crop is reported, though most of our friends tell us that corn enough is generally being planted to "do the farm."

Most of our information on the fruit crop prospect is fairly favorable, though in some localities it was injured by the cold weather.

The strawberry crop is now on the market and some of them are very fine though many of the experienced growers tell us that the late cold weather in the early spring cut the crop down so far as a good yield is concerned. Gardens are said to be growing off splendidly and the outlook for vegetables is good.

Reports on the oat crop are not altogether so favorable.

CLANTON BALL TEAM

It is reported that the young men of Clanton are organizing a base ball club for the season of 1924.

We hope this is a fact and that they may succeed in gathering a bunch of ryal base ball artists together this year.

A good ball team, composed of clean sports, is a great advertisement for a town and a source of great satisfaction to their friends.

A REAL SANITARY DAIRY

Mr. Ed Miller has put up an entirely new dairy barn and it is built along the lines of the very latest ideas of sanitation as required by the largest cities.

It is handsomely painted up and thoroughly ventilated with cement floors and is as clean as a bran new pin.

Mr. Miller deserves success and he is bound to have it. We congratulate him for the splendid and high class service he has arranged to give the public.

AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY Rev. Sam Heath will fill the pulpit at the Baptist church next Sunday and Sunday night.

He is said to be a very able and interesting speaker and we would be-speak for him a good congregation.

SEND US YOUR JOB WORK

A FUNNY LABOR SITUATION

In the last few days we have heard several saw mill men complaining that they could not get labor enough to operate with.

Then, on the other hand, there is hardly a day but what we see people who are looking for employment and say they can find nothing to do.

This is a situation that looks rather peculiar. Why can not these people get together?

One thing, we think is in the way that should be settled on both sides. It is this.

If you are employing labor you should recognize the fact that the laborer has to live upon the fruits of his toil and unless you pay him enough to enable him to live, of course, he can not afford to work for you.

If a person has to starve, he is not able to work and, besides, he will live longer in idleness on an empty stomach than he will at hard work.

The employer should figure out the cost of living before he fixes his wage scale.

Then, on the other hand, the abnormal times during the war and since put foolish and fictitious ideas in the heads of a great many people who have to labor for a living. The daily wage advanced to unreasonable limits and a great many working men have yet to learn that we are getting back to normal conditions and a readjustment of wages is absolutely necessary.

Here are some facts for the laboring people to carefully consider. No employer can pay more for a day's work than he can get out of it. If he does he will soon go broke. A merchant can not buy goods and sell them for less than cost and remain in business.

If you can not make for the man you work for as much as he pays you, certainly you could not expect him to keep you in a job.

If he has his money invested in the business, your labor will have to be worth to him a little more than he pays you, if not he can not afford to operate for he is making nothing to his part, nor anything to pay for necessary repairs.

You see how it is. Wages must be adjusted so as to result in a live and let live policy, or neither party can afford to carry the work forward.

The employer who would undertake to work a starving crew should be run out of the country, and the laboring man who would undertake to hold up an employer and force him to pay for what he did not get, does not deserve any consideration.

Size these questions up on a fair and honest basis and let both sides do business on that line and you will soon have no complaint of a lack or labor on the one hand nor a lack of employment on the other.

IN TUSCALOOSA

Dr. S. J. Ezell left Monday morning for Tuscaloosa, where he goes to visit Rev. Judson S. Martin in a series of meetings at the Memorial Baptist church over there. He will probably be absent for two weeks.

Our good friend J. L. Williams, of route four, was here Monday. Mr. Williams is one of the five and thorough farmers in beat nine.

MUSCLE SHOALS

The disposition of Muscle Shoals has developed into a purely political game in Congress and there is not much probability that it will be finally disposed of until after the election.

Mr. Ford is cooling off in his allegiance to Mr. Coolidge as the wrangle in Congress goes on and his chances of landing the great industrial plum seem to grow less and less. He has not, as yet, condescended to unbend any from his assumed air of indifference, nor has he taken any steps to amend, or even explain his rather indefinite bid. The truth of the matter is that a close analysis of his proposition does not enable Congress, nor any one else, to understand exactly what he proposes to do, hence, Congress is slow in arriving at any conclusive idea as to its acceptance.

There is no doubt that the process for making nitrate as arranged for at the nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, is out of date and much more expensive than some of the later and more improved processes that are in operation. Consequently, if Mr. Ford had the plant, and it should cost him $100 per ton to make the nitrate, according to his bid, it would cost the farmer $108, as he wants 8 per cent for making it.

This would mean nothing whatever to the farmer and the nitrate, at that price would not sell, so Mr. Ford would not be under obligations to make any at all.

We have always been strong for Henry Ford, but business is business and where such vast industrial possibilities are involved, Congress is doing exactly right in demanding a clean cut bid, that means something definite with plenty of guarantees behind it to make it legal binding.

Mr. Ford did a wonderful deed for the public when he put the Muscle Shoals on the map as a very valuable asset, after a republican administration were preparing to junk it to spite Woodrow Wilson and his party, but, since he did that, it does not follow that he should be given the property he saved for the people.

If he really wants to develop that property he is business man enough to know how to get it and to know that his present bid is too indefinite to win.

Mr. Coolidge has promised to "deliver" it to him, but, unless he makes a clean cut business bid for it, we doubt the power of Mr. Coolidge to make good.

TO MEET AT 8:00 P. M.

Beginning next Sunday the evening services at the Baptist church will be changed to 8 o'clock sharp for the summer.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Passes Bonus Bill After Rejecting the Cash Option Amendment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

AT LAST the American ex-service man who fought in the World war seems assured of receiving a bonus, or as he prefers to call it, an adjusted compensation. The senate on Wednesday passed the bill essentially as it was adopted by the house, and in both cases the majority was so great that there is no doubt it would be repassed over a presidential veto. But the bonus provided for is not in cash, so it may be Mr. Coolidge can see his way clear to approval of the measure. He, like President Harding, was opposed to a cash bonus for the payment of which no special financial plan was offered.

According to the present measure, instead of cash the former service man will receive a twenty-year endowment insurance certificate on which he can obtain a loan after two years, equal to 90 per cent of the current cash value of the policy. This loan will be obtained through a bank which will be reimbursed by the government in the event of a default. The loan value of a $1,000 policy would be $87.53 at the end of two years, $153.52 in five years, and $359.19 in fifteen years.

Senator Copeland of New York, supported by a number of Democrats, tried to have the bill amended to provide for a cash option, but this was defeated, 37 to 48, because most of the senators felt it would mean the certain veto of the measure and perhaps its defeat. However, the Democratic leaders announced after passage of the bill that they considered it an unsatisfactory makeshift and that next winter they would make a fight for the cash option. If a Democratic administration is elected in the fall they believe they can so amend the law. With several minor amendments adopted on the floor, the bill was passed by a vote of 67 to 17. Eight Republicans and nine Democrats were recorded in opposition.

The cost of the bonus under the insurance plan is expected to be somewhere between $2,202,467,420, the figure given by the actuary of the veterans' bureau, and $3,631,047,691, the amount claimed by the treasury actuary. The cost the first year would be considerably in excess of $100,000,000.

Under its terms the basic rate of compensation is $1 a day for home service and $1.25 for overseas service, with maximums of $500 for home service and $625 for overseas service. The first sixty days of service are excluded from the computation. Enlisted men of the army, navy, and marine corps and officers up to and including captains in the army and marine corps and lieutenants in the navy are embraced within its scope. Those entitled to $50 or less receive cash. Others receive no cash, but are given twenty-year endowment insurance certificates, the face value of which is the adjusted service credit plus 25 per cent plus interest at 4 per cent compounded annually.

Having thus disposed of the bonus, the senate turned its attention to the revenue bill, and the prospect was that the discussion of this measure would continue for several weeks. Even so, the leaders in congress now think it may be possible to adjourn early in June, before the opening of the Republican national convention.

EVEN the most enthusiastic prohibitionist will not deny the intense and widespread interest in the hearings started last week before the house judiciary committee which had under consideration fifty-nine bills to amend the Volstead act and legalize the manufacture, sale and consumption of 2.75 per cent beer and of light wines. First were heard those who argued for this liberalization of the law, and the most interesting and perhaps most influential of these was Samuel Gompers, who spoke for the 4,000,000 members of the American Federation of Labor. A few of his sentences were:

"You ask me what influence legislation of 2.75 per cent beer would have on general prohibition enforcement. I answer in one sentence: It would transform the people of the United States from a whisky drinking to a beer drinking nation."

"The disabled man is the one who becomes the drunkard. The satisfied man becomes the good citizen. And I say that this prohibition of today has caused the utmost in dissatisfaction."

"No one wants the saloon. No one will be foolish enough to try to repeal the eighteenth amendment. What we who plead for 2.75 per cent beer want to do is to get the good that lies in temperance and rid ourselves of the evils of the present prohibition."

Several eminent psychiatrists told the committee of the great increase in insanity from alcoholism since prohibition, and at least one minister of the gospel stepped forward to declare that the Volstead act is unenforceable, unpopular and wrong ethically, morally and socially. A large number of samples of the poisonous stuff sold in Chicago for "hooch" comprised one of the exhibits.

OFFERS for Muscle Shoals were up before the senate agricultural committee and a delegation of Tennessee manufacturers appeared to argue against the Ford bill. Their statements may be thus summarized:

1. Expenditure of thousands of dollars made the South look on Ford as its savior if given Muscle Shoals.

2. Some $35,000 for this propaganda came from Ford friends in Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, and Memphis alone. How much more, and its source is unknown.

3. But the South now is waking up to the fact that Ford in Muscle Shoals means ruin and not salvation.

THE house committee on banking and currency, perfecting the McFadden bill revising the national bank act, approved city-wide branch banking proposals. The committee's decision in this is approved by Controller of the Currency Davies.

TESTIMONY before the Teapot Dome committee lost its export character for a few minutes when James H. Lewis, a consulting petroleum engineer, upheld Former Secretary Denby's policy of getting the naval reserve oil out of Teapot Dome and into storage as expeditiously as possible. He said:

"If Teapot were rapidly developed today, the recoverable oil could be got out in two years. Otherwise, with the gas pressure exhausted, it would take twenty to fifty years and be very expensive. The loss of gas pressure would, in short, unfit Teapot for an emergency."

Mr. Lewis said the amount of oil in Teapot had proved "very disappointing"—12,000,000 to 24,000,000 of barrels instead of the bureau of mines' estimate of 135,000,000.

WHILE the Borah committee was hearing stories of the alleged plot to bring about the indictment of Senator Wheeler in Montana, the same topic was brought up before the Brookhart committee. John S. Glenn of Nashville, Tenn., told the latter committee the first move to "get" Wheeler was engineered by W. J. Burns and Mal Daugherty. Speaker Gillett of the house appeared voluntarily before the committee and exploded the sensational testimony of Capt. H. L. Scatfe concerning a "trunk full of whisky" which Scatfe had more than intimated was sent to Mr. Gillett's office.

Harry Daugherty, being now free to talk, made a red hot speech in Columbus in which he denigrated much of the testimony heard by the Wheeler committee. His most significant statement was that he had given up his cabinet post rather than "contribute to a reasonable cause." Files of the Department of Justice, he said, contained "abundant proof of the plans, purposes and belittled designs of the communist international."

"Bear in mind," he added, "that the files which I refused to deliver to the Wheeler investigating committee at the time my resignation was requested were demanded by Brookhart and Wheeler, two United States senators who spent last summer in Russia with their soviet friends—those same soviet and communist leaders who preach destruction of constitutional government, destruction even of human life."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE traveled to New York last week and spoke at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press. The more important of his statements related directly to European affairs. He said he hoped France would accept the Daves committee report and that American capital would join in the loan proposed for Germany. He thought that thus the reparations question might be definitely settled, and promised that he would then try to bring about another world conference on disarmament to carry on the work begun by the Washington conference and to take up the codification of international law with an attempt to establish the rules of warfare and to determine the rights of neutrals. He also endorsed the Harding proposal for American adherence to the world court.

The President touched on the desire for profits and the quest for easy money, revealed in current government investigations, as symptomatic of the morbid financial state of mind brought on by the war, and continued: "From all of this sortitude the affairs of government, of course, suffered. In some of it a few public officers were guilty participants. But the wonder is not that this was so much or so many, rather that it has been so little and so few."

"The encouraging thing at present is the evidence of a well high complete return to normal methods of action, and a sane public opinion. The gravity of guilt of this kind is fully realized and publicly reprehended. There is an exceedingly healthy disposition to uproot it altogether, and administer punishment wherever competent evidence of guilt can be produced. That I am doing and propose to continue."

REALIZING that economic relations between Japan and America are far more vital to the former than to the latter, Japan's privy council is understood to have endorsed the government's conduct in the immigration exclusion matter. That is, continued protest against the American exclusion act but no retaliation. The Japanese were still hoping that President Coolidge would veto the measure, and this he was asked to do by a great mass meeting in Osaka. Ambassador Hanhara, meanwhile, explained to congress that the words "grave consequences" in his note were not meant to convey anything in the nature of a threat, but Representative Johnson, chairman of the house committee on immigration, replied with a statement that the action of congress had been assured before the note was written and that therefore the passage of the exclusion clause was not due to resentment against the ambassador's language.

BECAUSE of his "interference" in the senate investigation of the Internal revenue bureau by suggesting the employment of Francis Heney as investigator, Governor Pinchot lost the chance to sit in the Republican national convention as delegate at large from Pennsylvania. Representative Vane and others turned on him for what they considered disloyalty to the administration, and Ralph B. Strassburger of Norristown defeated the governor by a large majority. Pinchot blamed the "wets" of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware all elected delegates favorable to Coolidge and seemingly his nomination is an absolute certainty. Reports are that he wants Frank Lowden of Illinois as his running mate, and, falling that, wishes Lowden to be temporary chairman and to deliver the keynote speech. It is interesting to note that the Democratic national committee is considering the selection of a woman as temporary chairman of the national convention in New York.

AMONG the notable deaths of the week were those of Mrs. Eleonora Duse, the famous Italian tragedienne, who passed away in Pittsburgh after an attack of influenza, and Marie Corelli, the popular English novelist. Durum Wheat Not in Good Demand Farmers Are Being Urged to Meet Needs of Domestic Market for Grain.

Because the foreign demand for durum wheat is falling off and the domestic demand is on the increase, farmers are urged by the United States Department of Agriculture to modify their durum-wheat production to fit the needs of the domestic market. It appears that almost half of the durum wheat offered on the market during 1912, 1920, and 1921 contained over 10 per cent of wheat of other classes, and was graded as mixed wheat. Farmers engaged in the milling of durum wheat find it difficult to obtain sufficient pure durum wheat of high quality.

Certain durum wheats, chief among which is the Pentad or red durum variety, have been grown quite extensively, and while absorbed on the foreign market should be discontinued and replaced with varieties suited to domestic milling for macaroni manufacture. Two varieties of amber durum, the Acme and Monad, also are not desired by the domestic trade because of the grayish color of macaroni they make.

Choice of Varieties. When making a change of seed, careful consideration should be given the choice of varieties to be used. The Kubanka is the best-adapted variety for all the varying conditions in the durum-wheat sections. It is a high-yielding wheat, considerably resistant to rust, of good milling quality, and well liked for the manufacture of macaroni, the principal use of durum flour. The new Nodak variety recently developed in North Dakota as a selection from Kubanka is a distinct pure strain of that variety, which is equal or superior to it in yield, rust-resistance, and macaroni-making qualities. Other durum varieties have been found more productive than Kubanka in certain sections. Mindum is the best-yielding variety of durum in Minnesota. It is about as resistant to rust as Kubanka and makes macaroni of excellent light yellow color. Pelliss is the best-yielding variety in Montana and Wyoming, where rust does not occur. It also gives a good color in macaroni manufacture.

Nodak Variety Promising. In order to meet the requirements of the domestic market, durum-wheat growers should obtain and cultivate purer and better seed and replace the Pentad, Acme and Monad varieties with other rust-resistant varieties as soon as possible. For this purpose the Nodak appears the most promising new variety at this time.

Feed Value of Mixture Superior to Oats Alone

Many farmers are substituting a mixture of oats, barley and peas for oats grown separately. They are doing this because very often they have found oats alone to be an unprofitable crop, and yet they feel that oats has an important place in the rotation. As a result of investigation about the state, the New York college of agriculture at Ithaca reports that this mixture of oats, barley and peas is satisfactory as a nurse crop and gives a yield of grain usually higher than of oats alone. The feeding value of this mixture, further, is much superior to oats. Another advantage is that the peas in the mixture, being a legume, will help maintain soil fertility by utilizing nitrogen in the air.

An objection the college workers find to the combination is the slight additional cost of the seed.

In making the mixture, a bushel of oats, a bushel of barley, and a half-bushel of Canada field peas have produced good results. This mixture should usually be sown at the rate of about two and one-half bushels to the acre, although on soils one and one-half to two bushels may be enough.

Coöperative Marketing of Wheat Is Profitable

Co-operative marketing of wheat can be expected to increase farmers' profits by making savings as a result of preventing duplicate freight hauls, securing more economical financing of the marketing processes, preventing glut of the market on particular days, better knowledge of the needs of the market and producing the quality and quantity needed, and securing to farmers all of the advantages of better quality and thus encouraging improved production. These advantages will be secured under efficient management, an accurate volume of business and observance of the other things which are essential for successful co-operative marketing.

Discriminating Use of Legumes Is Profitable

The discriminating use of legumes as alfalfa, sweet clover, red clover, alsike, cowpeas, and soy beans will do more in the next ten years to put agriculture on a profitable plane than any single thing within the control of the farmers themselves, if the experience of older states and countries may be taken as a guide. Legumes mean more and better live stock, a more productive soil, better quality and better yields of grain, less expense and larger profits; in brief more prosperity for the farmers, the business men, and the community.

"Bad Luck" in Swine Raising Is Beaten

Pays to Raise Pigs in Clean Surroundings.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Thirteen farmers of Henry county, Illinois, testify that they have beaten "bad luck" with hogs by raising their pigs according to a plan that prevents infection by roundworms and filth-borne diseases. A printed leaflet, based on letters from farmers endorsing the McLean county system of swine sanitation recently circulated by the Henry County Farm bureau, gives convincing evidence that it pays to raise pigs in clean surroundings.

This system, as developed by the United States Department of Agriculture, calls for the cleaning of brood sows and placing them in disinfected pens at farrowing time. This is to prevent the newly-born pigs from coming in contact with roundworm infection.

Then, by keeping the growing pigs on clean pasture protected from exposure to hog-louse diseases they are permitted to make the greatest economical development, with little danger of loss from filth-borne infection.

In his letter one farmer stated that out of 215 little pigs he had lost only 5, which had been killed by the cattle, and that there were virtually no runs in the herd.

Another said that five years ago he had quit raising hogs because of his heavy losses due to diseases. Now he is raising hogs successfully under the McLean county system.

All agree that they would not attempt to raise hogs in any other manner.

Use of Fertilizers Aids Apple Growing in Ohio

The use of high nitrogenous fertilizers, according to the Ohio Experiment station, on the hilly lands of southern Ohio has practically revolutionized the apple growing industry of that section.

While fruit in order to grow and produce vigorously, must have access to liberal supplies of ammonia phosphoric acid and potash, it is the first-mentioned plant food that most often is lacking and needs to be furnished in liberal quantities. The importance of attending to this need properly is indicated by the fact that upon ammonia depends the condition of the foliage, the vigor of twig growth, and the formation of fruit buds.

In the sections of Ohio mentioned, the application of ammonia fertilizers has doubled and trebled the yield of fruit. Ordinarily the fertilizer is scattered on the ground under the outer ends of the branches at the rate of three or four ounces for each year of the tree's age.

Take Every Precaution to Guard Against Worms

If the farrowing pen or house is thoroughly cleaned with scalding hot water, then disinfected, and the sow, especially her udder, is washed with strong soap suds before being placed in the farrowing house, the little pigs will start life without picking up worm eggs that cause so much loss each year. If those precautions have not been followed it will be necessary to worm the pigs later. This is worthwhile, but much more expensive and less satisfactory than preventing worms. The most reliable of all worm remedies consists of five grains of calomel and eight grains of santonin per 100 pounds of live weight. Keep pigs on feed for 12 to 24 hours and mix these drugs carefully and thoroughly in a thick slop. Use every possible precaution to insure each pig getting an equal share.

FARM FACTS

Paint not only preserves; it also brightens.

Grape vines around the home furnish beauty, shelter and fruit.

Use fertilizer as a supplement to good cultural methods and not as a substitute for them.

Name your farm; then make it become a good name by selling only carefully graded products.

The invading army of insects will soon launch their attack. Is your spray rig ready for battle?

Whitewash looks good on the outside of poultry houses and pig pens, but on the inside it does good.

If you did nothing all winter, you couldn't do a regular hard day's work now; so don't expect the horse to, either.

It takes less time and costs less money to replace the oil in the tractor than it does to put in new bearings and piston rings.

The Colorado potato beetle makes its appearance at the time the plants are coming up. The plants should be sprayed as soon as the beetles are observed.

If you are farming just for the exercise and fun of it you will need to plant good seed so as to have something to do at harvest time. If you are farming to make money, you will need to plant good seed anyway.

"How I Suffered with my Stomach and Catarrh of the Head"

Took Four bottles of PE-RU-NA

and now cannot praise it enough

Miss Emelie A. Haberkorn, 2251 Gravois Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "For over two years I was troubled with internal catarrh. I read a Pe-ru-na booklet and began taking the treatment. Tongue cannot describe how I suffered with my stomach and the catarrh in my head. I began to feel better as soon as I had used four bottles and now I cannot praise it enough. I now enjoy as good health as ever and would not think of doing without Pe-ru-na."

Dr. Hartman's famous remedy has become the standby in thousands of American homes for the relief of coughs, colds, catarrh and every catarrhal disease.

Insist upon genuine Pe-ru-na and enjoy satisfaction.

NEVER WITHOUT BLACK-DRAGHT

West Virginia Lady Uses It for Headache and Sour Stomach

—"Nothing Like It," She Says.

Hurricane, W. Va.—Mrs. Ida Chaney, who lives on her fruitful farm not far from Big Hurricane creek, near here, made the following statement not long ago:

"My sons and I have used Black-Draught for a number of years and we are never without it. I use it for headache and sour stomach. When I eat something that sours, just a pinch of Black-Draught sets me straight."

"Not long ago I went to visit my sister in Ohio. I took a severe headache on the train. When I got to my sister's I sent for some Black-Draught and took a big dose. Next morning I felt fine and enjoyed my visit. My sister had never heard of Black-Draught, so she began taking it and says it is all I said it was."

"After the 'flu' my sons complained of their joints aching. They began taking Black-Draught and think there is nothing like it. They take it in broken doses every spring and are seldom sick."

"The other night my little grandson had a cold. I gave him a small dose of Black-Draught for two or three nights and he got all right. I can't say enough for it. I feel it has saved me dollars and suffering besides."

What the people of Louisiana done to Gov. Parker at the polls ought to cause some certain people to sit up and take notice.

The platonic friendships you hear about between the sex most generally culminate in the divorce or criminal courts or in the graveyard.

Supreme Courts were originally constituted to construe the laws. In these peculiar days they make and unmake them.

Emancipated femininity has not only assumed the male habits of drinking, smoking and cussing but they have about annexed the barbar shops.

President Coolidge favors the "open shop" labor plan. Union labor does not seem to cut much figure with him as a vote getter.

We never know it all nor grow too old to learn. The ideas of a life time are often exploded and found to have been all wrong all the time.

Congress passed a bonus bill for the world war veterans but it is paid by an insurance policy that will be worth very little to the average ex-soldier boy.

You better not heed any directions you find about how to follow the pathway of life successfully, except those incorporated between the lids of the Bible.

It is an evident fact that oil and water will not mix, as demonstrated by the recently oiled streets, but the oil seems to float on top in the little streams that trickle off to the sewers.

A female lawyer in Chicago went out and shot her sweetheart's wife.
After due reflection she realized what an inordinate fool she had been and took a dose of poison and went to pay the penalty.

Federal nor State constitutions mean anything these days. Our constitution says that no law shall be made retrospective. The courts ignore that utterly now.

Mr. C. B. Cox bought a car load of very fine mules in Tennessee last week and they arrived Monday morning and have gone in to service on the north end of the Chilton highway.

Is carrying a concealed pistol a crime for a female the same as for a male? We never hear of any prosecutions of girls for that offense, still they evidently do a good part of the pistol killings these days.

In a recent issue of the Fellowship
Forum we noticed that, up to March 15, the Ku Klux Klan had attained a membership of 7,223,000 in the United States and was still growing at the rate of 75,000 per week.

We are told by some of the popularity seeking high-brows these days that social conditions are growing better day by day. That's hard for a fellow to believe who lived in the days when young ladies never cursed, drank liquor nor smoked.

Will Comer and Underwood name any delegates to the convention at New York who will vote for Al Smith if Underwood fails? Such a thing would be disgraceful beyond expression. For the electoral vote of Alabama to be given to an avowed whisky man and a Roman Catholic to boot would jar the mudsills of organized democracy in this state.

THE ELECTION CONTEST CALLED OFF

To the great disappointment of a large majority of the voters of Chilton county, a technical point of law, as upheld by the Supreme Court of Alabama, in the year 1908, has forced a discontinuance of the election contest that has been hanging fire in the courts for nearly two years.

In another column will be found a statement from Mr. Messer which gives the details of the whole transaction and elucidates a most peculiar ruling of the Supreme court that seems to disqualify him, under present conditions.

We notice in his statement, and we have been assured by lawyers, that at the time he paid this particular poll tax he was tracking the election law at that time, and not only that but that he was obeying to the letter the ruling of the Supreme Court that was in force and effect then.

Honestly forces us to confess that we can not understand how a person can be punished now for obeying the law in 1904.

The popular idea about law making is that they can not be made retroactive in effect, but it seems to be the peculiar province of the Supreme Court of Alabama to make a ruling go as far back as they please, and not only that, in this particular instance, a man is punished for obeying the law as it existed at that time.

This is the only contruction that can be placed on the letter of Mr. Messer, and he has papers and certificates that certainly establish the facts.

It seems that Chilton county democrats are especially unfortunate in all of their efforts for obtaining a fair deal or even an opportunity to find out how they stand politically.

So far as the contest is concerned,
it has fallen down with neither Mr.
Messer nor the Chilton County democrats to blame.

We have not been informed as to whether any further steps will be taken or not, but we suppose not.

This should only solidify the party and make them more determined than ever to assert their rights and force the fighting until a real victory is won in spite of all technicalities and obscure decisions.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The Federal prohibition enforcement department at Washington has given out a report that the illicit making and selling of intoxicating beverages is on the increase.

Who is to blame for this state of affairs? The government is spending millions of money in the attempt to curb this business and yet, we are told, that conditions are going from bad to worse.

If one chances to intimate that national prohibition is a failure he is labeled at once by the frenzied fanatics as a "whiskey head" and in favor of open saloons etc.

Still, after all of these years of effort and all of these dollars spent we are told that, so far, it is a failure, because the evil grows worse as the years go by.

There has never been an hour since the founders of this government wangled for 18 months, before they arrived at a States rights agreement that was drastic enough to make the representations of each colony feel safe in their local rights, when Federal law enforcement in the different states has ever been successful. It is one of our fundamental principles that can neither be undermined nor suspended with any degree of success.

The interests of the different states are much too varied to make any one law suitable for all and the territory is too great to be successfully policed by a central force.

So far as fundamental law is concerned each state has the inalienable right to make its own laws and to do its own enforcing. Each state has its own police power and its own legal procedure for their election and they are the only people who really have the legal authority to invade houses and regulate law enforcement and arrest and jail the violators. It is conceded on all sides that more criminals are being made, more people being killed and more human distress resulting now than at any other period of our history.

We are opposed to all intoxicants as strongly as any person living, but we are also opposed to a system of law enforcement that neither recognizes nor respects the personal rights of any one and whose minions can murder people with impunity and not be amenable to the local courts.

In the end of this misguided system, prohibition is going to lose out and we people who desire to see real prohibition succeed will have to go to work and get the enforcement localized again in the hands of the state authorities where public sentiment will demand law enforcement and we will get it.

The way to have real prohibition any how is to penalize and punish the drinker instead of the maker. If you stop the demand the manufacture will cease.
Make a person do time at hard labor for getting under the influence of whiskey, and then double the time every time he repeats the offense and you will soon put the bootlegger and moonshiners out of business for want of a market.

WHAT AILS UNDERWOOD

To the surprise and sorrow of many of Senator Underwood's friends, he cast his vote in the Senate against the recent immigration bill.

Mr. Underwood has placed himself in a position that is hard for his friends to either explain or understand. He certainly must have known that the people of Alabama, whom he is supposed to represent, were almost unanimously in favor of that bill. We do not clearly see his view point. If he used that vote as a leverage in forwarding his presidential aspirations, we feel like he has made a woeful mistake.

The day has passed in the United States when Wall street can dominate and control the political affairs of our country.

Mr. Underwood has seemed to play up for the support of the hyphenated vote and the down east interests all the way through his campaign, and the result has been that he is nothing like as strong now as he was before he entered the race.

We have been sadly disappointed in him, for he was, for years, our ideal statesman and we have always supported him in every race he ever made until this time, but we fear our ways will have to part now. We endorse with our whole soul, mind and strength the immigration bill as passed.

Avoid Using Castor Oil

—W. L. Hand.

Nobody likes to give or take castor oil. There is really hardly any need for it since the invention of Liv-o-lax.

And Liv-o-lax fills a double need. It has a marked action on the liver as well as the digestive tract, and so it can be used in cases of bilious attack, and when a cold is coming on, it takes the place of calomel and castor oil. Literally hundreds of mothers have earnestly thanked me for putting this good remedy on the market.

Children love to take Liv-o-lax and it is just as good for the same conditions in adults.

A bottle of Liv-o-lax costs but 30c at any drug store.

FOR TREASURER
Mr. J. Bice, of Thorsby, announces this week as a candidate for County Treasurer.

A Fretful Child is a Sick Child
—W. L. Hand.

It isn't natural for a child to fret—nine times out of ten the mental disturbance is due to the ill effects of fermentation of partly digested food. Of course, a laxative is needed, but the ordinary children's laxative fails in many a case to bring quick relief because it has little or no action on the liver. Live-o-lax is a thorough cleanser—it cleans out the liver as well as the bowels and so rests the stomach and helps nature bring digestion back to normal. The action of Live-o-lax really is remarkable. It can be used in place of calomel and castor oil and yet it is a pleasant-tasting, vegetable, liquid remedy that does its work without causing any kind of distress. Children love to take it and it is just as good for adults. All the drug stores have Live-o-lax.

THE LORD OF THUNDER GATE

THE MAN of this tale is more than a man; he is the spirit of adventure. The fact that he is an American penetrating the ancient mysteries of Japan, the rites of Shinto and Samurai, and passing himself off as a member of the country's aristocracy, makes the adventures peculiarly keen and dramatic.

The dignity of the oriental habit of thought, the stateliness of ceremonial, the poetry of expression which prevails in ordinary life and is greatly accentuated in the higher circles—the charming qualities of one of the most interesting of peoples—are set forth in sharp contrast to the guile of some of its members.

PROGRESS

In 1923- and Part of Its Program for 1924

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad shows in the accompanying comparative figures a few of its outstanding accomplishments in 1923—the banner year of its performance:

	1923	1922	Increase

Tons of freight handled	57,460,190	48,890,798	17.57
-------------------------	------------	------------	-------

Passengers carried 1 mile	767,475,053	669,328,572	14.71
---------------------------	-------------	-------------	-------

Tons of coal handled	30,308,989	27,374,688	10.77
----------------------	------------	------------	-------

Cost of operation	$115,702,530	$103,502,493	11.77
-------------------	---------------	---------------	-------

Value of materials used	33,379,764	28,695,080	16.37
-------------------------	------------	------------	-------

Railway taxes	6,372,310	4,686,148	35.91
---------------	-----------	-----------	-------

This unprecedented record demonstrates the great value of the L. & N. in aiding the business development of the territory which it serves.

In addition, the L. & N.'s improvement work for 1923 and its program so far developed for 1924 evidence its purpose to keep abreast with the growing needs of the times. In 1923 the L. & N. spent $31,635,463 for new work. Its 1924 program embraces construction of various roadway improvements and the acquisition of 42 new locomotives, 5,115 new freight cars and 60 new passenger cars—making a total of $33,147,846.

It is believed that this splendid record will be appreciated by the public and should induce such fair-minded consideration and co-operation as will aid the L. & N. in its further progressive development and its constant effort to give even better service to the people of the South.

Mother's Day

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
MOTHER'S Day this year is May 11. This year and every year it falls on the second Sunday in May—and by no less authority than the congress of the United States. Uncle Sam also says: "Fly your flag!" Custom says: "Wear a carnation!"

Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia was the originator of Mother's Day, which was observed in several cities in 1910. Now it has become a day of nationwide observance, following an act of congress in 1914. It is set apart for special observance in honor of the home and motherhood. Its purpose is to recall the memories of mothers who have gone; to brighten the lives of those who remain; to stimulate men, women and children to honor home and parents. It is to be observed by acts of kindness to mother and father; by service in churches of all creeds, and by wearing a carnation, emblem of purity, beauty, fidelity and strength of mother love.

The photographs herewith reproduced tell in themselves a story of Mother's Day—even if they do not tell the whole story. Like a "song without words" it is a story without text. Put into the pictures what you know of life and mother's love—and you have a story of your own.

Put yourself—so far as you can—in the place of the mother in black at that national shrine—the stately resting place of the "Unknown Soldier" in Arlington National cemetery at Washington.

Is she there because she cannot be beside the grave of her son in France? It would be a natural thing for a fallen hero's mother to do. For the nation has raised this memorial to show its appreciation of the American fighting man. So what more fitting place for a Gold Star Mother on Mother's Day? But this is not enough. Sixteen Gold Star Mothers made a pilgrimage to his national shrine the other day. There they paid silent tribute with wreaths and prayer. Then they went to the White House, where President Coolidge expressed his sympathy with their purpose. They were in Washington representing 5,000 bereaved American women who want to visit the graves of their sons overseas. Representative Samuel Dickstein of New York has introduced a bill setting forth their wishes. It authorizes the secretary of war to arrange trips to Europe and back on government-owned vessels, with proper military escort and $100 for incidental expenses of each mother. Said the Gold Star Mothers to the house military committee:

Many mothers sacrificed their sons in the World war after they had given twenty years of service to rear them. A journey to the shrine of their life's work is small compensation for these isolated women—yet it is all they ask. Many of them are so poor that they will never be able to make the journey at their own cost.

The National War Mothers' association decided at its last annual convention to move its headquarters from Indianapolis to Washington. The present officers are: Mrs. H. H. McClure, Kansas City (portrait herewith), president; Mrs. Carrie L. Root, Gardiner, Ill., first vice president; Mrs. Blanche A. Bellak, second vice president; Mrs. Thomas Spence, Kenosha, Wis., third vice president; Mrs. Rose Sargeant, Sacramento, Cal., fourth vice president; Mrs. William D. Oldham, Lexington, Ky., secretary; Mrs. Lynn Boyd, New Castle, Ind., treasurer; Mrs. Carry Avery, Washington, D. C., custodian of records; Mrs. W. A. Wilcox, Omaha, auditor; Mrs. Frank DeKay, Blackfoot, Idaho, historian. Imagine, if you can, the pride of Mrs. Dolly Wilson of Pilot Mountain, N. C. She is the Champion War Mother of the United States, by award of the association. She saw ten sons rally to the Colors.

"Americans!" with one swift, delighted glance. "But yes. We always know them!" smiled Marie. "Madame, their look—so proud—has taught us how." (Swinging along the sunlit roads—in France!) But, Marie, you would learn what pride can be. If you could see their mothers' faces now!

Or is this Gold Star Mother paying tribute at this national shrine because she knows not where her hero is laid—only that he went and has not come back? Uncle Sam did his best for his fighting men. Most of them sleep in known and identified graves. But there are still many "Unknown Soldiers" in the American military cemeteries in France—483 in Meuse-Argonne, 157 in St. Mihiel, 154 in Somme, 698 in Oise-Aisne, 224 in Alsace-Marne and 2 in Suresnes. In Flanders Field to Belgium are 23. In Brookwood in England are 66.

This number is gradually being cut down, but there will always be "unknown soldiers" in the cemeteries "Over There."

So there are many mothers to whom the thought, "It may be that my son sleeps here," comes naturally and by right.

God grant that there is comfort in that thought!

Bugles blow:
 Proud the homage we show
 While tears flow.
 But Oh, Oh,
 If his Mother could know
 In her woe!

The Mother Instinct! What good American does not thrill at the familiar sight here pictured? It is one of the things that keeps alive faith in the race and our destiny. It is this same mother instinct that gives the nation its devoted wives and mothers, its trained nurses and its faithful teachers. Incidentally, it adds interest to the pretty little potential mother pictured to know that she is Mary Walker Lee of New York, the only grandchild of that gentleman, scholar and soldier—Robert E. Lee.

The two contrasting types of savage mothers shown are proof positive that there is no color line in mothers. Motherhood is the same, whether in British East Africa or in the Arctic. Incidentally, we shall say which is the happier—the savage woman who mates early and knows the joys of wifehood and motherhood or the woman of civilization who devotes her youth to a preparation for a career and dies an old maid?

The Foster Mother! This is a portrait of Mrs. Anna (Ma) Smith directing the music lesson of Vivian Kite, one of the seventeen foster children she has mothered, fed, clothed and educated. Mr. and Mrs. Newton J. Smith have been father and mother to orphans and unfortunate for the last twenty years on their 200-acre farm near Hoopesville, Ill. The old house has stood there for forty years and has gradually been enlarged to ten rooms.

"Fies like Mother used to make" is a famous saying. But not every mother can make good pies. Five prominent American women have therefore appealed to the housewives of the nation to promote the study of chemistry in the interest of better housekeeping, better food, healthier children and happier homes.

Mother love is a passion as old as the race. Circumstances and environment may cause it to act serenely, but on occasion it flares forth in its pristine elemental strength. Mrs. John P. Williams of Aurora carried three of her children to safety from a fire and fought madly to rush back to certain death for the fourth. Mrs. Rose Simiz of Chicago shot her nineteen-year-old son "to save his soul" and keep him from a life of crime. Mrs. James Morris of Chicago exposed her past in court in an effort to get back her daughter from foster parents.

On learning of her refusal the other 149 bachelors petitioned the girl not to return to England, but to choose a husband from among them. She did so, and the former flame acted as best man at the wedding.—London Tit-Bits.

Canadian Travels 17,000 Miles to Marry Woman
 A Canadian recently crossed two continents and an ocean to marry a Greek girl and take her back with him to Skagway in the remote Northwest. The journey to Greece and back extended over 17,000 miles and cost nearly $1,000.

An even more trying journey was undertaken by a Russian who had emigrated to the United States. He heard that his sweetheart in Russia was in danger from the Bolsheviks. Immediately he set sail for China. Thence he traveled overland, mostly on foot, across Siberia, to his sweetheart's home in European Russia, where he was able to rescue her. The journey occupied eight months.

Long journeys to get married sometimes have unexpected endings. A girl called several thousands of miles to marry her lover, changed her mind on the way. The unlucky man was one of 150 bachelors exiled in a settlement where there were few white women.

Incidentally, we shall say which is the happier—the savage woman who mates early and knows the joys of wifehood and motherhood or the woman of civilization who devotes her youth to a preparation for a career and dies an old maid?

The Foster Mother! This is a portrait of Mrs. Anna (Ma) Smith directing the music lesson of Vivian Kite, one of the seventeen foster children she has mothered, fed, clothed and educated. Mr. and Mrs. Newton J. Smith have been father and mother to orphans and unfortunate for the last twenty years on their 200-acre farm near Hoopesville, Ill. The old house has stood there for forty years and has gradually been enlarged to ten rooms.

"Fies like Mother used to make" is a famous saying. But not every mother can make good pies. Five prominent American women have therefore appealed to the housewives of the nation to promote the study of chemistry in the interest of better housekeeping, better food, healthier children and happier homes.

Mother love is a passion as old as the race. Circumstances and environment may cause it to act serenely, but on occasion it flares forth in its pristine elemental strength. Mrs. John P. Williams of Aurora carried three of her children to safety from a fire and fought madly to rush back to certain death for the fourth. Mrs. Rose Simiz of Chicago shot her nineteen-year-old son "to save his soul" and keep him from a life of crime. Mrs. James Morris of Chicago exposed her past in court in an effort to get back her daughter from foster parents.

On learning of her refusal the other 149 bachelors petitioned the girl not to return to England, but to choose a husband from among them. She did so, and the former flame acted as best man at the wedding.—London Tit-Bits.

Advice Taken
 A young married woman of Princeton had received letters from a young woman of Louisville, her chum, advising her on two important matters, the removal of her young son's tonsils and certain advantages accruing from bobbed hair.

The Louisville friend had about come to the conclusion that her advice had been wasted when she received this laconic message: "They're out; it's off—and I'm glad."—Indianapolis News.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It
 Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper—Advertisement.

 "Done!" Why, cat-fetch it, he's lived here all his life."—Kansas City Star.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

©, 1924, by Laura Miller
EVEN MAGAZINE EDITORS DON'T ALL LIVE IN NEW YORK!

Martha Van Rensselaer was recently named as one of the twelve greatest American women. Born of parents who desired above all things to educate their children well, Miss Van Rensselaer became a teacher almost without conscious choice. As county school commissioner she added an interest in the life problems of rural women. A job had become a career.

In 1900 she was appointed by Cornell university for development of extension work with rural women. A department of home economics in the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell with Miss Van Rensselaer in charge followed. The department has become a "professional school," a small college in itself.

Mr. Hoover appointed Miss Van Rensselaer chief of the home conservation division of the United States food administration. The American Home Economics association made her its president. A woman's magazine sought her out to be "home-making editor."

With all personality boiled out in the telling, that is the story of one woman who had only a school teacher's position in an "up-state" town as a starting point.

What made Miss Van Rensselaer a woman to be listed in "Who's Who?" In what way has she differed from thousands of teachers who, in their own embittered phrase, "Never got anywhere?"

Isn't it fairly easy to read between the lines? Martha Van Rensselaer, the girl, used to the full gift her family had to convey. They loved education. Their daughter made education her life work.

She developed early the ability to manage people. Women county school commissioners were not so common in Atlantic coast states a quarter of a century ago but that office-holding is significant.

She was intellectually alert. Not many people were seeing the differences between life in city and country as, problems that demanded help from public schools. Still fewer had a practical program. Martha Van Rensselaer evolved both.

She was feminine. She directed—one may easily imagine—all her fine woman instincts, not into antagonism to men, as so many intellectual women have done, but into a constructive service for other women and girls.

"I would develop more opportunities for women outside the cities," she writes. "There is much work undone and many women overtaxed in farm life because home equipment, social life and remuneration are not enough to hold the average girl at the seat of production."

THE SEEDS OF SUCCESS

If you aren't thrilled and spurred by this letter from Clarice Elliott, Hugulam (no, I don't know how to pronounce it, either), Wash., I'm disappointed in you.

"Four years ago my husband and youngest boy were suddenly taken from me by influenza, leaving me to recover from the shock, and get back my own strength after that dread disease; and bring up another little son of six in the way his father would wish. With no training other than a fair education, of course the first idea was that I should prepare myself for office work. Just at this time an elderly lady, the representative of an insurance company in Aberdeen, was looking for some one to take an agency here. Through a mutual friend she heard of me.

"Now about the only thing I knew about life insurance was that I had collected Mr. Killotti's. As far as companies were concerned, they were all alike. It was just my good fortune to fall into the hands of the best company in the world. No one but the Lord himself and my mother will ever know the struggle I had to make myself stick to it. There is nothing in the world harder than to try to be a matter-of-fact business woman in a man's office, when you can just see him feeling sorry for you.

I had no training whatsoever. I was given a rate book and a bit of literature and told to go after it. I didn't know one kind of policy from another. I studied when I couldn't make myself go out and face people. If you were to mention me as one of the successful writers of insurance I should only be ridiculous. I think, however, I am counted a success in my own community. I know that success is in the fact that I conquered myself, my own fears, and made myself do things."

KEEP FRESH FRUITS AND VEGETABLES COOL

Care of Fruit and Vegetables is Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Most fresh fruits and vegetables need to be kept clean, well ventilated and, if possible, at a temperature between 60 degrees and 40 degrees F. These conditions help to prevent spoilage by wilting and by molds, bacteria and yeasts, and to check ripening changes. Fresh fruits and vegetables are living materials, even after they are picked from the plant or the soil where they grew, and certain substances, called enzymes, continue to work in the cells and bring about ripening. From the standpoint of edible quality, there is a certain stage of ripeness when every fruit and vegetable is considered prime, and the care it receives in the home oftentimes is very important in maintaining this period or in handling foods that have passed it.

Sort Over Frequently.

To prevent single pieces of decayed fruit or vegetables from infecting others in the same container the United States Department of Agriculture suggests, in a new Farmers' Bulletin, 1374, "Care of Food in the Home," that fruits and vegetables stored in boxes, barrels and bins should be sorted frequently to remove decayed ones.

The commercial practice of wrapping oranges, apples and other fruits, and sometimes choice vegetables, in separate papers is in some cases worth following in the home. The wrappers prevent the fruits from bruising each other, and also keep the skins from touching and so offering a favorable place for the growth of molds. Soft fruits, such as berries, peaches, plums and pears should, if possible, be spread out on clean wrapping paper or in shallow pans or platters rather than kept in deep receptacles.

Wash Thoroughly.

All vegetables and fruits, especially those to be eaten raw, should be thoroughly washed before use as a protection to health as well as for the sake of general cleanliness. The loss of flavor and texture is very slight, even in such thin-skinned fruits as strawberries, provided they are not allowed to stand in the water and are drained thoroughly, and lettuce and other salad plants are made crisper and more attractive. Lifting them from the water rather than draining it off is an effective way of freeing these foods from grit and dirt, or washing them in running water is perhaps best of all.

CLOTHES MOTHS ARE HARMFUL IN SPRING

With Approach of Spring Pests Become Active.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Clothes moths deposit their eggs, which hatch into fabric-eating larvae, at almost any season of the year, but with the increase of warm weather in the spring they may become more visibly active and their eggs will hatch more rapidly. In steam-heated buildings conditions are at all times nearly as favorable to clothes moths as during the winter.

Carefully Kept Closet.

ing summer weather. The housekeeper must not only watch the family clothing while it is in use, but make especially intelligent preparation for preventing damage by clothes moths at the season when she begins to store away woolen clothing, furs, rugs and blankets.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a very comprehensive bulletin, F. B. 1353, Clothes Moths and Their Control, which will be sent for the asking. This describes in detail various ways of protecting articles by such means as careful wrapping in unbroken paper, using naphthalene flakes or balls, and other preparations which give off fumes, cold storage, fumigation, putting in cedar chests and other methods.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the value of frequent brushing, beating, sunning and cleaning articles subject to clothes-moth attack. The eggs of clothes moths are delicate and can usually be crushed or dislodged by brushing and beating. Pay special attention to crevices, seams and pockets. Sunning is a valuable aid in control work. In articles laid away moths are much more likely to concentrate upon soiled spots if these have not been removed. Brushing and beating usually remove or kill the larvae or worms. If clothing is thoroughly brushed every two weeks, it is doubtful if moths can affect it seriously. Carpets and rugs cleaned by strong vacuum cleaners and thoroughly brushed on both sides, or electrically cleaned, are freed from infestation if the work is properly done. Clothing dry-cleaned is also freed from infestation by the process. Once freed from infestation, clothes should be protected, if they are not to be used during the warm season, by being immediately wrapped in paper or placed in tight chests or treated closets.

The public is familiar with "moth-proof" paper bags of various types that appear upon the market each summer. These bags, if not torn and if properly used, are excellent for keeping moths from reaching clothing. They are of no value in killing moths that may be in the clothing when it is placed in the bag, and those made of plain paper are just as good as those containing tar. The value of such bags as protectors against infestation ceases largely as soon as they are torn, even slightly, or are left unsealed.

Ordinary firm wrapping paper is satisfactory, or several thicknesses of newspapers will serve. Clothes moths do not eat into paper to reach clothing. For this reason, if woollens and other fabrics subject to moth attack are cleaned and freed from moths by any of the methods mentioned above, they will remain safe if wrapped at once and tightly in several thicknesses of firm wrapping paper or in newspapers. There is a general belief that the print on newspapers keeps moths away. This is not true. Any paper of moderate thickness and unbroken will protect clothing. Care must be exercised to bend back the folds of the paper upon themselves at the ends of the bundles so that the moths cannot crawl into the bundles at the ends.

After clothing has been made into bundles or sealed in boxes, these bundles and boxes may be left exposed in garrets or on storeroom shelves without danger of infestation from without. If flake naphthalene is wrapped among the folds of clothing made into bundles, any small larvae that may have got into the cloth before it was wrapped will be killed.

The main point about using naphthalene flakes or any substance that is expected to kill moth larvae by giving off fumes is that the bundle, trunk or container must be absolutely tight in order to confine the fumes or they will not be effective.

ASSYRIAN EXILE OF ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 17:1-18. GOLDEN TEXT—"I will delight myself in Thy statutes: I will not forget Thy word."—Ps. 119:16. PRIMARY TOPIC—How a Little Girl Helped a Great Soldier. JUNIOR TOPIC—Israel Driven Into Exile. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Nation Punished for Its Sins. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Israel's Downfall.

I. Israel Taken Into Captivity (vv. 1-10).

This was in fulfillment of that which Amos had predicted in the days of Jeroboam II at a time when the nation was at the height of its prosperity. The northern kingdom was ruled by nineteen kings, all of whom were wicked. Their wickedness was not because of lack of information or opportunity but in spite of it. God promised the first king His blessing if he would be loyal to Him. Jeroboam departed from God and the apostasy thus begun continued downward to the end. In the reign of Hoshea, the last king, the king of Assyria came and besieged Samaria and carried the children of Israel captive to Assyria, from which they never returned.

II. The Sins Which Caused Their Doom (vv. 7-18).

1. Conformed to the Ways of the Heathen (vv. 7-9). God had commanded them not to follow in the ways of the heathen, but these Israelites, instead of maintaining lives of separation, secretly did that which was displeasing to God. Secret sins, as surely as open sins, bring ruin, for all things are naked and open to Him with whom we have to do. The One who visits judgment upon the sinner knows all things.

2. Serve Idols (vv. 10-17). They not only compromised by "walking in the statutes of the heathen," but worshipped their gods. It was a short step from following in the statutes of the heathen to following their gods. Before they worshipped idols they cast off the true God. Indeed idolatry came into the world because the race did not wish to retain God in its affections (Romans 1:21-23). Idolatry did not come in through ignorance but through willful perverseness. People today worshipping false gods have first cast off the authority of the living God. Man is a religious being. When he ceases to worship the true God he worships other gods.

3. They Were Rebellious (vv. 13-15). God by His prophets has said unto them, "Turn ye from your evil ways and keep my commandments," but they stubbornly refused His testimony, even rejected His statutes. God in love tried to save them. He sent some of the noblest and best prophets who ever spoke to men to persuade them to turn from their sins, such as Elijah and Elisha, but they stiffened their necks and plunged deeper into wickedness. This they did in defiance of God.

4. Caused Their Sons and Daughters to Pass Through Fire (v. 17). This was the dreadful Molech worship, the most cruel rite of heathen worship. It was done by kindling a fire in a hollow metal image until its arms were red hot and placing live children therein to be burned to death. This was the depth to which the Israelites had sunk.

5. Resorted to Magical Practices (v. 17). When faith in the true God wanes men always turn to the magical arts. In this way the Israelites sold themselves to evil in the sight of the Lord and provoked Him to anger.

III. The Judgment Falls (v. 18).

At this stage of the drama the curtain dropped. God could not be inactive longer.

1. God Was Very Angry. His anger is not a hazy fury but the revulsion of His holy nature against sin. God cannot tolerate sin in His presence. His wrath must strike. Though He waits long, the debt must be paid and that always with compound interest. There is only one way to escape God's wrath; that is to turn from sin unto God through Jesus Christ.

2. Remove Them Out of His Sight. The land of Palestine is regarded as the land of God's sight—that is, the place of His manifested presence. These people are still scattered among the nations and as a political organization they will never return to their land. The judgment was severe, but not more so than the sins merited. God had waited long. The despising of His grace eventually works ruin. Therefore, what judgment must fall upon the people who in the light of this day reject His grace and His mercy.

Practical Christianity

"Go," never spells "Stay." We need more religion in the 8-10-12, as well as in the soul—a walking as well as a talking religion. The trouble is not so much with non-church-going masses, as the non-going church. We need not only a lookout committee but a "Go-out" committee.—H. G. Gibboud.

A Christian

A Christian is one who follows Christ, but is a leader of men.—Christian Herald.

It's Easy to Pay For a Chevrolet

Everybody wants an automobile. Everybody can pay for a Chevrolet. Everybody can afford to own a Chevrolet.

You can buy a Chevrolet just as you buy any other important necessity. Not one family in a thousand pays cash in full for a home. They make a substantial down payment, then pay off the mortgage with what they used to pay for rent, plus other savings.

A Chevrolet can be bought just as you buy a stationary home. It earns its own way and you ride while you pay. It is the best paying investment any family can make because it provides transportation, saves time, and makes all outdoors your playground, bringing health and happiness to the whole family.

There is a Chevrolet dealer near you. Ask him to show you the different models and explain how easy it is to get, use and pay for the one you want.

Seeks Old Sweetheart

An almost daily visitor at Doctors' Commons, Knightbridge street, is an old man who is determined to find out if a sweetheart of his youth ever married. He has a London (Eng.) dispatch. For weeks he searched the records without revealing his object, but one day he said that many years ago he was engaged to marry and had obtained the license, but the wedding never took place. Having made a fortune, he now desires to trace his former fiancée and atone for her disappointment of years ago.

STUDEBAKER MAIL VETERAN OF WEST PLACED IN MUSEUM

South Bend, Ind.—The famous Studebaker Light-Six, which holds Pacific Coast records in fast mail carrying service arrived here today, and was placed in honorable retirement.

The vet. ran machine, still full of pep and power despite its grueling service was moved into a prominent place in the 'Studebaker Museum' where many celebrated cars and vehicles with a romantic history are viewed each year by thousands of visitors.

This new addition to the museum of transportation in the Studebaker Administration Building, was sent by the Chicago Studebaker Company, Studebaker distributors at Chicago.

Driven by Hart Weaver and James F. Gurley of the Chester N. Weaver Company, and accompanied by observers, this car made road records between Los Angeles and San Francisco more than three years ago that have stood unequalled by the officially observed performance of any other car.

On February 2, 1921, it established a new round-trip record between San Francisco and Los Angeles, a distance of 864.8 miles, in the sensational time of 21 hours and 23 minutes. On the same trip it lowered the coast route records between these two cities by 2 hours, 35 minutes and 20 seconds, the time being 10 hours, 12 minutes and 30 seconds for the 453.7 miles.

Three weeks later this remarkable car smashed the valley route between the Main post office at Los Angeles and Ferry post office, San Francisco, running the distance of 411.1 miles in 9 hours, 15 minutes and 50 seconds. It is believed that this time between these two points over this route will stand forever.

A month after these phenomenal runs, this Light-Six covered the 425 miles of narrow desert trail from Los Angeles to Phoenix in 13 hours, 19 minutes, cutting off two hours and 23 minutes from the best previous automobile record. The railroad time is 1 hour, 4 minutes slower than the record establishing by this Light-Six.

To earn a place in the Studebaker museum, which is in reality a record of transportation in America, is an honor much coveted. Singularly, California contributed the two most recent exhibits.

The first was the half-million mile Studebaker Big-Six, which traveled in mid-winter under its own power from Los Angeles to New York and thence back to South Bend, after covering a verified mileage of half a million miles in 5 1-2 months.

The next and latest addition is the Studebaker Light-Six from San Francisco.

Recently, we received a communication from Mr. Wm. Mims who was reared near Thorsby, calling our attention to the manufacturing of WEEVILNIP by his Company in Birmingham. Mr. Mims is a perfectly reliable young man and the farmers in Chilton will do well to investigate his remedy for the boll weevil.

A GREAT BALL GAME

The Methodist and Baptist Bible Classes Pull Off the Game of The Season Last Thursday

promptly at 3 p. m. last Thursday scheduled game of base ball between the Baptist and Methodist Bible Classes was opened up by umpire Pyron called "play ball."

The Methodist contingent were first to bat and opened the game, after which the Baptist batters struck the score board with 7 luscious runs. The game was played out the 9th inning with pluck, pep, vigor and good humor by the losing team.

to their credit be it said, no finer cleaner team of real sportsmen ever lined up in a game of ball.

Although the odds were against them from the start, they were not the slightest indication of a hum or sulkingness manifested in any player.

A large attendance of rooters were hand for both teams, and neither of them failed to receive all sorts of cheering support and encouragement from the grand stand. The ladies seemed especially enthusiastic and, their hand clapping and "ap-pause" was almost deafening.

The attendance was, perhaps, the best that has ever greeted a ball game here and every one seemed to like they had got fully the worth of their money out of the contest.

The Methodist team tried to get a few runs during the game, but they were followed by Mr. Petrey, who had plenty of motions but could not get his control. Then Dr. Neigher took the firing line and, for an inning or two, he distinguished himself by not up to much speed that engine run hot and he had to be cooled.

Following him came Mr. Simpson and he lasted the game with a species of curves, drop and sliders that even kept the catcher guessing.

Col. Percy Pitts was the first catcher for the Methodist nine and did good work behind the bat. He given plenty of advice from the stand, all of which he received with good humored appreciation.

Chief of Police Retherford relieved the chief was, on the job every minute and his place did not suffer for a lack of effort and energy.

On the Baptist side, Mr. Jesse Jones was in the box first and he really astonished all of the fans by the effectiveness of his work. Jesse is a real pitcher and could make his mark in any company. He has real speed and splendid control. He was received towards the last and Mr. Dewey took the box. Here again was a surprise to the audience, for he handled the ball like a professional and struck the boys out with a re-

MOTHERS DAY

Last Sunday was the day set apart and designated as "Mothers Day" all over the land.

In Clanton it was fittingly observed by both the Methodist and Baptist congregations, a special program having been arranged and both the buildings were lovely with appropriate floral decorations.

At the Methodist church, at the 11 o'clock hour, the choir rendered some very beautiful selections which were greatly enjoyed by the large audience present.

The pastor, Dr. Wilkerson then delivered a beautiful and most interesting short discourse dealing in feeling and impressive thoughts connected with the sacred influence of Mother.

Prof. Stevens, the popular and efficient principal of our High School, also made a short address that was replete with touching and tender tributes to the wonderful mothers of our country, and the vast influence for good that emanates to us all from the precepts and examples of faithfulness and fidelity they teach and live.

It was a beautiful service and was most pleasing to the large audience that assembled to add their tribute to the sacred name of mother.

At the same hour, at the Baptist church, a splendid audience had also gathered, inspired by these same emotions of love for mother, and a most appropriate program was rendered.

The choir had selected a song especially dedicated to this honored day which was dispensed with feeling and pathos and was especially effective with the interested audience.

Dr. Ezell, the pastor, also contributed his part in the loving tribute to our mothers by a brief address, or sermonette, in which he brought out some new and conclusive Bible thoughts that cluster around the sphere of motherhood from the cradle to the grave. He was especially fervent in his address, and a halo of sincerity and truth seemed to hover over the scene.

The large audience appeared to be in full sympathy with the spirit of the occasion and the service from start to finish was beautiful beyond expression.

The choir is especially to be congratulated on the appropriateness of their program and skill of their rendition.

Clanton observed the day with a unanimity and spirit that was really splendid.

gularity that must have been discouraging.

As catchers for the Baptist team Mr. Van Smith and Mr. Dewey Eubanks delighted honors. Both of them "took 'em right off the bat" and either of them could qualify behind the bat in fast company.

The game was a winner in every way and did much in putting a feeling of comradeship not only in the players but also in the large audience. Much good humored chaffing and joking was heard in the crowd and many witty things were pulled off that helped to keep everybody feeling good.

The proceeds of the game were divided 50-50 between the ladies of the two churches, and netted them a nice sum.

Neither Dr. Wilkerson or Dr. Ezell could be on hand to hold the indicator as both were away on other work.

ATTENDING SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

The following delegates from the Clanton Baptist church left last Tuesday evening to attend the Southern Baptist Convention in Atlanta, Ga.: Dr. S. J. Ezell, Messrs W. I. Mullins, and G. C. Harris.

Messrs J. Z. Mims and G. F. Harris left at the same time as delegates from the Samaria Baptist church.

NOTICE

Everybody invited to come to Mims pond Thursday afternoon May 15th and get a free swim. Water nice and cool.

No swimming on Sunday this season. B. H. MIMS. MORE DOWN TOWN BUILDING

Last Friday ground was broken for an addition to the Popwell building, occupied by Mr. Ware as a restaurant.

The structure will be made as long again as formerly and will be entirely renovated and refitted on the inside.

It is also on the bills that a new brick business house will also be erected by Mr. Popwell on the vacant lot between the restaurant and the Hodges Dry Goods house at the same time.

The down town section of second avenue will be entirely built up before the summer is over, and Clanton will be forced to expand on the north and south line of seventh street, which is also centrally located.

NOTED ALABAMA COMPOSER TO BE HERE

Mildred White Wallace, noted Alabama composer of songs, also a brilliant performer, in both piano and voice will assist Mrs. Middleton Friday evening May 16 in a various musical recital at High School Auditorium.

Mrs. Wallace has kindly consented to favor us with some of her compositions.

AN APPRECIATED REMEMBRANCE

The Editor and family are again under lasting obligations to Mrs. J. M. Martin for a nice moss of very fine English peas.

Mrs. Martin, who is spending the summer at her father's, just out of town, is making a wonderful reputation as a gardner and poultry raiser and is feeding J. M. with so many nice vegetables and home grown chickens that he is liable to get the big head.

MRS. WYATT DIES

One of those sad and heart breaking events that Providence sees fit to send in to our lives at times, occurred at the home of Mr. E. B. Wyatt last Thursday afternoon, May 8.

His wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Wyatt was out in her garden when she was stricken by an attack of heart trouble. Her condition was discovered at once and loving friends tenderly bore her form into the house. Immediately doctors were summoned and everything humanly possible was done to ward off the impending blow, but all to no avail. Without ever rallying at all, her spirit passed back into the hands of the God who gave it, and her earthly home was left desolate and in saddest grief.

Mrs. Wyatt was 64 years of age and during the long period of her existence she had lived in this immediate vicinity and was surrounded by a large circle of friends who had known her intimately all of these years. She left a husband, Mr. E. B. Wyatt, and three children, to mourn and miss her comforting presence and her sudden passing away has left them all bowed down under a weight of almost unbearable grief.

The remains were carried Friday to Providence church and laid to rest there where some of her loved ones had already gone into their everlasting sleep.

To the sadly afflicted husband and to these bereaved children who will know no more forever the power and the comfort of a fond mothers love we extend our sympathy.

Rev. J. M. Parrish officiated at the grave. Undertaker Martin was in charge.

MISS ROBERTA CURRY BACK HOME

Some months ago Miss Roberta Curry, one of the sweetest singers of the South, went to New York for the purpose of cultivating her exquisite vocal powers as a soprano.

She has been studying since under the personal supervision of the most noted vocal director in the United States and has won a distinctive place among the artistic and popular singers of the country.

She is home now for a vacation before entering upon her life work as a noted and gifted public singer. She has hosts of friends here and in other parts of Alabama, all of whom rejoice with her at the eminent success she has achieved already and who confidently look forward to a distinguished future for her.

Miss Roberta has come back a cultured musical artist, but is the same friendly and lovable girl that we all used to know before she entered upon her career.

We all hope that she will give her many friends here the pleasure of listening to her, in public at least one time before she bids us adieu again.

THE CHILTON COUNTY HIGHWAY

The contractors have begun in earnest the grading of the north end of our part of the B. & M. Highway. They are giving employment to a good many laborers who were finding work rather slack at this season.

The daily papers also have been carrying a few items recently that indicate that the letting out of the south end of this road will occur some time in June.

It is to be hoped that such proves to be a fact and that before the summer is over, work will be in full blast on the important link in the highway entirely across our county. It will furnish labor to many who need it and put considerable money in circulation here in town.

It is estimated, by those in charge of the work, that it will require two years, or more to complete these roads after work is begun, even under favorable conditions, so none of us need be saving up our cars yet for speeding on this cement race course.

We are informed that work is now progressing again very favorably on the Shelby county section of this road and it is claimed that this part of the highway should be ready for use within another year.

KEEP IT UP

Last Thursday, promptly at 12 o'clock, noon, every business house in Clanton, drug stores excepted, closed their doors for the day and gave all employees a half holiday.

This was in accordance with an agreement that was signed and published last week and effective during all of the summer months, and is a wonderfully commendable and progressive step taken by the Clanton business men.

The same movement is being widely adopted in other towns and cities and it is a pleasure to realize that Clanton is in the very front rank in putting this splendid movement over.

It is to be hoped that not a single signer of this agreement will backslide during the summer and that every Thursday afternoon will be recognized as a holiday during all of the heated period and that all people who are housed up on the job every day will have this one opportunity to get some fresh air and a little helpful recreation.

SENIOR PLAY MONDAY NIGHT

On last Monday night the Senior Class of the Chilton county High school put on a play in the auditorium that was indeed a success.

The play was a comedy called the Clodhopper, and was rightly named for it was a scream from start to finish.

The various actors did their parts well and conclusively proved that Chilton county has quite a lot of histrionic talent lying dormant about in spots.

A very large audience was present and every one seemed highly pleased with the evening's entertainment. The Senior Class is to be congratulated on making such a pronounced success.

Mr. C. D. Gibbons, who holds a lucrative position with the L. & N. was here last Saturday.

HURRY IT UP

It is given out by the Highway Commission that they are going to let the contract for the south end of the Chilton county section of the B. & M. highway within 60 days.

It is to be earnestly hoped that they will neither change their minds nor alter their plans any more before they do this.

The people not only want this road completed as speedily as possible for the service, but they never draw an easy breath in regard to where it will go next.

For an important station highway definitely located in the minds of the people before they ever voted the bonds to build it with, it has been argued over more and changed oftener than it would seem possible. Even in the papers Tuesday we saw where Prattville was offering to pay about $335,000 to get it changed again.

What we are hoping for now is for the contract to be let and the contractors get to work so quick that no new change can delay our part of it any longer.

Advertise it today and then let the contracts the first minute the law will allow and, possibly we could quit having to worry over it.

THAT COTTON MILL

It seems like the cotton mill proposition is moving rather slow, but we must all remember that in planning locating and organizing for any kind of an improvement that requires the outlay of large sums of money, it is always rather slow and tedious to get all of the details worked out so that actual results may begin to show up.

So far as we are able to learn from the officials of the Chamber of Commerce, all of the primary requirements of the promoters of this cotton mill enterprise have been complied with to date, and it is their move now in the game of completing the transaction.

They will doubtless be here some time this week for the purpose of selecting a site for the plant and to make what further arrangements that are necessary in carrying forward the work.

In the meantime, the Chamber of Commerce are not idle. They are feeling out the situation in several other directions looking for other plants that might be induced to come our way.

A spirit is abroad in the entire community now that is seeking for developments and where so much interest is concentrated on one thing, results always happen sooner or later.

We do not want to get out of heart and let up in our work. The thing to do is to lend all the aid you possibly can in pushing along a spirit of development, and in this work there is not a single person who can not help.

With the many inducements and advantages we have to offer industries are sure to come our way just so soon as we can convince them that we want them and that we will treat them right, give them a fair deal and cooperate with them in every way possible.

Mr. J. E. Barrett, of Verbena, was here Saturday. Mr. Barrett can always be counted on standing for what is right and in the best interest of his community and county.

SOME HIGH CLASS BASE BALL

The Season to Open Here Next Thursday. Clanton vs. Montgomery

All of the base ball fans in this section of the country will have an opportunity next Thursday, May 22, of seeing a specimen of real league ball pulled off at Polk's Park.

The Clanton ball team will, at that time, open up the season here, and they have selected as their adversaries the West Point Route team from Montgomery, who have the reputation of being the best amateur ball team in the state. They defeated Clanton one time in the past when we thought we had a mighty good team, so this time we are going to do our best to line up a more formidable aggregation against them than even the one we had at that time.

They are going to bring a pitcher and catcher along who both worked out this season on the Philadelphia League ball team. You know what that means. We are going to have to play ball if we hold our hand with such company as that.

As the game is to open the city League season here, it is to be hoped that everybody will go out and give the boys a good send off. If Clanton wants a ball team for this season this will be our opportunity to let the boys know it by turning out en masse to this opening performance. We should give them a record crowd on that day.

Now, let everybody take special notice of the following rules. There has been so much crowding along the base lines by the audience that it has become necessary to do something, not only to protect the fans themselves, but also to protect the players.

Every person who goes out to the game is requested to either take a seat in the grand stand or else line up along the fence in single file, so all can see and so the players will have free access to territory to field fouls and etc.

This rule is going to be insisted upon in justice to all and no one need take of fence or feel insulted if he is called on personally to obey these important regulations.

The visiting team will bring along the regular umpire from Crampton Bowl, Montgomery who will umpire this game. He is a most practical and skillful man in that position and is absolutely fair in rendering his decisions and we earnestly request that neither the players nor the fans will question any of the decisions he may render. We desire that his ruling shall be the last word in settling all questions of dispute.

The admission is going to be only 30 and 15 cents. If we can pay expenses at that price we will have other good games to follow. That will depend on how the public supports the team. Let every one see to it that we have a record crowd next Thursday afternoon so we can have some other games to enjoy during the long summer days.

HOME AGAIN

Mr. J. Hance Alfred and his wife, who left some 10 days ago for a vacation auto trip out through Mississippi, returned last Saturday afternoon.

They report a most jolly time and seemed greatly refreshed and rested up by their journey.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Changes Tax Bill to Accord With the Views of the Democrats.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IT LOOKS AS IF the Republicans must go before the country in the Presidential campaign with a tax reduction law mainly of Democratic fashioning. This if the changes in the house measure made by the senate are sustained in conference and if the bill Democrats then would have gained one of the big political advantages for which they have been striving.

With the aid of the radical Republican senators and the two Farmer-Laborites, the Democrats in the senate last week forced the acceptance of the Simmons substitute tax bill by the committee of the whole, in place of the Mellon plan. It fixes the surtax maximum at 40 per cent, and the normal tax rates at 2 per cent on net income up to $4,000, 4 per cent between $4,000 and $8,000, and 6 per cent above $8,000.

Under the Simmons surtax schedule a rate of 1 per cent applies on income between $10,000 and $14,000, instead of 1 per cent between $10,000 and $12,000, as in the Mellon plan, and 1 per cent between $14,000 and $18,000, as in the present law. The rates then advance by 1 per cent in intervals of $2,000 and $4,000 until 30 per cent is reached on income in excess of $96,000 and not in excess of $100,000. A rate of 37 per cent applies between $100,000 and $200,000, 38 per cent between $200,000 and $300,000, 39 per cent between $300,000 and $500,000, and 40 per cent on that portion of income in excess of $500,000.

Next the Democratic-radical Republican combination put into the bill the Democratic graduated corporation tax and the Democratic substitute for the estate tax. The former provides that corporation earnings be subject to a normal tax of 9 per cent, and undivided earnings in excess of specified exemptions would be subject to surtaxes ranging from a fourth of 1 per cent to 40 per cent. This would be a substitute for the 14 per cent flat tax already approved by the senate in lieu of the present tax of 12 1/2 per cent on corporation earnings, and the present capital stock tax, which is to be repealed.

The estate tax is changed to an inheritance tax, and provides that on a transfer to a husband, wife, child, adopted child, parent, or grandchild of the decedent a tax of 1 per cent up to $25,000 shall apply, with a graduated tax on larger amounts up to a maximum of 38 per cent of the amount in excess of $5,000. These rates shall be increased by 25 per cent in the case of a transfer to a brother, sister, nephew, or niece of the decedent. The rates are increased by 50 per cent in the case of a transfer to any other person. Exemptions are $25,000 for husband or wife, $10,000 for a parent, child, adopted child or grandchild, and $5,000 for others.

It is said in Washington that while President Coolidge strongly disapproves of the changes in the bill made by the senate, he is not likely to veto it. He hopes some of the objectionable features will be removed in conference, especially the corporation tax substitute and the amendment providing for full publicity of tax returns.

SENATE and house conferees on the Immigration bill agreed upon the feature providing complete exclusion of Japanese Immigration after July 3 next, and then, yielding to the earnest arguments of President Coolidge, changed their minds and decided to recommend postponement of exclusion until March 1, 1925. This would give the State department time to negotiate with Japan for exclusion by treaty, which would mollify the citizens of the island empire considerably. The provision for exclusion as agreed on is in the following language: "This subdivision shall not take effect as to exclusion until March 1, 1925, before which time the President is requested to negotiate with the Japanese government in relation to the abrogation of the present agreement on this subject."

Senator Shortridge of California declared his intention of raising a point of order against the conference report when it comes to the senate on the ground that the senate conferees had exceeded their authority.

SENATOR NORRIS' expressed intention of continuing his efforts to save Muscle Shoals and other valuable resources of the country for the people will win wide approval, but it isn't likely he is doing the cause any good by his vicious attacks on President Coolidge in that connection. The senate agriculture committee heard James Martin Miller, correspondent, declare again that he correctly quoted the President, in his telegram to Ford's secretary, as saying he was "trying to deliver" the Muscle Shoals project to Ford—which Mr. Coolidge has specifically denied. Norris then said some very nasty things about the Chief Executive.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE vetoed the Burns bill increasing the pensions of veterans and widows of the Civil war, on the ground of economy, but it is asserted it will be repassed by both houses. Secretary Mellon is said to have recommended that the President veto the soldiers' bonus measure.

SENATOR COUZENS and Governor Pinchot gained a big point in their fight on Secretary Mellon when the senate passed the Jones resolution empowering its committee to go ahead with paid counsel in the investigation of Mellon and the bureau of internal revenue. Presumably Francis J. Heney will get the job, and the inquiry will be broadened to include the conduct of the bureau in prohibition enforcement.

Operations of the Department of Justice in connection with liquor cases in Chicago were detailed to the Daugherty committee. These included the notorious Grommes & Ulrich liquor "split" and more about the conviction and pardon of Grossman. Former Judge Landis had testified vigorously concerning the Grossman matter, and last week C. W. Middlekauff, assistant attorney general, appeared before the committee and said Landis had told lies. This may develop interestingly later.

CALIFORNIA Republicans in their primary election deserted Hiram Johnson and gave their preference to Coolidge by a majority of something like 50,000. Johnson bore up under the blow bravely, declaring the result was not a tragedy. In the Democratic primaries McAdoo ran against an un-instructed state and won an impressive victory.

Indiana Republicans also decided for Coolidge against Johnson by a huge majority. The chief interest here was in the race of Ed Jackson for the gubernatorial nomination. He was backed by the Ku Klux Klan and obtained a clear majority over all his five opponents combined. The Democrats were solid for Ralston, and Dr. Carleton McCulloch was in the lead for the gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Coolidge has now defeated Senator Johnson in all the direct primary states except South Dakota, and veteran politicians believe the Californian is eliminated for all time as a Presidential possibility. The President and his close advisers are now formulating a platform for presentation to the Cleveland convention, devoting themselves at present especially to planks dealing with international matters. According to one venacious correspondent the tentative program embodies these features:

1. The United States shall join the World court if it is divorced from the League of Nations.
 2. The court shall be maintained in connection with The Hague tribunal, as originally advocated by the United States.
 3. An international conference on land and further naval armament limitation shall be called by President Coolidge, contingent upon the acceptance of the Dawes reparations settlement by the European powers.
- Senator Lodge, in a resolution introduced in the senate, has proposed that the President be asked to call a third Hague conference of all nations for the purpose of divorcing the world court from the League of Nations, and that the United States join the court on that condition.

NEARLY a dozen political parties or groups were active in the recent elections in Germany, and the results are that in the next reichstag certain groups favoring the acceptance of the Dawes committee report probably will be able to combine and control the vote of that body. Their majority, however, will not be large, and unless some of the groups change their views, the necessary two-thirds vote cannot be mustered for a change of the constitution so that the Dawes railroad plan can be accepted. The Nationalists claim 105 seats in the reichstag, making them the largest single party, and they assert the government of Chancellor Marx must resign and the chancellorship must be given a Nationalist. The Communists will play a big part in German politics, for they polled almost four million votes and have 60 members in the reichstag. They have revived their threat of a Red revolution and already have incited numerous strikes, both in the Ruhr and in unoccupied Germany. The Nationalists are said to be combining with the People's party and with some of the Catholics, Fascists and Bavarian People's party members to form a monarchist bloc with a total of 234 votes, which is a majority. It is believed this bloc will gradually work toward a restoration of the monarchy. Its success depends on the stand taken by the Catholics, who may prefer a coalition with the Socialists.

GERMAN police not long ago raided the Berlin office of the soviet Russian commercial delegation in search for some suspect, and seized a lot of documents. Russia protested strongly against what it asserted was a violation of her extraterritorial rights and demanded satisfaction, which Berlin refused to grant. All trade relations between the two countries were suspended and Krestinsky, soviet ambassador, was summoned to Moscow.

As was predicted some time ago, the negotiations in London between the British and Russian government are not getting along well. The soviet delegates presented an extraordinary list of damage claims to offset the old debts to the British. If allowed, they would leave Britain largely in the debt of Russia. But there is no chance that the English will allow them.

ARGENTINA'S extraordinary old age pension law will be enforced with great difficulty. Both employers and workers are fighting it and last week there was a combined strike and lockout throughout the country. The workers refuse to pay their part of the pension fund, and the employers refuse to collect from their employees. However, the government is determined and the opposition is gradually weakening, and the federation of labor ordered the strike discontinued.

COAST guard cutters, trappers, fishermen and Indians are continuing the search for Major Martin and Sergeant Harvey, the lost aviators of the army's globe-circling squadron, and an offer of reward has spurred the Aleutian Islanders to renewed effort. Various reports indicated that the missing plane flew to the north coast of the islands. The other three planes of the squadron proceeded to Atka island and were awaiting favorable weather for the flight to Attu island and thence to Japan.

THE general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Springfield, Mass., by a vote of 802 to 13, accepted in full the plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The union cannot be formally consummated for two years, but apparently the breach which has existed since 1844 is now healed. The bishops of the Church South will vote for the unification and the question will then be submitted to all annual conferences of both church organizations.

PEACE in Honduras was seemingly assured when on Monday the warring factions and representatives of the other Central American governments signed a treaty on board a United States cruiser. A temporary president of Honduras was selected pending new elections.

DAIRY TALK DAIRY

FEEDING DAIRY COWS FOR PRODUCING MILK

A cow weighing 1,000 pounds needs each day, for the maintenance of her body, an amount of food equivalent to that supplied in 8 pounds of clover hay and 20 pounds of good corn silage. She must have this food regardless of whether or not she produces any milk. Food used for milk production must be in addition to that required to keep the cow's body.

A 1,000-pound cow producing 20 pounds of 4 per cent milk a day, if properly fed, devotes about half of her feed to maintenance and half to milk production. Obviously when a dairyman has gone to the expense of supplying that half of the food required for maintaining the cow's body, it is poor economy to withhold any of the other half, all of which goes to produce milk. A cow then requires feed in accordance to the amount of milk she is able to produce. The heavy producer needs the most feed.

Farm-grown roughages (straw, hay, etc.) furnish the cheapest food nutrients. However, a good dairy cow cannot eat enough roughage to supply her needs for milk production. She must have some grain. Therefore, to feed with the most economy the following rules must be observed, says the University of Missouri college of agriculture:

1. Feed all the roughage a cow will eat. She will eat more if fed three times a day instead of twice.
2. Feed grain in proportion to the pounds of milk produced.

To a Jersey or Guernsey cow feed 1 pound of grain for each 3 to 3 1/2 pounds of milk produced.

To a Holstein, Ayrshire or Short-horn feed 1 pound of grain for each 4 to 4 1/2 pounds of milk produced.

Hollanders Breed Cows for Higher Production

"Weed, feed and breed" should be the slogan of every dairyman who has an eye to the future. Weed out the poor producer, feed well according to the amount of milk produced, and breed only to good, pure bred sires whose dams have records of better than 400 pounds of butterfat. If you follow these suggestions, your herd's average yield will be doubled, and more than doubled, in a few years.

In the United States 40,000 pounds of milk containing 160 pounds of butterfat is the production of the average cow. In Holland the average is just about double that figure. Why? Merely because the Hollanders have for many years fed and bred their cattle for high production.

A study of the records of more than 15,000 cow-testing associations in this country reveals two significant facts: First, in all cases the high-producing groups were the most profitable—they returned the greatest income over cost of feed. Second, the highest producers were also the groups that produced milk and butterfat most economically—that is, they showed the lowest feed cost a pound of butterfat or to the 100 pounds of milk.

Sudan Grass Makes Good Supplemental Pastures

In the handling of a herd of good milk cows, it seems to be imperative that farmers generally make provision for having supplemental pastures for their cows along in July and August when normally the native pastures give mighty little good feed. Probably the outstanding annual feed crop which we have for that purpose is Sudan grass and the planting of that crop on thousands of acres simply for the pasture it would give when the other pastures were at best inferior would mean normally a higher return an acre than now is obtained.

Pastures provide cheap milk because pasture is a cheap feed and gives an excellent yield of milk. Plan to put in a few acres of Sudan grass to use for pasturing your milk cows along next summer. The return will be higher an acre than if handled in any other way.

Dairy Notes

Cleanliness precedes a larger cream check.

Tuberculous animals show no symptoms until the disease is far advanced.

As a business man, Mr. Dairyman, can you afford not to improve your herd?

It were not that it results in cows giving more milk, warning their drinking water would be a waste of time.

Most scrub cows don't seem to appreciate the law of compensation; it doesn't take half the time to milk them that it does to feed them.

Butter scoring 62 per cent brings from seven to nine cents more a pound than butter scoring 89 per cent. Why not make better butter?

The beginning of a balanced ration for dairy cattle is to give the cow all the roughage she will eat—and nothing is better than alfalfa, or some of the other legumes.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET By LAURA MILLER

"GROCERIES AND FEED" MAY SATISFY MORE THAN ONE HUNGER

Girls who want to succeed in business frequently ask whether bookkeeping isn't a blind alley occupation; whether once proved dependable in handling details, they won't be expected to content themselves with the petty things as long as they work. And other girls, hunting an excuse, often, for going in search of the romantic success that they think to find in some big city, insist that "working for father never gets you anywhere. Why, your father and mother can't even seem to learn that you're grown up, if you're a girl!"

Yet father may be in his own comfortable fashion, a "capitalist," able to choose for daughter business connections and short cuts to an established place, that not one wage earner in 10,000 finds. And the task of winning father's confidence by hard work some clever salesmanship, is, if we may believe the daughters who have tried it, just the same sort of work plus salesmanship that's required to get ahead on any job.

It's the story of the bookkeeper plus the story of the daughter entering father's business that is indicated in a dignified letter head reading:

L. R. LEONARD
Dealer in GROCERIES AND FEED
Sullivan, Indiana

"After graduation," writes Miss Leonard, "I accepted a position as bookkeeper and clerk in my father's grocery store. Soon he began consulting me on minor details and management. Then he turned the whole over to me to manage. Later, deciding to retire from active business, he sold it to me. Now I own and operate one of the largest grocery stores in southern Indiana."

"I recommend bookkeeping, store management, and saving till she can go into business for herself to any young woman who has a talent for detail or for management. She can succeed and enjoy her work," continues Miss Leonard.

"A clean grocery store, with packages all in an orderly row, with goods displayed to the best advantage and the fragrant odor of good coffee rising above it all, ought to appeal to the housewife's instincts of any girl."

CINNAMON AND BRONZE

Once there was held a convention of clever business women. From Detroit, Cleveland, Seattle, New York and elsewhere they hobbled or developed temporary factions and antagonisms. Many "big" women stood out from the crowd.

One of them was particularly striking looking. She wore brown, not dead brown, but "the vivid child of cinnamon and bronze" as some one put it. Sports coat, dinner dress, evening dress, all carried the same note. Her clothes spoke of money, of good taste, of that sophisticated something that makes a woman look distinguished 100 yards away.

By and by some of the distant curious got closer to the stranger. Her age was apparently the early thirties. Her coloring was the sort to support and be intensified by the clever warm brown fannel and bronzed brocade.

"She runs a book store and makes $10,000 a year," was the next item of information that went the rounds.

"She's very sure of herself, but not in the least snippy," some one else contributed.

"And did you notice that when bonds were pledged in the executive session she just naturally seemed to head up her state delegation?" another Miss Gossip announced.

Introduced eventually, Christine Coffee proved, as the girl said, calm but not snippy. She had driven her mother and sister up for the week—a 500-mile drive not all over good roads—and she had to see that they were amused. That had kept her from making many acquaintances conventional-fashion.

The book store, in the West Virginia capital, started as a very tiny venture. It had grown gradually but soundly as the shifting population of the capital proved to want one sort of thing, the permanent residents a somewhat different line. In Miss Coffee's calm eyes, finding out what people want and furnishing it to them seems like doing sums in multiplication. Yet informative folk often furnish staggering statistics on the number of merchant bankrupts in the U. S. A. per year!

Occasionally, from unexpected sources, some other detail of Christine Coffee's book store in Charleston drifts into daylight. None of them contradict the impression given by the woman herself. All of them credit a personality to the little shop as spicy as cinnamon, as richly permanent as bronze.

MARRIED TWELVE YEARS BEFORE BABY CAME

Gladly Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Nebraska.—"I was married twelve years before my boy was born. I had a lot of female troubles and had been treated by a physician for them but they continued much the same. Then I read your advertisement in the newspapers and thought I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a good trial, for if it had helped others, why not me? I have taken 35 bottles of the medicine and am never without it in the house. My baby boy is three years old now and I sure am happy since I got relief from my troubles. When any one has trouble like mine, or any other like mine, I am always glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound so that they will get the right kind of medicine."—Mrs. JOE NOVAK, Box 682, Louisville, Neb.

Woman

If a man is in grief, who cheers him? In trouble, who consoles him? In wrath, who soothes him? In joy, who makes him doubly happy? In prosperity, who rejoices? In disaster, who backs him against the world, and dresses with gentle unguents and warm poultices the rankling wounds made by the slings and arrows of our rigorous fortune? Who, but woman, if you please.—William Makepeace Thackeray.

The Usual Arrangement

"Who's the boss at your home—your wife?" "Oh, we split it up—I say I am, but she really is."

Often a man does himself a favor by keeping on good terms with his neighbors.

The more haste we make in the wrong direction the further we are from our destination.

Is Your Work Hard?

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tormented with throbbing backache, feel tired, weak and worn out? Then look to your kidneys. Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains result. One suffers from kidney irregularities; nervous, irritable, fretful, and out of control! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. They should help you, too. Ask your neighbor!

ATE TOO FAST, GOT INDIGESTION

Experience of a South Carolinian
Who Took Black-Draught and Says He Could Soon Eat Anything.

Ballentine, S. C.—Mr. W. B. Bouknight, of this place, gave the following account of his use of Thedford's Black-Draught:

"I have used Black-Draught ever since I was a young man, and I am now 52 years old. I can't remember the time when we didn't have it in the family.

"Just after I married I had indigestion. Working out, I got in the habit of eating fast, for which I soon paid by having a tight, bloated feeling after meals. This made me very uncomfortable. I would feel stupid and drowsy, didn't feel like working. I was told it was indigestion. Some one recommended Black-Draught and I took it after meals. I soon could eat anything at any time.

"I use it for colds and biliousness and it will knock out a cold and carry away the bile better and quicker than any liver medicine I have ever found.

"Eating too fast, too much, or fatty chowder of your food, often causes discomfort after meals. A pinch of Black-Draught, washed down with a swallow of water, will help to bring prompt relief. Bloating and sensations of cramps, bad breath and other common symptoms of indigestion have disappeared after Black-Draught has been taken for several days.

Purely vegetable, safe, reliable.

PROFESSIONAL NURSE SAYS TANLAC HAS NO EQUAL

Mrs. J. Clark Says Tanlac Was More Than Match for Her Troubles.

By reason of the fact that she speaks from her long experience as a professional nurse, the statement of Mrs. J. Clark, of 415 Waiworth Ave., Oakland, Calif., will be of interest to all who are in need of an upbuilding tonic.

"In all my fifteen years' experience as a trained nurse," says Mrs. Clark's statement, "I never found the equal of Tanlac as a stomach medicine and tonic. Two years ago an attack of influenza left me without appetite and my stomach in such a bad fix that the little I did eat seemed to do me harm instead of good.

"Stomach pains would make me so weak I would feel right faint. The least exertion would completely exhaust me and six months before taking Tanlac I was so weak I had to hire my housework done. I was in bed most of the time for two months and was getting desperate.

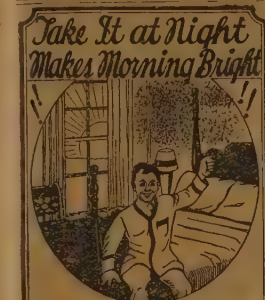

"Tanlac was more than a match for my troubles and eight bottles left me feeling fine. I eat and sleep like a child and have energy and strength that makes life a pleasure. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Spoons in History

Ordinary spoons were known to the Egyptians, who made them of wood, stone, ivory and bronze, and in Biblical times we may read that Moses made golden spoons for the tabernacle. Silver spoons have been found in the buried cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. The name "spoon" is evolved from an Anglo-Saxon word that meant splinter of wood, so we can guess what the primitive English employed for this useful implement.

Most Fat Steers From Corn Belt

One of the Most Practical Ways of Disposing of Corn Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers in the corn belt are gradually modifying their cattle-feeding, cattle-fattening and beef-making operations because of the changing conditions of high-priced land, intensive farming and market demands. Where once the whole operation of breeding the cows and raising the calves, growing them on pasture and roughage to the feeder stage and then fattening them for the market, was carried on at the corn belt farm, it has been gradually becoming more and more impractical to keep herds of cows to raise calves and to thus grow their own supply of feeders. Not more than a score of years ago there was an abundance of pasture and land was comparatively cheap. Today practically all land capable of being tilled is used for crop production. The raising of cattle primarily for fattening as beef has been giving way to the production of pure breeds for breeding stock.

Disposes of Corn Crop.

The fattening of steers, however, affords one of the most practical ways of disposing of the corn crop and of the many roughages produced on the average corn belt farm, and most of the fat cattle are still supplied by the corn belt. Instead of growing the feeders on the farm where they are to be fattened, however, there is an increasing tendency on the part of cattle feeders to purchase their feeder supply direct from the range which is more adapted to raising and growing calves to the feeder age than to fattening them. The range cattlemen are realizing the situation and are attempting to produce a high grade of feeder cattle. The corn belt cattle feeders, with an abundance of fattening feeds and limited pasture areas, see where they can better afford to purchase feeders from the range area than to raise them on land which is suitable for crop production.

Organizations of breeders are being formed in many sections of the country for the purpose of assembling several droves of feeder cattle and selling them at auction. Sales of this kind are usually extensively advertised in order to get a large number of buyers to attend. Buying direct eliminates marketing expenses at the live stock markets and insures against "stale" cattle, that is, cattle held at the markets for several days. Buying at the large live stock markets is preferred by many feeders, because there may be a saving of time, and there is the possibility of buying on a "quoted" market, which usually results in much lower prices. When the receipts are normal, however, there is usually considerable competition, resulting in a price considerably higher than the range price.

Buying and selling ability plays as important a part as skillful feeding in the successful handling of feeder cattle. Successful feeders study market conditions. In some seasons certain weights and classes of cattle may be purchased more economically than others. The cattle feeder should study the demands of the market for certain seasons and feed the kind of cattle that will be in demand when they are ready for market.

Objects in Fattening.

The primary objects in fattening steers are to utilize roughages for which there is little demand, to keep the soil in a high state of productivity by feeding the crops on the farm, and returning the income from farm operations. The fattening of cattle throughout the corn belt area is of two types—dry-lot fattening and fattening on grass. Most cattle fattened in the corn belt are dry-lot fed and are marketed before July 1. Very few cattle fed heavily on grain during the winter and spring months are ever put on grass the following summer. In some sections of Missouri feeders purchased in the fall are "roughed" through the winter largely on cornstalk feeds, straw, hay, stover and silage. In the spring the cattle are turned on grass and fed a half-grain ration. Cattle handled in this way usually are marketed before September 1.

There are various rations used in dry-lot feeding, but two combinations of feeds stand out rather prominently. In those areas where legume hay, such as clover and alfalfa, is produced abundantly, the standard ration is corn and hay. In other areas, where legumes are less thrifty, silage and protein meal, such as cottonseed or linseed, are fed in combination with corn and a mixed hay.

Available Rough Land.

High-priced land suitable for grain production in the corn belt area can hardly be profitably kept for pasture for the production of beef for the market. However, there are many farms having rough land that can be utilized best as a permanent pasture. Gains made by cattle on pasture are usually the most economical. When cattle are "roughed" through the winter, largely on cheap roughages, they can be marketed early the following fall at a cost materially lower than would result from dry-lot feeding. Cattle to be finished in the summer on grass, with possibly the addition of a little corn or other supplement in the fall, should not be fed heavily during the winter, but they should receive enough to maintain their weight. If they can be kept in a healthy, thrifty condition during the winter months they will do better on grass the following summer than if heavily grain fed during the winter.

Where pasture is available there are three practical methods of fattening cattle on grass, namely, grass alone, grass and additional feed throughout the entire feeding period, and grass with additional feed the last few months of the feeding period. The grass season is usually from May to November, inclusive, which is approximately 210 days. Two acres of good pasture are usually allowed per animal. After September the average pasture begins to decrease in value very rapidly, and cattle should be marketed at this time or given additional feed. Prevailing prices of corn and concentrates, the type of pasture, and the quality of cattle should largely determine the supplement to pasture, which, might be corn alone, corn with protein supplement, or the protein supplement by itself. Where grass alone is depended upon, from four to five months of grazing will usually give best results, because pastures are at their best from June to October.

Favorable Results in Spraying Tests

Reduction in Losses From Leaf-Spot Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Spraying strawberries for the control of leaf-spot diseases has frequently been recommended, and a few growers in widely separated localities have sprayed regularly for fruit rots and have reported an apparent reduction in losses. The first systematic experiments, however, for the control of fruit rots by spraying were made by the United States Department of Agriculture last year, and although the results of this one season's work must be regarded as inconclusive, some favorable results seem to be indicated. Various sprays were used, and no one seemed to show a marked superiority over another, indicating that so really satisfactory spray schedule has yet been worked out. The investigators feel, however, that the results justify the conclusion that spraying with bordeaux mixture, and in some cases dusting, reduced the losses from rot which developed after the fruit was picked sufficiently to more than justify the expense of the treatment. Strawberries are grown in this country under a great variety of conditions, and spray schedules must necessarily be varied accordingly. The result of the first season's work seems, however, to indicate that in the region of Beebe, Ark., where this work was done, strawberry rots may be reduced by spraying. It is accordingly planned to extend these spraying tests.

Plenty of Oyster Shell Helpful to Egg Layers

Several flock owners, at various times, asked in opinion as to the cause of soft-shelled eggs, says a writer in the Successful Farming. Hens may occasionally lay a soft-shelled egg even when supplied with plenty of oyster shells. Sometimes this is caused by an overfat condition or a poorly balanced ration.

If any of your hens lay an occasional soft-shelled egg, make sure that they are getting plenty of green food and that they are made to exercise in the straw litter. If this is done, and the balanced ration and oyster shell do not put a stop to the soft-shelled eggs, you may be sure that the trouble is due to some abnormal condition that prevents the fowls from manufacturing the lime as fast as it is needed. When this is the case the only cure seems to be to cull out any hens that are known to lay soft-shelled eggs frequently.

Such eggs are not only a frequent loss, but the breaking and eating of them by the other fowls encourage the habit of egg-eating.

FARM FACTS

Farm machinery outside to stay, won't run so well another day.

Eat what you can and can what you can't and sell what you can't eat or can.

The farmer who does not recognize the efficiency of publicity in his business is not realizing the fullest measure of success.

More than 85 per cent of this country's corn crop is fed to live stock, and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food.

Alfalfa may be sown in the spring with oats at the regular oats sowing time. The stand will depend upon the spring and early summer weather.

Except on the very smallest farms, the manure spreader soon will save its cost in time saved and greater efficiency in spreading.

Sweet clover may be sown with oats. Some growers claim that they can get a better stand of sweet clover by sowing it alone on a well-prepared seed bed but many others always use a nurse crop such as oats.

Successful swine men recommend the use of guard rails and light bedding as protective measures for the very young pigs. These two things make it possible for the pigs to avoid being overlaid by the sow.

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress,

The Senate cut the Mellon the other day and found some real good meat on the inside.

Coolidge seems to be having more trouble with a republican Congress than Woodrow Wilson did. The old party whip must be worn out.

Senator Healin rattled the dry bones of the senate the other day by a speech on "investigation and emigration." Believe us, he got 'em told.

Silent Cal has more than his hands full these days in trying to whip the G. O. P. into line. The old elephant is getting very murlly in his old days.

For a presidential veto seems to terrorize the present Congress enough that you can tell it, "finny" going on these days.

Corrupt politics are rapidly destroying party lines. "Voting for the man" is becoming a popular slogan all over the country.

If the South and West are strong enough to name a democratic candidate for president McAdoo has a walk over.

Glory Be! Party lines in Congress seem to be fading away. It looks like "a voice from home" must be leaking in up there some where.

The democrats have a better chance to win the next election than they have ever had, but if they listen to the siren song of that New York bunch, their defeat is already assured.

America for Americans is a popular gospel to preach these days and the first thing you know, every politician in the land will be using it for a text every time he opens his mouth.

A five passenger Ford carries four passengers on the front seat very often, when two are young men and two young women. So why not call them eight passenger Fords now.

If the democratic party can get out of New York City in June with a winning ticket it will deserve the support of every honest voter in the United States.

The woods are full of "dark democratic horses" these days. The general opinion is that neither of the open candidates in the field will be able to muster two thirds vote in the convention.

Many wise and wonderful things were said on "Mothers day" and much good advice was handed out, but the joy riders and "petting party" participants don't seem to think it applied to them and their modern social ideas.

Not a word of the woman who is out in the woods with a young man until the small hours of the night. She might do no wrong, though that is very doubtful, but her example has unfitted her to train a future generation to either goodness or greatness.

It has been a good many years since we have heard any person refuse to dance, play cards or gamble because their church forbid it. Why is that, do you reckon? Have the churches "broadened" their rules.

Personally base ball is the greatest game in the world to us, but we are such an old foggy that we do not favor Sunday ball games. We hope the young men of Clanton will write Sunday school instead of base ball on their Sunday program.

Mr. Underwood made the mistake of attacking the Ku Klux Klan in the very opening of his campaign, and now, as he sees defeat staring him in the face he wants the Democratic party to make the same mistake by putting in a plank condemning the Klan. He seems to aspire to lead the party even to defeat.

At the great Wesleyan Female college in New York an edict has gone forth that no girl with bobbed hair or who smokes cigarettes can matriculate there any more. That is grand, as we expect the school will soon act to lift the ban or close the doors. We are modern and enlightened now, you know.

PROMISING SIGNS

One can not fail to note the fact that certain marked changes are taking place in the trend of political sentiment almost all over our country.

For long years, in fact, ever since the civil war, the real controlling influences that have directed and dictated the policies of our government have been the organized money power, mainly located in Wall Street.

In fact, almost without an exception, all of the real legislation, with teeth in it, that has been put out at Washington has been in the interest of the large monied interests. The people who labor and have produced the vast wealth of this land, have been denied a voice in the policies put forth by our law makers.

It has been impossible to elect a Congress that did not fear the power of wealth and did not bow down and do the bidding of the people who had contrived to get our financial system in their clutches. Any kind of promises would be made to the dear people by the hungry politicians when election time drew near, but after the voting was done these honest men of toil were sent back to their labors and expected to bow down a little harder at work and in silence while the nabobs of wealth framed up more drastic legislation to rob and impoverish them and keep them in a vassalage almost equal to serfdom.

In the last few months it looks like a new spirit has been born in our congressional halls and a new influence at work that seems to have in mind the common good of the people at large.

For twenty-five years the common people have been clamoring for protection from the thousands of pauper and criminal immigrants whom the old countries have been spewing out on our shores, but all that it amounted to was a few "amendments" added to our immigration laws which invariably made it easier for this dirty riff raff to enter our country, with all of their vile and pernicious bolshevik propaganda. The coal barons and the steel magnates needed them as a dirty club to beat down wages and put more dishonest dollars in to their pockets and Congress has, heretofore, always obeyed their orders and fixed the laws, so this strain of vicious un-American pollution could continue to flow and supply the operators with all of the cudgels needed to bruise the head of honest American labor.

But suddenly, some mysterious influence produced a wonderful change in our present Congress and, over the vigorous protest of the capitalists, and directly in opposition to the wishes of the president and cabinet of the party in power, an immigration bill was passed by a staggering majority vote, that goes farther towards closing our doors to the hoodlum element and places more restrictions upon character qualifications than any law we have ever had before.

And just the other day the famous Mellon tax bill that was framed on purpose to relieve the rich and place still more of the burden of government expenses on the poor, met its Waterloo in both houses and an amendment proposed by the democratic side of the house, reversing the other bill almost entirely and putting a rightful portion of the burden back on the wealthy class, was passed, by a decided majority, and will be made a law, ever over the veto of the president.

One suggestive feature of the passage of both of these splendid bills, lies in the fact that, to a large extent, the hide bound party lines, that have been so rigidly observed for the years gone by, were ignored to a great extent, and our law makers voted independently and as their conscience and good judgement directed.

There is a general spirit of reactionary tendencies abroad in our land now and it is the most hopeful sign of good times ahead that we know of.

Political parties are a necessity in our form of government to obtain the best effects, but when they become organized into rings and combinations and begin to dicker and deal with the monied class and sell legislation to serfdom.

the highest bidder, the day of their usefulness has passed and it is time for the people to wake up and spoil out these lies, if necessary, to obtain a fair and equitable government for all the people.

According to the fundamental principles of our country this is a nation of free American citizenship. And to the rank and file of this class belong the rights of direct representation and direct recognition as integral parts of this vast empire of freedom.

No power or combination, at home or abroad, has the right to rule, govern or dictate to this sovereign nation, and it is an indisputable fact that an awakening of this dormant sentiment of American freedom is responsible for the sudden change in the refuge spirit that is dominating our Congress today.

When corruption gets control of an political party it is time to regard no longer your reality to that party, but to have ceased to live up to its promises. The discrediting of party lines in Congress at this time is one of the brightest promises that the future holds out to us.

There are some sacred principles of freedom that are greater and more important than any party, and the American people recognize them and are going to insist upon and enforce their recognition by any party that presumes to take hold of the reins of government.

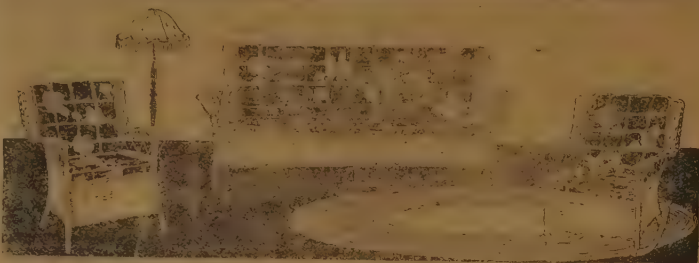

God speed the day.

BEAUTY FOR YOUNG WOMEN

A Sermon

(By G. A. Hornady.)
Text: Psalms 144-12

"That our daughters may be as corner stones polished after the similitude of a palace."

The corner stone to a building is not only the most stable part of the foundation, but the most beautiful. The words of the text, when analyzed, are but a prayer on the part of the psalmist that the women of the church should be beautiful in their lives. These are the women who are good and beautiful in society. Character!

None of us can throw off the responsibility of influence. "We scatter seeds with careless hands and dream we never shall see more; but for a thousand years their fruit appeared in seeds that mar the land or healthful store."

The women who are living pure and true lives are bound to be the factors which shall tend to the advancement of the human family to a higher civilization and to a better citizenship. The women who are the reverse to these are running in the way of sin and death, are a curse to themselves and to all with whom they come in contact. Their feet run in the road which leads to hell and they lead others to destruction. It is bad to think of a woman going down to eternal despair, but how much worse to think of the wails of we arising in eternity from those whom she led in this world along the paths of unrighteousness. "I charge thee, by the days gone by, keep thou the one true way, lest in that land, their cry of woe thou."

Beauty for women. God wants all women to be beautiful. Not simply beautiful in form and face, but in all of the attributes which can cause them to claim kinship with the skies. A horse is the most beautiful of all the animals, and yet I have seen one of the finest runaway and kick a buggy into kindling wood. The flower of the Jamestown weed, which in common vernacular is known as the Jimson weed, is a most sightly bloom, but it is malodorous. A young man will, with pleasure, wear a boutonniere of lovely and sweet smelling violets, but you will never see one with a button hole bouquet of the Jimson weed blooms pinned to the lapel of his coat.

Not all women can be beautiful in person, but there is comfort in knowing that while "beauty is but skin deep and ugly to the bone, beauty will waste and fade away while ugly holds its own." One of the loveliest women I have ever known was as homely as a stick and mud chimney, but such was her character and her life that she was a blessing and a benediction to all who knew her. There are two things that enter into the composition of beauty in women. No woman can lay claim to beauty unless there is development of the mind. Paint and powder and handsome clothes do not make a beautiful woman, no matter how perfect in form and face she may be, if she has failed to cultivate her intellect. At best she can but be a soulless image of ignorance. She may be a lovely picture to look upon, but she is fitted to fill no sphere of usefulness or of usefulness to others.

While our state is far down in the scale of illiteracy, there is no excuse today for any failure to secure an education, when common schools, colleges and universities are open to all. Alas, that it is true so many of the young women are taking more thought for the pursuit of so called pleasures than they take in time to seek after the higher things of life.

Flappers and joy riders may accumulate a knowledge of some things, but the mind remains void of the essentials to a true and noble womanhood. Worldly pleasures may be sweet for a season but they do not make for that mental development which fits us for the duties and responsibilities of life. Cultivate the mind, but the heart must be the chief concern if duty is to be had. We are told in the scriptures that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." Out of the heart are the issues of life. If the heart is right the character will be right, conduct will be right, the thoughts will be right, and the words which flow from the lips will be in accordance with decency and righteousness.

Scientists tell us that the air has sound waves upon which are borne the faintest whisper. The radio proves the truth of the theory, and it is a solemn thought that our words, when uttered, will go on and on until they confront us in eternity. How needful is it then that our speech be governed by a right heart.

In the natural depravity interned in us all there is but one way by which the heart can be made beautiful. The blood of Christ is the only means whereby the heart can be cleansed and made beautiful in the sight of God. Seek after the beauty of holiness without which none shall see God.

I stood one lovely star lit night and watched a species of the cactus plant (a night blooming cerus) as under the Divine economy of growth it was slowly developing such blooms of beauty as I had never thought could belong to earth. As they gradually unfolded the petals appeared snow white and as perfect in form as are only those things which come from the hands of the great sculptor. Above them the stamens lifted themselves, their head bedecked with crowns of golden glory. Upon the night air there was given forth a fragrance as sweet as if dropped from the censurers of heaven. Young women, it is intended of God that you shall be the most beautiful flower that blooms in this old earth garden of ours. Take Christ for your Saviour, give your heart and life into his keeping and you will be beautiful in time making the world better and sweeter by your influence and in the end shall adorn the garden of the skies. Seek after the beauty of holiness.

Avoid Using Castor Oil

—W. L. Hand.

Nobody likes to give or take castor oil. There is really hardly any need for it since the invention of Livo-lax.

It has a marked action on the liver as well as the digestive tract, and so it can be used in cases of bilious attack, and when a cold is coming on, it takes the place of calomel and castor oil. Literally hundreds of mothers have earnestly thanked me for putting this good remedy on the market.

Children love to take Livo-lax and it is just as good for the same conditions in adults.

A bottle of Livo-lax costs but 30c at any drug store.

CROP CONDITIONS

From reports from all over the county we learn that crop conditions are not so favorable as they were last week.

The cold wave that arrived last Friday remained with us until Tuesday of this week, with cold north winds by day and almost frosting temperatures at night.

Cotton, which was naturally slow in coming up this year, was just in shape to suffer most from this cold snap and much of it died on the job. It is hoped, however, that as little of it had been chopped out, that a pretty fair stand may still be left on the ground.

While the cold has not been severe enough to kill out any corn, it has retarded its growth and been an active agent in putting the bud worms to work and enabling them to put in full time. Considerable complaint is being made of their ravages and, in some instances, we have heard of farmers who were going to plow up and plant their corn over to secure a stand.

The marketing of the strawberry crop is still proceeding, but the cream of the crop has about been put on the market.

Good many farmers who have orchards have told us that most of the early peach and plum trees are shedding very seriously and that the prospect is not at all flattering for a good yield of fruit.

VISITING AT LUVERNE

Mr. M. L. White and wife left in their auto soon Saturday morning to visit the relations and friends of Mrs. White at Luverne.

They had with them Mrs. Eloise Taylor, who went with them to Montgomery where her and Mr. Taylor are going to locate.

SEVENTH GRADE GRADUATION

Last Friday night a very large audience assembled at the High School auditorium to witness the graduating exercises of the Seventh grade pupils from the City school.

There were 34 of these bright young boys and girls who classed up to the required grade to finish with honor their primary studies and be ready for High School work next term. They made a splendid showing and were a credit to the school and the efficiency of the teachers who conduct the city school.

Buster Foshee especially distinguished himself, having made the highest percentage of any pupil in the county. J. D. Evans made the second highest. The School Board gave to Buster a very fine ever-sharp gold pencil as a recognition of his splendid work.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson pastor of the Methodist church, delivered a splendid address to the fortunate pupils and to the large audience that was a gem for the occasion and was greatly enjoyed by every one.

Prof. Stevens, the efficient and popular principal of the High School, also made a short talk along educational lines that was replete with wisdom and full of sound and sensible precepts for all present. It was greatly enjoyed by all. Prof. Stevens is an able, apt and direct speaker whose reputation is becoming wide spread in this section.

The City Civic League had offered some prizes for the best essay on bird conservation, and for rat annihilation. They secured the services of Prof. J. L. J. L. ndototvoxmntficovrableP J. L. Johnson to deliver these prizes after the graduating exercises which he did.

The first prize for Bird conservation went to Johnnie Vandever and an honorable mention to Clyde Lowe.

The second prize was won by Myrtle Headley and honorable mention won by Mantle Wallace.

For rat extermination William Simpson was winner by the wonderful record of 83 rats destroyed, Curlee Cleck ley came in as second winner by a score of 47 rodents disposed of.

The occasion was a pronounced success in every particular.

TO FARMERS NEAR

Just a word about what our hustling neighbor, Thorsby, is doing in the Strawberry business.

Here is the record of the Strawberries shipped from Thorsby, prior to May 5, this year, the first five cars.

Car No. 1 @ $5.00 416 crates $2062.00
Car No. 2 @ $5.05 420 crates $2121.00
Car No. 3 @ $5.05 420 crates $2108.88
Car No. 4 @ $5.35 420 crates $2226.13
Car No. 5 @ $5.70 420 crates $2394.00
Class "B" crates in cars sold for 15% less.

We are told that Thorsby would ship from one to two cars of berries per day until the end of the season, getting more than two thousand dollars per car for them.

Clanton ought to ship an average of six cars of berries per day during the season. Think what that would mean to the farmers; money coming in this time of the year when it is most needed, to complete the cotton and corn crop. You can quit buying on a credit. In the fall you will have money clear to buy the things you have been promising your family. You owe it to yourself and your family, so look into this matter carefully AND ACT.

Picking is the greatest problem, one adult or a good size child can pick two or three crates per day, and the picking from an acre is usually 10 or 12 crates, picking every other day. If you have the picking force you can plant more, ore you can plant two acres, pick half one day and half the next day. Talk to your neighbors about this matter, right away, you have to have enough to ship by the car load lots, talk to friend in or near Thorsby about the results they are having.

Your ground will have to be prepared and the plants set out this fall, this would give you only a small crop for next year, but the years following you would have full crops and would bring in money when money would mean the most to you.

Thorsby reports that they are getting the best results from the berries known as the Klondyke variety, and you can get plenty of them around Thorsby at small cost.

WHO LIED?

Last Monday it was given out by the Underwood Campaign Committee that Gov. Brandon was to make the speech nominating Underwood for president at the New York convention, and, in the same connection, the statement was made that Underwood would make a fight on the Ku Klux Klan at the same time, implying that Gov. Brandon was going to kinder daddy that fight also.

In the Tuesday morning paper the Governor hastened to say that he had not even been invited to pull off that stunt.

Castor Oil? Never Again!

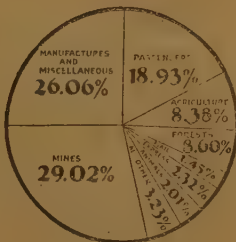

That's what numbers of mothers are saying since they have tried Liv-o-lax for the bilious attacks, indigestion and similar disorders of their children. Mother dreads giving castor oil just as much as the baby fears taking it, and the same applies to calomel. It was because the common family laxative fails to act on the liver that W. L. Hand began experimenting to devise a remedy that would act on both liver and bowels and take the place of calomel and castor oil, and the Liv-o-lax formula, as has been proven in thousands of households, meets this need. Liv-o-lax is purely vegetable and is a liquid remedy, so pleasant to taste that the children love to take it. It is just as good for bilious conditions and disorders of digestion in adults. You can get Liv-o-lax now at your favorite drug store.

PROTECT FOOD FROM VERMIN AND RODENTS

Rats Are the Most Destructive Animals in the World.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Insects, rats and mice and other household pests not only destroy and pollute foods in obvious ways, but they may also infect them with micro-organisms dangerous to health. The rat has been called the most destructive animal in the world, partly because it spreads bubonic plague, and the common house fly fully deserves the epithet "typhoid-fever" fly, and is also a known carrier of the bacteria of cholera, dysentery and tuberculosis. Even the so-called "fly specks" often deposited on food and dishes may be infected with disease germs and the eggs of dangerous parasites.

Methods of Control.

Methods of exterminating or controlling rats and mice, flies, ants and other household insects that damage foods are given in various bulletins issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Food more than anything else draws these pests to a house, and their wells are at least discouraged by keeping supplies covered or in closed containers and by disposing of garbage promptly.

In a new Farmers' Bulletin 1374, "Care of Food in the Home," attention is called to the need for storing food in such a way that insects, rodents and pet animals cannot reach it.

Fly Most Dreaded.

Sometimes, in spite of all the housekeeper's precautions, weevils or worms develop quickly in apparently sound cereal products, dried vegetables and fruits or nuts. In reality, these pests come from minute eggs deposited by insects either in or upon grains or other seeds or in the flour or other material itself or in the crevices of the box or container used in storage. Such infested food materials should be destroyed promptly and the containers thoroughly washed and scalded before a new supply is stored.

PROPER HEIGHT FOR SINKS IN KITCHEN

Various Tasks Can Be Comfortably Done.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The various kitchen tasks can be done most comfortably at different heights. Sinks especially are often set too low; 30 to 31 inches from the bottom of the sink to the floor is considered a good average height, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The housewife should experiment until she finds the best height for her sink, and also for the table, ironing board, washbasin and stove. The woman who stoops over a table to wash dishes as this farmer's wife in Frederick county, Maryland, is doing is sure to have a tired feeling and possibly a backache, when her work is done. Another farm woman, living in Middletown, Md., has been persuaded by the extension agent to install her sink sufficiently high, as is shown in the other picture.

The table and stove can be raised on blocks hollowed out to fit the legs, and with a little ingenuity the ironing board and tub can be adjusted. A stool or a high chair on which to sit while preparing vegetables at the sink, washing dishes, or ironing saves energy and helps to prevent fatigue.

VARIOUS ACTIVITIES OF WOMAN'S ROUTINE

Facts on How Housewife Spends Her Time.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

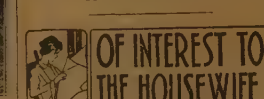

To obtain first-hand facts on how the housewife spends her time from the hour she arises until the last light is out, the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture devised some time ago a chart in the form of a clocklike diagram on which the various activities of a woman's day could be readily recorded. These charts were issued to a great many women who agreed to fill them out properly for a week or more and thus furnish records as to how many minutes were usually spent in such activities as dishwashing, dressing children, laundry work, sewing, or any other home tasks.

To supplement the information obtained by these charts, two additional blanks have been prepared for the housekeeper to fill out. One blank will show how much help the mother received in doing each kind of work, and whether the help was paid or unpaid. Space is arranged for showing whether the help was given by boys or girls. This record will provide conclusive evidence as to who pumps the water, tends the fire, disposes of the ashes, fills the lamps, or cares for the children, as well as who attends to preparation of food and clearing it away, to bed-making, cleaning, laundry work, and mending. Undoubtedly some interesting sidelights will be thrown on the part played by the masculine members of the household in all these tasks.

The board, lodging, and laundry of the hired farmhands often constitute an inescapable part of the farm woman's work. The blanks used in the time studies will show when this is a part of her ordinary duty, as well as when she or not she has other hired help who take part of the burden of housework from her shoulders.

When the time chart has been kept for the agreed period and the blank showing help received has been filled out, the co-operating housewife is asked to answer a brief questionnaire which gives the investigator a clear idea as to the special conditions in that particular family.

These charts and blanks are to be distributed to housewives in the districts selected for study, but they will also be supplied on request to any housekeeper, rural or urban, who would like to make a personal analysis of the work she does and who will at the same time co-operate with the bureau of home economics by sending the blanks in to Washington when they are filled out. The bureau will return them after the information is summarized and will give the housewife a copy of the summary.

Wash the zinc tray in your gas stove then cover with vinegar, let stand a few minutes, rinse well and dry. All spots will disappear after a few such treatments.

Save all the paper bags in which bread and dry groceries are delivered and use them as gloves to slip on if you have to poke the fire or put on more coal when making cakes or pastry.

Willing to Wash Tea Cups

By JANE OSBORN
(©, 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Hilda Hope, Kate Walters, Rod Hilton and Jim Dutton constituted the "Eastern office" of Burton & Co. This quartet, besides a couple of ever-varying office boys and two or three very young and inexperienced girl stenographers, was all there was to the "Eastern office."

At thirty or thereabouts Hilda and Kate regarded themselves and generally were regarded as perfectly safe splinters. "And of course no one could ever take a personal interest in men like Rod and Jim," Hilda and Kate told each other. So everything went along with as little display of jealousy or friction or sentiment as is conceivably possible where men and women are employed on an equal footing.

Then came Peter Yarmouth from London. For the first week or so his presence made little difference. Hilda and Kate assured each other that he was a "perfect lamb" and let it go at that.

On a dreary day in March Peter chanced to drop into the private office of Hilda Hope on some business detail. Kate Walters was already on the scene. The gentle hissing of a tea kettle over an alcohol lamp attracted his attention. His fine gray eyes glinted, the very sound of a steaming kettle suggested tea—and afternoon tea spelled comfort and content to this son of Britain.

"Afternoon tea?" queried Peter.

"Jolly, I say!"

"Yes," said Kate, and went on talking business. She wished devoutly that Hilda had extinguished the lamp and hidden the kettle when Peter entered the room.

Having finished perfunctory business Peter started toward the door. "I'll leave you ladies to your tea," he commented lightly.

The door closed. "Should we have asked him?" asked Hilda.

"Certainly not," insisted Kate. "If we had him, then we would have to have Jim, and if Rod had found out that he and Jim were drinking tea in here then he'd have been sore. It would have meant tea for five. They never make tea for us."

"But I think he was offended," said Hilda. "You know they always have it in offices in London."

"Have we got three cups and saucers?" asked Kate weakly.

"Counting the one without a handle," said Hilda. "I know for a fact that Rod's out—his wife met him to go buy a dining room table."

"And Jim's seeing a terribly important customer from South America," countered Kate. "We might this time."

So it was that Peter Yarmouth presently received an invitation to tea in Kate's room. During his brief stay he was occupying a bit of a room beside that of Rod.

"I really can't see for the life of me why you don't do this every afternoon," said Peter, as he regarded his cup of amber infusion contentedly before tasting it. "We always do in London, and 'you my word, we get every bit as much done in a day."

"All very true and pretty," said Hilda, stirring her own tea with a steel paper cutter. "But who washes the tea cups?"

"The girls, of course," said Peter. "To my own office my private secretary does it—why not?"

"Well, you needn't think that our girls here would wash up afternoon tea cups in our office. They'd leave first," said Kate. "We actually did try it here a few years ago. Really the girls wouldn't do it. They thought it was menial—and—"

"Who's going to wash up this afternoon?" asked Peter, showing real surprise.

"Why, just this once we are," said Kate.

"That time we tried tea, you see," went on Kate. "We found the girls wouldn't do it so we decided that every fellow could wash up for himself. Hilda and I each washed our own right here. And do you remember, Hilda, how poor, dear Rod, who had just been married, used to take his little cup and saucer home in his pocket to be washed? He wouldn't wash it here—it was beneath his dignity."

Peter's good-looking face looked really pained.

"Bless my soul, and why wouldn't you wash his tea cup for him?" he asked.

"Oh, it wasn't the work," said Kate. "It was the principle involved. We women shoulder responsibilities together here in business. We don't take advantage of our sex; there was no reason why Rod should either."

"But don't you see," Peter said, turning to Hilda, the younger of the two women—Hilda, whose slender, fair features seemed to Peter so pre-eminently feminine, "don't you feel that making tea and even clearing up is something that it is a woman's privilege to attend to? I'd say it really is a privilege. Why at home I never think about the cups and saucers. My secretary attends to that and I get it all neat and hot every afternoon."

Hilda found herself wondering about that secretary of his. It seemed to her that he had brought her into the conversation an unnecessary number of times.

The conversation shifted to other matters, but Peter seemed depressed.

worried, absent. Peter had arranged before with Hilda to go to lunch with her the following day, and Hilda had accepted the invitation, as she had often before accepted invitations from Rod or Jim. She had thought that it was some special business arrangement to be discussed—thought, that, that no doubt Kate and Jim and Hilda would lunch with them.

When one o'clock arrived Peter was ready in Hilda's office waiting. "Perhaps, though, you'd rather not go," he said.

Hilda looked amazed. It seemed now as if this robust young Englishman looked almost ill. Something was clearly disturbing him. "Why Peter Yarmouth," she said, using his name quite as she had always done, "that of Rod or Jim. Have I offended you?"

"No," said Peter, standing there before Hilda's desk. "Only I don't make you out, Hilda. You said about tea cups and all sorts of thing yesterday. I thought a woman regarded it as an honor to attend to those things. I thought that when a woman, like she looked upon what she did to in her home as not so much menial work."

"When she's married—," said Hilda. "That's very different. What a woman does in her home is quite different."

"Then you wouldn't think it beneath a woman's dignity to wash tea cups or breakfast cups, or, for instance, for her own husband—this is of course—," guess you know what I'm driving at."

Hilda looked up at Peter Yarmouth, big, well-dressed Englishman, the way, and saw him fumbling for words before her like a bashful school boy.

"Peter Yarmouth, I do believe you've fallen in love with an American girl and what we said yesterday about the tea cups has begun to worry you." Hilda saw Peter stretch his tense hands toward her.

"Peter Yarmouth," she said, "you don't mean—? Why, bless me, dear old heart, I'd wash tea cups for you and—"

"And I'd black boots for you," gasped Peter as Kate Walters appeared at the door.

Honolulu Always City of Charm and Romance

In the sense that Honolulu enjoys wonderful, soft climate, where the palms are nodding in the gentle breeze and the rhythm of the surf breaks her wonderful beaches and the moonlight floods the hills and valleys—then I say that it has charm and romance, writes F. J. Hulton in Life Magazine. Most visitors, however, get a rude shock at first when they see an up-to-date American city, with traffic cops and all the modern conveniences of modern civilization, but the moonlight and the surf at the beach eventually get under the skin and they come away vowing there is no place in the world having so much charm and romance.

At present there are only 30,000 blooded Hawaiians, and they are increasing annually. They intermarry with other nationalities, and in so doing they are marrying themselves out of existence.

Most of the Hawaiians are of the specimens of humanity; their average height is about 5 feet 10 inches.

All girls are beautiful—some more so than others. This applies also to the Hawaiian girls. Most of the dress today in the latest American styles in both the towns and in the country.

In the early days the Hawaiians intermarried with the Chinese, and, of course, those descendants have Chinese features.

Aristocracy of Books

Two thousand summers have passed to the monuments of Greek literature, as to her marbles, only a mature golden and autumnal that they have carried their own race and celestial atmosphere into all to protect them against the coming of time. Books are the treasure of time. Books are the substance of generations and nations. Books, the oldest and the best, are naturally and rightfully on the shelves of every cottage. They have been of their own to plead, but to enlighten and sustain the reader's common sense will not refuse to resist the advances of every age and, more than kings or emperors, exert an influence on mankind.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Vegetable Sponges

In Algeria an extensive industry has been developed in the cultivation of what are known as "vegetable sponges." The chief market for product at present is Paris, and specimens are not uncommon in United States.

They have come into extensive use for the toilet, the bathroom and for other domestic purposes. As to maturity, the fruit is eaten when the stage of ripeness has passed the fibrous matter becomes arated from the pulp and forms a tough, spongy mass. The material prepared for the market is bleached in a weak lime bath.

Ladies Needed Time

Mr. Spottis was a theatergoer who kept a close eye on matters. Indulgent boss, he still wished to know the whereabouts of things. So the new play had a ten-minute intermission, he wanted to know reason for that.

"We have to bow to the fact," he exclaimed the house manager, "is a sad play. We must give the ladies sufficient time to repair their faces."

THE LORD OF THUNDER GATE

by Sidney Henschel Small

THE MAN of this tale is more than a man; he is the spirit of adventure. The fact that he is an American penetrating the ancient mysteries of Japan, the rites of Shinto and Samurai, and passing himself off as a member of the country's aristocracy, makes the adventures peculiarly keen and dramatic.

The dignity of the oriental habit of thought, the stateliness of ceremonial, the poetry of expression which prevails in ordinary life and is greatly accentuated in the higher circles—the charming qualities of one of the most interesting of peoples—are set forth in sharp contrast to the guile of some of its members.

REDUCED FARES TO FLORENCE SEMI-CENTENNIAL AND SUMMER SCHOOL

The State Normal School at Florence, Alabama will celebrate its Semi-Centennial Anniversary during the last week in May. The summer term of that institution will open on the ninth of June. Reduced railroad tickets, one and one-half fares for the round trip, will be available both to the students of the summer school and to any person wishing to attend the Semi-Centennial Celebration. To obtain the reduced rates one must write to President Henry J. Willingham Florence, Alabama for railroad identification certificates, free for the asking, to be used when one is purchasing these reduced railroad tickets. Better write at once for some of these identification certificates if you are interested.

According to the latest statistics there is an average of one divorce to every seven marriages. Seventy-two per cent of the divorces are asked for on account of a correspondent. In other words, for one party or the other, proving unfaithful to their vows. This indicates a pretty high per cent of "infidelity" going on these days.

AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY

Clanton has out grown its hall, or Lodge room needs, to such an extent that a much larger hall is now an absolute necessity.

Some of the live real estate men will have to take notice of this need and make some kind of an arrangement for the accommodation of the rapidly growing population.

A real large and well arranged Lodge hall will meet with an instant and lucrative business here. Who will take prompt care of this imperative need?

TO THE PUBLIC GENERALLY

TAKE NOTICE: I will not be responsible for any debts contracted, obligations assumed, nor contracts made by my wife, Mrs. E. V. Speer, who is now residing with her mother, at Mt. Creek, Alabama unless same is authorized by me in writing.

This May 12th, 1924.

RATHER STRANGE

During the past few days many lurid stories of parked cars and "petting parties" have been reported from adjacent rural communities. In most of these reports a strong sentiment of disfavor is noticeable, and these good people who live out in these particular localities are becoming very indignant, so much so, that you may not be surprised, at any time now, to hear of exposures and developments that will be distinctly humiliating to parents and lastingly disgraceful to the participants.

The Chilton County News has referred several times to these shameful and sorrowful conditions but the parents and others who have read these warnings have seemed to be satisfied with the conditions or afraid to even raise a voice in protest, so matter have gone from bad to worse, as the stories go, and an eruption of public indignation is becoming more certain and more sure every day.

Unless some of you who have young daughters have made up your mind to swallow the disgraceful exposure in silence and let your girl go on the downward part to the end, you had better take stock of her whereabouts after the sun goes down.

The Chilton County News does not delight in the reiteration of these horrible conditions, but feels like it would be recreant in the discharge of its duty to its patrons, and to humanity, if it failed to sound its warning of a condition that threatens untold sorrow to fathers and mothers and ruin to the lovely young girls and handsome boys that throng our streets day by day.

With all of the sincerity and earnestness at our command we beg you fathers and mothers to wake up to the awful evils that threaten your daughters. An appeal to them, or to the wise young sheiks who are furnishing free transportation to their doom from us, would be meaningless and the only hope we see for bettering the conditions is for the parents of the girls to check their joy rides and cut out the parked car and petting party.

MOVED TO MONTGOMERY

Mr. and Mrs. Grady Taylor left last Saturday to make their home in Montgomery. Mrs. Taylor is well known and popular here (as she was formerly Miss Eloise Kemp, one of the many charming young ladies who were reared in Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Smith, of Birmingham, are visiting friends and relatives here this week. Curtis is an old Chilton county boy who went to the Imperial County of Jefferson and has made good.

W. O. Rich, of Birmingham, came down Thursday and spent the day with his many Clanton friends. Mr. Rich has quite a responsible position with the Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Child that Mopes Isn't a Well Child

A normal child wants to play. If the little one is sullen, lackadaisical and irritable, something is amiss. First off, the child needs a laxative. But mothers are so often disappointed when the favorite laxative fails to restore the youngster's spirits. This is because there is a bilious condition usually and the laxative used hasn't the needed effect on a sluggish liver.

My preparation, Liv-o-lax, was made to answer this frequent need. While it can be used in place of calomel, to relieve liver and bowel congestion, it is just as pleasant to take as any of the usual children's laxatives. It isn't a bit drastic, causes no distress and the children love to take it.

Liv-o-lax is available at your own drug store and is just as effective for adults as it is for children.

Chilton County News:

Dear Sir,

Please allow me to write a few lines in regard to our Road. I don't think the hands in Beat 10 are being treated right. Part of them have had to work two half days and one didn't come but one time and another didn't come at all. Why not all have it to do at not any.

Practically two thirds of the hands are boys and have not got any property and the ones that have will not work or pay tax and not of age and then not be allowed the privilege of voting and haven't any way to go over the roads but walk and walking over it is not any injury to it at all if it is a little benefit for a few days might knock a road or throw it out that would cause some or other that was riding. Hops an all am willing to do my part if I always fellow will do his but I regard it as favor of some working and some things I think we ought to have some ad to keep such as that straight.

COTTON CHOPPING

The cold snap last week delayed the little cotton considerably in getting ready for the hoe, though some of the earliest planted has already been chopped out and a very busy season with the hoes is just opening up now.

Day laborers can find plenty to do now for the next 30 days or so and at living wages.

Between highway building, saw milling and cotton chopping we expect labor will be a little short for the next few weeks and there is no excuse for any one who wants to hobo a freight to look for a job.

We expect the farmers will need extra help for some time now as many of them are going to give the boll weevil a run for his money by applying a few courses of poison to the little cotton. In doing this we judge they will have to employ a little outside help.

From the arrangements being made this year, we are going to know whether the weevil can be successfully combated by the application of poison.

That periodic touch of biliousness.

—W. L. Rand.

Mothers, what would you give to feel easy when your little one begins to show signs of biliousness?

It is customary to think that you ought to use calomel and castor oil, but you dread giving these doses as much as the child fears to take them. And still, you dread what may happen if you use just the ordinary children's laxative.

It was to meet this very situation that I invented Liv-o-lax, and if you try it once, you won't think of using calomel again.

Liv-o-lax cleanses liver and bowels; too, and still it is a pleasant-tasting liquid, entirely vegetable, which causes no distress, serves equally well in colds, constipation and indigestion and is just as good for adults as it is for the children—who really love to take it.

AN AWFUL HOLOCAUST

Four Negro Children Locked in House During Parents Absence and Burned to Death.

One of the most gruesome and horrible accidents that we ever heard of occurred east of Verbena last Saturday night when four colored children were burned to death when their home went up in smoke.

Out three miles on the Mitchell Dam road leading from Verbena, there lived a colored family by the name Varner. On last Saturday night the father and mother had business away from home, so they left their four children, ranging in ages from 2 to 14 years, at home and departed. When they returned at about 9:30 they found their home in flames, the living room in which the children slept having already fallen in.

It appears that the stove flue had set fire to the house earlier in the day, but they had extinguished the flames before much damage resulted and it is presumed, that either this blaze had not been entirely put out, or that it caught up again when supper was cooked. At all events, the fire that consumed the house and children seems to have caught in the same room where the former blaze and where these children had their sleeping arrangements.

Owing to the age of the oldest child it is presumed that they must have retired and gone into so a sound slumber that they were overcome by the smoke before they woke up, otherwise the older ones would have been able to make their escape and save the others.

At all events, all four of the little innocents lost their lives and all that was left of them was small portions of scorched flesh and charred bones.

This is a most sad and regrettable affair and should be a warning to all parents never to leave their children alone at night. Such things as this happen now and then and we always like the parents are more or less to blame. Children go to sleep early and sleep very sound.

MR. FRANK COWART DEAD

Last Friday at 1 p. m. Mr. Frank Cowart breathed his last at his home on second avenue.

He was the oldest of four brothers who have been residing in Clanton for several years. For a number of years Mr. Cowart conducted a store here, but about 3 years ago he was stricken with paralysis of the right side, since which time he has been in bad health and had to close out his business. Thursday night at the supper table, he was again stricken, on the left side and lingered until 1 o'clock the following day when he passed away.

He leaves four brothers, Messrs. Bud, Charley, Hop and Sam and two sisters who are married, one of whom lives in Portsmouth, Va., and the other at Deatsville.

The remains were carried by Undertaker Martin to Deatsville Saturday morning for interment.

Mr. Cowart was 64 years of age and unmarried.

With other friends, the Chilton County News extends its most sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

REVIVAL AT M. E. CHURCH

Commencing at 11 o'clock May 25, which is next Sunday, a revival will begin at the Methodist church.

That day will be regular Sunday School day and the 11 o'clock services will be given over to the Sunday School.

A splendid program has been prepared, embracing a fine song service and some appropriate addresses to be delivered by noted workers in this field.

At 7:45 at night there will be preaching as usual, by the pastor, then on Monday following the real revival services will begin at the 11 o'clock hour and the pulpit will be filled by Rev. H. W. Rice, of Opelika, who is going to remain for at least ten days to assist Dr. Wilkerson in conducting the revival.

Rev. Rice is a widely known and popular preacher, a most devout man and a hard worker in the kingdom. He is one of the outstanding ministers of this conference. He is among the youngest, if not the very youngest preacher, ever placed on a district by the conference, but he was assigned to one of the most responsible districts of the Conference—the Mobile district.

The progress and development in this district under his guidance exceeded any record that has ever been made before. He is an earnest gospel preacher, with wonderful powers of persuasion. Inoffensive in his manner and helpful to all who hear him.

The public are most cordially invited to come out and take part with them in this great work.

Services will be held every day at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m.

CLANTON VS. SILURIA

Last Friday the Clanton ball team went up against the Siluria nine, on the local diamond and for a good while it looked like Siluria was going to duplicate their performance of last year by handing the local team a genteel defeat.

Siluria held the score at 7 to 1 against Clanton until the last half of the ninth inning, when the home boys took over the situation and put over 7 clean runs, winning the game by a score of 8 to 7, and then leaving three men on bases. It looked like they could have made as many more as they pleased.

This afternoon the Montgomery Leaguers are going after the scalps of the home team.

DITRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

On May 27 there will be held at the Methodist church a District Sunday School Convention beginning at 9 a. m. and continuing to the 11 o'clock hour, when the exercises will be suspended while Rev. H. W. Rice delivers one of his foretelling sermons.

Immediately after the services and lunch the work of the convention will be resumed.

The ladies will serve lunch at the church that day so you will not have to hurry home.

Everybody is cordially invited to attend and take part in this Sunday School work. Come!

How to Kill Boll Weevils

Directions for the Application of Poison given by one who knows

Dr. Parnell has used
Poison and won.

HOW TO POISON BOLL WEEVIL

(By Dr. C. N. Parnell)

Editor of Chilton County News:

Your letter of 15th to hand and noted. Will say in reply that I am glad of an opportunity through your paper, to help the farmers of our county, in every way I can to make a good cotton crop and they certainly can make it if they will only use the Calcium Arsenate and poison the weevils.

As I see it they can make more money now raising cotton than they have ever made, for their fertilizer does not cost them any more now than it did when cotton was 10 cents and they can certainly make as much as they ever did to the acre if they will only go to the expense and extra labor it takes to poison their cotton.

I had one man who cultivated twenty-five acres in cotton last year and made eighteen bales of cotton at an extra expense of about six dollars per acre for poison.

We don't think would have gotten over 2 bales of cotton from this 25 acre field, had we not used the poison; judging from the amount of cotton our neighbors got on their farms that had just as good a weed as we had and they used a good deal more fertilizer than we did to the acre.

We used the Hills Mixture and Calcium Arsenate to poison with last year. The Hills Mixture is Calcium Arsenate mixed with cheap syrup and water, so will make our own syrup mixture this year which is made with one pound of Calcium Arsenate, one gallon of syrup and one gallon water mixed and kept well stirred when being applied on the cotton.

We made our first syrup application last year just as soon as we found weevils in our cotton, putting 3 to 5 drops of the mixture in the bud of every stalk of cotton in the field and eight days later we put on the second syrup application.

We had to repositon some of our cotton on account of the heavy rains that washed the mixture off the cotton in a few hours after it had been applied.

Six or eight days after the second syrup application our cotton was too large to use the syrup mixture and we began using the Calcium Arsenate in the powdered form with hand guns and used it about every fifth day, putting it on after sundown and before the dew dried off every morning and made about three applications with it.

I am quite sure if we had put on the fourth application of powder, we would have gathered three or four more bales of cotton from the 25 acre field.

We think it best to apply the Calcium Arsenate in the early part of the season and you will be sure of one right without any rain to wash it off and I believe you will kill 90 per cent of the weevils in your field that night.

It pays to pick up and burn the fallen squares ahead of your powdered applications as you will prevent a new crop of the weevils hatching out in your field after your poison is gone.

Taking our average size cotton that we grow in Chilton County, 100 pounds of Calcium Arsenate will take care of five acres of cotton, putting on two or three syrup applications and also the Calcium is much cheaper this year than it was last.

I wish every farmer in Chilton County would take advantage of the free advice our government is giving through our farm bulletins and Prof. Caldwell, the principal of our Demonstration School at Isabella.

Caldwell is a Moses sent here among us to teach scientific farming and it will cost you nothing but a little time to get his advice and it certainly is worth while to get it.

THE BIG SINGING

Please announce through the columns of your paper, that there will be a special session of the Chilton County Singing Convention at the High School building in Clanton, on Sunday June 1st. We have been fortunate in securing some of the best singers in the South for this occasion. Among them are such noted Musicians as Prof. A. J. Showalter of Chattanooga, Tenn. H. C. Collins of Georgia, John M. Dye and others of Birmingham, P. B. Shaw, and others from Shelby county, and last but not least the famous Vaughn Quartette from Lawrenceburg Tenn. composed of Pace, Walbert, Shaw and Burnett.

This is a Saxophone Quartette and this feature alone will be worth going many miles to hear. Let me urge you to bring your Book or books, and help us make this one of the greatest services of the kind ever held in this section of the state.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY

Last Sunday afternoon, as she was returning from the Pleasant Grove singing, the mules that were hitched to the vehicle in which she was riding, became frightened and undertook to run. They jerked the vehicle so suddenly that Mrs. Mandy Foshee was thrown out and striking on her shoulder it was very severely crushed and broken.

While still suffering, severely we learn that she is doing as well as could be expected and that unless some complications set up she has a good prospect of recovering in due time.

Mr. O. W. Wells, one of the upright and true citizens of Jimson was here Saturday.

HIGH SCHOOL CLOSES

Tuesday night the Chilton County High School closed for the term before an immense audience, while graduates could not get in the auditorium.

A graduating class of 23 received their diplomas Tuesday night.

A Junior class play Monday night was a great success and pulled off to a full house.

Being press day a full report of the exercises is impossible to us this week.

GONE BACK NORTH

Mr. Will Edwards has gone back to Springfield, Mass. to accept a position as superintendent for his electrical employees there.

Will has certainly made good and is not only a credit to himself and family, but is a credit to Auburn, where he graduated.

His wife, formerly Miss May Roberts, left Monday to join her husband in his far northern home. We are all sorry to lose this splendid young family from among us and follow them with every good wish.

BIG IMPROVEMENTS

Down at the new Hays drug store some splendid changes have already been made.

The barber shop has been taken out and a large show window fills the space, which adds greatly to the appearance as well as to room inside.

Dick Hays is in active charge and is making many friends and customers already. Dick is a splendid and popular boy here and is a graduate pharmacist and competent and careful druggist.

HAVE MOVED

The "Just Right" Barber shop that was located next door to the News office has moved down on second avenue and combined with the "Please-U" shop that has been a fixture out on second avenue for several years, under the management of Mr. Newt Gray.

Both of these shops now will be found now in an elegant new home, prepared especially for them, just west of the former place occupied by the "Please-U" shop.

Mr. Lige Weldon is now one of the proprietors, and has had this beautiful and especially convenient new home arranged for these combined shops, which is a most tasty addition to the tontorial accommodations of Clanton.

Mr. Jesse C. Jones, who was formerly one of the proprietors of the "Just Right" shop, will still be connected with the enterprise and will hold a chair in the new place, where his many friends and customers will still find him the same clever and proficient artist they have known and learned to enjoy in his old place.

The Chilton County News will miss them as mighty clever neighbors, but wishes for all of them added success in their new place and combination.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Johnson, of Verbena, came up Sunday and were among the large number of out of town people who enjoyed the commencement sermon at the county high school Auditorium.

THE COTTON MILL

Since last week the engineers representing the cotton mill promoters have been in town and looked over the various locations. They found the outlook all right and were perfectly satisfied with the situation and selected a site.

They returned to report to the men higher up and, we learn that a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, and all interested citizens, will be arranged right away when these promoters will be on hand and definite measures will be taken in regard to the future arrangements for the location of the mill.

As we have said before, it will require considerable time to finally conclude all of the details of an investment as great as a cotton mill. People don't invest vast sums of money without taking every precaution to make the investment safe and legal.

Those who are in closest touch with the situation seem to feel like a real cotton mill will finally develop here out of all the planning and dreaming we have all been doing.

Possibly next week we may be able to give a more definite report on the prospect.

SENATOR ADAMS IN HOSPITAL

The many friends of our preacher—Senator, Rev. S. M. Adams, will be truly sorry and sympathetic when they learn that he had to undergo quite a serious operation at the hospital last Thursday and will doubtless be confined there for about three weeks.

We were just up to see him and found him resting well and convalescing as nicely as could be possible under the circumstances.

The Senator is his same pleasant and cheerful self and is undergoing his confinement with a resignation that is wonderful in one of his stirring, energetic type. He is enthusiastic in his praise of the hospital and its management and says that institution is one of the greatest blessings ever acquired by this section.

He was operated on without having to take any kind of an anesthetic, his surgeon, Dr. Graze, using the recently adopted method of local applications. The Senator says he went entirely through the ordeal without a twinge of pain, and escaped the nausea that usually follows the administration of gas, ether or chloroform. He is also highly pleased with and grateful for the exceedingly kind, constant and efficient service that is rendered at the hospital by the force of nurses. He says it is simply wonderful.

It is to be hoped that the Senator will have no setback to retard his speedy recovery, and in the meantime, he will be pleased to see any of his friends who feel disposed to call on him.

USE BISCUIT DOUGH FOR MAKING CAKES

Opinions Differ as to Merits of Old-Fashioned Delicacy.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Opinions will always differ as to the respective merits of the "old-fashioned strawberry shortcake" made with biscuit dough, and the kind in which "cake" literally means cake. The success of the first kind can always be relied on if the housekeeper is considered a good biscuit maker, for she simply bakes her biscuit dough in one large round piece in a pie tin, and splits it open when done. She may, of course, cut the dough with a cookie cutter and bake individual shortcakes if she prefers.

If one wishes to make the other type of strawberry shortcake it is sometimes a question as to just which one to use of the many different cake recipes offered in the cookbook. Many persons prefer a sponge cake or sunshine cake. This is not a "short" at all and it combines pleasantly with the whipped cream which garnishes the strawberries. The following recipe is recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Sponge Cake.

4 cups	cupful pastry flour
1 cupful sugar	1 cupful salt
1 teaspoonful vanilla	1 teaspoonful baking powder
1 teaspoonful lemon juice

To the well-beaten yolks of eggs gradually add the sugar and the flavoring. Sift together twice, the flour, salt and baking powder, and fold into the egg yolk and sugar. Fold this mixture into the well-beaten egg whites. Bake the cake in shallow pans in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes. This makes two sheets about 7 by 10 inches.

When done, place the two sheets together with the slightly crushed berries and the whipped cream between and on top. The whipped cream should be sweetened and flavored.

Government Recipe for Making Superior Starch

An excellent starch is made by adding one cupful of water to from one to four tablespoonfuls of starch, according to the stiffness desired, says the United States Department of Agriculture. When the paste is smooth add one-half tablespoonful of borax, one-half teaspoonful of paraffin or white fat and one quart of boiling water. Boil 20 minutes, stirring thoroughly until clear and smooth. If a scum or lumps form, strain. Use hot for all except colored clothes. Turn garments wrong side out before starching and starch first those things in which the most stiffness is desired, as water from the garments thins the starch. Freezing and wind both take the starch out of clothes.

OF IMPORTANCE TO KEEP FOODSTUFFS DRY

Closet Arranged to Keep Dry Foodstuffs Dry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The keeping quality of foodstuffs, such as flour, sugar, raisins, dried corn, and rice and other cereals, depends chiefly on the fact that they are dry. In the home, therefore, these foods should be kept dry and clean and protected against insects and other vermin. For tea, coffee, and spices the containers should be as nearly airtight as possible in order to prevent loss of flavor. Dried meats, such as smoked hams, strips of bacon, and jerked beef, and home-dried fruits and vegetables are best kept in muslin bags hung in a clean dry storeroom. If dried meats are hung in the cellar or dried fruits or vegetables are stored in the steamy kitchen, they are likely to mold.

There are special points about keeping milk, fresh meat, fish, poultry, eggs, leftovers, fruits, vegetables, cooking fats, table oils, bread, crackers or canned goods, all of which are discussed in a new Farmers' Bulletin 1374, entitled "Care of Food in the Home." It may be obtained as long as the supply lasts, by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture.

SCREENS SHOULD GO UP EARLY IN SPRING

Housekeeper Will Guard Against Flies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are three general measures to be observed in combating flies in the home: Keeping them out entirely, by means of screens; using fly paper, traps, and poison to destroy any that manage to get in; getting rid of all near-by breeding places, through personal or community effort.

The bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture has explained many times over exactly why the common house fly is such a dangerous visitor. Every school child understands that this insect breeds in manure and decaying garbage, that the adult may alight on animal or human excreta and then fly directly to the food on the table, carrying filth and dangerous disease germs, and that a well-screened house, promptly closed doors, and a good fly swatter are aids in protecting the family from contamination and possible sickness.

It is the part of the good housekeeper to have the screen doors and window screens in place early in the season before the flies get into the house, and to trap, or otherwise kill, as many of the early-season flies as possible, before they have had an opportunity to multiply. An individual female fly will lay from 120 to 150 eggs at one time and will usually lay from two to four such batches during a season. These eggs will hatch, under favorable conditions, in less than 24 hours. The larva, or worm stage usually lasts, in summer, from four to seven days and the pupal, or sleeping stage from three to six days.

A few flies usually manage to get in any house during the warm weather, either when doors are opened and shut, or through unnoticed cracks or spaces around screens, broken window panes, or other entrances. All foods should be kept covered or screened so that stray flies cannot light on them. Putting sticky fly paper and poison preparations about helps to rid the house of those which accidentally get in. A very effective fly poison is made by adding three teaspoonfuls of commercial formalin to a pint of milk or water sweetened with a little brown sugar.

It is perfectly obvious, from all that is known and has been written about the life habits of the house fly, that screens, flytraps, fly paper, and fly poisons would be unnecessary if all substances in which flies lay their eggs and breed were properly attended to. These include horse, chicken, hog, and cow manure, fermenting garbage, human excrement, and a great variety of fermenting and decaying vegetable and animal materials. All accumulations of these substances should be eliminated, or, if this is not possible, tightly covered or screened so that flies cannot reach them. In the country the main source of flies is the necessary manure heap. Farmers' Bulletin 551 tells how to care for manure so as to reduce this difficulty to a minimum. The proper disposal of sewage in rural districts is also of the greatest importance because of the likelihood of the spread of fly-borne diseases from human excrement. Other bulletins of the department make valuable suggestions for modern methods of sewage disposal for the farm home.

Guinea Raising Is Quite Profitable

Substituted in Fashionable Hotels for Various Kinds of Game Birds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Guinea raising is becoming more profitable as a result of the successful substitution in fashionable hotels and eating places for such game birds as grouse, quail and partridge, says the United States Department of Agriculture. When well cooked, guineas are attractive in appearance, although darker than common fowl, and the flesh of young birds is tender and of especially fine flavor, resembling that of wild game. The census figures show an increase of 36 per cent in the number of guinea fowl on farms in 1920 over the number in 1910.

Raise in Small Flocks.

A few of the large poultry raisers, particularly those within easy reach of the large eastern markets, make a practice of raising a hundred or so guineas each year, but the great majority of guineas are raised in small flocks of from 10 to 25 on the farms of the Middle West and of the South. The highest prices for guineas are paid in the large eastern markets. Poultrymen who are near these markets, or who have developed a trade among private customers, receive prices that make this industry very profitable. Wholesale prices in New York usually range from $1 to $1.60 per pair for dressed spring guineas. They are marketed late in the summer when they weigh from one to one and one-half pounds when two and one-half months of age, and also throughout the fall, when the demand is for heavier birds.

Guinea hens usually begin to lay in April or May, those in the South laying earlier than those in the North. From 20 to 30, and often more eggs, are laid before the guinea hen becomes broody, at which time she can be broken of her broodiness easily by removing the eggs from the nest, when she will soon begin laying again. If not allowed to sit, guinea hens will lay throughout the summer, laying from 40 to 60, and in some cases 100 eggs during the season.

Persistent Layers.

As profitable egg producers guinea hens cannot compete with ordinary hens, but during the latter part of the spring and during the summer they are persistent layers. The eggs are smaller than hen's eggs and consequently bring lower prices, being graded as small eggs. The chief claim to profitability on the farm is the demand for the fowl by the eastern markets for a wild game substitute. Their noisy, never-ending harsh cry which is often cause for their unpopularity on the farm is really a point in favor of keeping a few of them, as they are excellent sentries, giving warning of marauders in the poultry yard. Their pugnacious disposition, while sometimes causing disturbances among other poultry, also makes them show fight against hawks and other common enemies, so that guineas sometimes are kept as guards over the poultry yard.

Coöperative Marketing by Live Stock Raisers

A gain of $123 per head was recently made by the members of a co-operative live stock shipping association in one of the Southern states as a result of shipping a single load of sheep and lambs co-operatively instead of selling to country buyers. A report to the bureau of markets and crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture shows that the load of sheep and lambs brought $475.47 more on the market than local buyers bid for the stock.

The total cost of shipping amounted to $208.02, resulting in a net gain on the carload, consisting of 229 head, of $267.45, or $123 per head. This, of course, does not take into account any profits that may have accrued purely as a matter of production. The following tabulation shows the transaction in detail:

Market weight.....pounds..	15,925
Home weight.....do.....	17,381
Lambs, at $13.90.....brought.....	$2,415.57
Local buyers, at $10, offered.....	1,732.10
Total cost, freight, commission, and man going with car.....	$208.02
Gain on carload.....	$267.45
Gain per head, average 229.....	1.23

Historic "Husking Bee" Is Feature of New Film

The historic "husking bee" and the old bone-husking peg, as well as the newer thumb hook and the "bang board," have their part in the new United States Department of Agriculture educational motion picture, "The Corn Belt Derby."

This film treats of the economic phases of corn husking and culminates in the picturization of an interstate husking contest in which husking rises to the dignity of a major sport. The slow-motion camera reveals the technique employed by the husking champs to speed up the operation.

Scenes introduce the old peg, that played an important part in the contest of the new world, and immortalize the "husking bee," a major farm social event of a generation ago. "The Corn Belt Derby" will be circulated through the educational film service of the department and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods, or may be purchased at the laboratory charge.

Apparatus Separates Parasites From Soil

Ingenious Flotation Device of Dr. Cobb Is Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In studying the nemas which exist in the soil and which, in many cases, cause diseases of plants such as root-knot and certain rots, there has been much difficulty in separating the organisms from the soil. Most of these threadlike parasites are extremely small and cannot be picked out by ordinary methods; neither can they be washed out readily. However, Dr. N. A. Cobb of the United States Department of Agriculture has devised an ingenious flotation apparatus which affords valuable aid in removing nemas from a sample of soil.

The apparatus consists essentially of a hollow cylinder several inches in diameter and three or four feet high, tapering for about a foot to a small opening at the bottom and provided with a spout near the top. This cylinder is fastened to a circular rotating table or frame which is turned at a moderate speed by a motor while nemas-free water is run in from the bottom by turning a graduated tap. The soil sample is mixed with a small quantity of water and then poured quickly into the rotating cylinder when it is about a quarter full of water. The rotation destroys any disturbing up-and-down currents which might interfere with the separation, as in some other separating machines.

Nemas sink very slowly and the rise of the water is so regulated by the tap that it will a little more than counteract their fall. As a result the soil particles which are heavier sink to the bottom and the nemas are lifted to the top. When the rising column of muddy water reaches the upper opening it is spouted with the contained nemas into a vessel set on the rotating table to catch the overflow. When all the nemas are collected in this vessel they are allowed to settle to the bottom. The water is drawn off and a slimy mass containing the nemas in much greater concentration is left in the bottom. They may then be removed and examined under the microscope. By this method also the number of nemas in a given quantity of soil may be estimated.

Mississippi Girls Work for Pure Bred Poultry

Pure bred poultry is receiving encouragement in Mississippi through the interest of a leading merchant in Laurel, Jones county, who gave twenty settings of pure bred Rhode Island Red eggs to twenty "4H" poultry club members. These girls were required to raise as many as possible of the chicks hatched and keep all except one pullet, which was returned to the donor. The twenty pullets which came back were made into five pens, each of which a cock was added. The five pens were then given to five other girls in the county, who were to own the chickens. Each of these girls, however, promised to send in a setting of eggs to be distributed in turn to other girls.

Eighteen of the original girls succeeded with the project, according to a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture. The two who failed were allowed to try again. This plan has proved an excellent means of interesting club girls in the production of pure bred poultry, and many of their neighbors have also become interested.

Cropping System Helped by Growing Soy Beans

Soy beans as a soil-building crop would also furnish an economical protein feed supplement have been given a thorough trial by Blackford county (Ind.) farmers on the advice of their agricultural extension agent. The rapid increase in the acreage planted to the crop in the county indicates that they found it a valuable addition to their cropping system. Five years ago, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, only a few farmers in the county grew soy beans, but in 1923 approximately 3,850 acres were grown with corn and 600 acres were grown alone for seed and hay.

FARM NOTES

If you are dissatisfied with your lot, grow a garden on it.

Don't guess at the moisture conditions of your land. Bore into it and be certain.

Marketing eggs by barter is rapidly giving way to the new-fashion method of co-operative selling.

Failure to treat oats for smut the last few years has cost growers at least three and a half bushels an acre.

Song and game birds are friends of the farmer. Protect and encourage them and they will reduce the losses from insects.

If you wish to improve the quality of your flock without serious expense the best thing to do is to cull out a pen of the choicest birds and hatch their eggs.

Seeding alfalfa without a nurse crop in the early spring is often a risky proposition, particularly if the ground has not been worked over as much as it should have been.

A Bright Blue Gown

The tide ran high, the tide ran low,
(Oh, heave away, away, away!)
We left our port at morning glow,
Before the breeze began to blow,
And said farewell to harbor town,
(Oh, heave away, my hearties!)
The waves rolled up, the waves rolled down,
(Let out more sail, more sail, more sail!)
We saw the last of our old town,
Its chimneys red, its roofs so brown,
I saw but Nancy's bright blue gown!
(Let out more sail, my hearties!)
The gulls flew here, the gulls flew there,
(Now port the helm, the helm, the helm!)
The wind was fresh, the day was fair,
Our vessel sailed with jaunty air,
And we had health and strength to spare,
(Now port the helm, my hearties!)
The ocean rose, the ocean fell,
(Watch out ahead, ahead, ahead!)
We bravely took each dip and swell,
And loved to hear the wild wind yell,
In rigging where it whistled well,
(Watch out ahead, my hearties!)
We cast to left, we cast to right,
(Let down the nets, the nets, the nets!)
And when we hauled with all our might,
It was, indeed, a goodly sight
To find our nets no longer light,
(Now head for home, my hearties!)
We cut the foam, we cut the spray,
(Now head for home, for home, for home!)
And every heart aboard was gay,
Our harbor seen before us lay—
I saw but Nancy's gown, I say!
(Now head for home, my hearties!)

Artist in Alsace Makes His Pictures With Wood

It is said that in Alsace there is an artist who makes pictures with wood alone. Using woods in the natural color, he constructs pictures of great beauty. Each picture is made from a sketch. Then, with infinite patience and care, the artist cuts the veneer and glues it to a backing and then welds it all in a press.

In his workshop the artist has pieces of every kind of wood found in Europe and many pieces from other countries. One day a farmer told him that he had a tree for him to look at. It was an oak that had been buried for centuries and that was a beautiful blue-black. The artist, who was delighted with the color, paid the farmer $150 for the tree and $40 more to get it to his house. With the various woods, it is asserted the artist achieves perfect colors. His pictures of clouds, rain, sunshine, landscapes—in short, anything and every thing that an artist can paint with paints.

Yale Gets Papers of Great Colonial Divine

The Yale university library has been presented with a collection of the once famous "Thumb Papers" of the Rev. Timothy Edwards, father of Jonathan Edwards, colonial New England's great theologian, says the New York Times.

Puritan and colonial New England for the most part had some contempt for a person who should either read his sermons or preach with anything more than the briefest reference to notes. A great exhorter had to be inspired, else he had no right to occupy a pulpit in those stern fundamentalist days. Many great theologians would open the Bible at random, seize any verse as a text and then preach from that text for hours with the firm belief that the hand of the Almighty had guided him to the chapter and verse upon which he based his sermon.

The Rev. Timothy Edwards belonged to that school. A graduate of Harvard of the class of 1691, he was ordained pastor of a newly-founded Congregational church at Windsor, Conn., in 1694 and accepted the pulpit of that church for 64 years. He was well acquainted with Hebrew literature and was particularly distinguished for his accurate knowledge of the Latin and Greek classics. In preparing his sermons Mr. Edwards would note on small slips of paper his "brillies" and "secondlies." Then he would study these manuscript outlines, but when he entered the pulpit he would leave them in his study.

For many years it was his custom to preach entirely without notes, but one sermon, a copy of which is in the Yale library, is known to have been written in full by Mr. Edwards. This was preached at the general election in 1732.

Of these papers, Dr. Serrin Edwards Dwight, son of the elder president Timothy Dwight, wrote: "He always preached extemporaneously, and, until he was upwards of seventy, without noting down the heads of his discourse. After that time he commonly wrote the divisions on small slips of paper, which, as they occasionally appeared between the leaves of the Bible that he held in his hand, his parishioners called 'Mr. Edwards' thumb papers'."

These papers, the gift to Yale of Dr. James Hosmer Pennington of Philadelphia, cover 68 pages and include sermons preached in 1722 and 1723.

"Rare Ben"

The epithet was conferred upon Ben Jonson (1574-1637), the celebrated English poet and dramatist. It is stated by John Aubrey, in his letters, that the inscription, "O Rare Ben Jonson," over the poet's grave in Westminster abbey, was placed there at the suggestion of one Jack Young, an eccentric gentleman, who at the time of the burial gave a workman 18 pence to engrave it. Jonson is buried in an upright position beneath the pavement of the north aisle of the abbey; but a medallion in his honor may be seen in the south transept, or poets' corner.—Kansas City Star.

Commendable Study

"What are you studying now?" asked Mrs. Johnson.

"We have taken up the subject of molecules," answered the son.

"I hope you will be very attentive and practice constantly," said the mother. "I tried to get your father to wear one, but he could not keep it in his eye."

BUYING A WIFE

SYNOPSIS—In a low drinking place in the Japanese town of Mitagiri, Kayama, dissolute son of the wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Thunder Gate, boasts of a girl he is to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following him in the place, a drunken white man, speaking perfect Japanese, is left unconscious. Kayama, dreading his father's anger, sees a way of escape. He changes clothes with the unconscious white man (to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance), leaving a note in the garments promising him food, shelter and money if he will impersonate him (Kayama) for a time. Leaving Kayama is robbed and slain. The white man, as Kayama, is taken, unconscious, to the house of Aochi. His name is Robert Wells. Wells (who was born and passed his childhood in Japan) awakes bewildered, but to familiar scenes, sightless from age, does not perceive the deception. He had determined his unworthy son should be put to death, but Wells' departure leads him to think a reformation is possible.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

As they walked down the corridor Wells was thinking as quickly as his muddled head would permit. What had Misako called him? Kayama! What had this servant called him? Kayama. That thing he'd seen—or had he dreamed it?—last night; that god. The thunder god. The god of Kayama's house, of which his nurse had so often told him in his baby days. He confound it, he'd seen it through, for a time, anyway. A curious look of malignant hatred and incredulous, pleased surprise was on Aochi's face. Wells saw that the old Japanese's eyesight must be failing, for he constantly screwed up his eyebrows as if to peer more closely. "Is it true that you chastised Ito, the inn keeper?"

Wells bowed. "That is the truth, my father."

"Where," the old man asked grimly, "is the gold?"

"Gold? A bag of it. Come, where it is hidden?"

"I have no gold, father."

This Aochi pondered over. He considered the matter long, so long that Wells' aged mind shifted and his lit up. "Of what were we talking? I remember. Of Ito. Ael! I had seen it. My servant told me. Your open hand was like the lightning. It closed as it struck, Ito's eyes blinked. He descended to the floor. That trick you must have learned in another country, Kayama."

It was that you learned something good, I had feared of that trip. I have not liked your speech. It is just a little halting. It is not so crisp as it should be."

He scratched his head. "Come closer, son. It would seem that your arm is bigger than it has been, but the men of our house are powerful men, Kayama."

He pressed Wells' bandaged arm, and the white man winced. Immediately Aochi's expression changed.

"You are ashamed," he announced. "Ael! misfortune to my house! That Ael! a thing should occur. You are ashamed to my very gate by the husband of a rice picker. To have bared with him for her lost honor, rather than take a knife. . . to haggle over the payment, over a single gold piece. . . to fear to fight, thus suffering—he pinched the arm again—"A broken arm"—and forefinger probing—"this cut above your eye. And yet the inn keeper was a stronger man. . . I do not understand it, Kayama. And I am tired from so much talk."

Wells smiled. "Perhaps I have been misnamed, my father. Think that this is a wise, different son returned to you, by the goodness of the gods. That the troublesome fellow who was Kayama is gone."

Aochi reached a clawlike hand toward Wells and opened the neck of the kimono.

"Ael!" he cackled. "There is the lightning mark. It seems more red. Angry. Let us say that a miracle has been brought about. That the gods have given you sense."

From behind him he drew a long sword; Wells saw the Hons of Shinto gods swarmed the sheath and breathed about the exquisite hilt. "This," Aochi lifted the blade. "Anointed you Kayama. Now the old son is gone, a thing of the past" (indeed a body was floating down the river that runs past the Inn of the Palo Pearl, to rest at last upon a shelving bank of mud) "And the honor of my house is thus appeased. I grow forgetful, Kayama."

"You should rest, father."

"That is true. I have not slept. I will retire for rest and devotion. I am very tired."

At the door he paused. "Also very happy in my new son," he added, and went off pleased with his conceit.

They found him, just before the hour for the noonday meal, prostrate before the household shrine, his wrinkled face smiling. Aochi had completed the last stage of the ceaseless journey. Telling Wells, between muffled welts and cries, each member of the household made obeisance to the new Lord of the Thunder Gate, Kayama-San.

Wells' head whirled. Old stories dashed through his mind; the tales of Misako, the nurse. He marshaled them as best he could into an orderly array. This, obviously, was no time for confession—to whom, indeed, should he explain the tale, and who would believe? He had been accepted as Kayama by the head of the house. He . . . he was Kayama . . . for a bit, anyhow. He crossed the door slowly, returning with a naked sword, which he laid across the dead man's arms, lit, incense curled in the hot close air of the room. Servants hid away the household shrine. Finally a screen, green, covered with flying herons of gray, was placed about the body, and Kayama returned to his room.

The ancient servant-maid awaited him.

"I was a season older than the lord," she greeted Wells. "The willow has outlived the pine." She bustled about with many unneeded steps, preparing white garments for Wells to don.

"I have seen Aochi-San's father die. I have seen Aochi-San die. Who knows but that you yourself might be stricken? See to it!"—she wagged a finger at him—"that a little son trot about this house, Kayama-San."

She held up a white, unembroidered kimono for him. Wells dropped the blue kimono he had been wearing to the floor. The bit of paper felt with it, fluttered; he stooped, seeing writing thereon.

"Read, while I compose myself," he asked the woman. "It is doubtless of no importance. I do not know from whence it came."

"My eyes are old, Lord. If it be nothing, I will burn it in the brazier."

Wells glimpsed the characters for "Kayama," picked up the paper and read slowly. Slowly, and with dawning comprehension. "The swine," he said aloud in English. "Poor old Aochi! He's happier than I did happen along. Wonder when the beggar will show up again. What a mess!"

"Foreign words, Kayama-San, on the day you should be thinking of the many virtues of your departed father," the servant chided. "You have on the white robe. The priests will be waiting."

The great bell of the Rokume temple was already reverberating slowly and regularly, punctuating Wells' wonder of this unreal situation. Peel after peel of the great bronze bell shook through the house of the Thunder Gate.

Wells took his place in the procession that had already formed at the gate of the house. All were white-footed, and robed in white from head to foot. There were no relatives, only the men and women servants of the house, the leading priest, ringing a tiny bell, and Kayama . . . Wells.

The whole affair was dreamlike to him. Shadowy. Impressions only, yet unimpressed.

Eyes centered on Wells. Slowly, trying to remember everything that Misako had told him (for she had been at this very temple many times, she had said), he rose, bowed low, lit an incense stick and stuck it in a bronze vase at Aochi's feet. He recited, clearly, the Words of Perfume for the departed. These he had heard and angered his father by repeating, when he was a child.

Members of the household followed him, each thrusting a blazing, fuming bit of incense into the bowl, that Aochi might be wafted away quickly and safely. Voices broke. Aochi had been a noble, kind lord, if stern and strict. Who could say what Kayama would be? Many a prayer was muttered for the new lord, that the gods give him wisdom.

"Your devotion is pleasing to me," the head priest informed Wells. "We feared that your journey in the seiyon country might cause you to forget. . ."

"There will be gold brought to the temple," Wells said, remembering. "Gold is not a covering for devotion. You will—smiling slyly—"bring the gold yourself, Kayama-San? You remember the price?"

"It will be ample, honorable priest."

"Ample! The price is fixed!"

"None shall complain of the generosity of the Lord of the Thunder Gate," Wells said, provoked by the insistence of the other.

The priest looked at him curiously. "You did not speak of generosity before, Kayama-San. You would have offered . . . more gold . . . for the maid." Then, suddenly: "Surely you have not forgot our bargain? The maid is ready for you, upon payment of the six rolls of gold. When will you come for her?"

Wells considered this. A bargain had apparently been made between Kayama and the temple folk. He'd carry it out. An additional servant more or less—what did it matter? He knew that she would be well versed (for what Japanese maid is not?) in the needful duties. It would, also, be safer to be waited upon by some one unacquainted with Kayama. For, some time, somehow, his masquerade might totter, and the mask slip. . .

"Today I devote to contemplation of my departed father's many virtues, that I profit by them. I will come tomorrow."

"With the six rolls of gold, Kayama-San?"

"I will bring them."

CHAPTER III

"It is the hour for bathing," the old servant told Kayama, when he returned.

"I am tired," Wells feared that this would not satisfy her.

She, however, brought a volume to him. "Compose yourself, then, Kayama-San. Here is the First Book. In it—so I have heard—is written that to the young should come the young. I am old. There should be a gayer maid waiting upon you. She would drive the sorrow from your eyes. Tell me, Lord, does not young blood course in your veins?"

Wells smiled. "I go to the temple tomorrow, little mother. It seems that I am to buy a maid there."

"Those priests! Much gold you will pay." Her hands fluttered. "It will be good to have a maid in the house again. And a babe!"

Wells thought in excellent American. "A fat chance," he was thinking.

"Your maid will pray each night that she be given a man-son," mumbled on the servant. "I will see to it that she protect your comforts, that each wish, even thoughts unuttered, be fulfilled."

Wells shivered. Why hadn't some one instructed—or didn't American mothers do such things?—Alberta? Had she ever, during their engagement, considered anything . . . and hadn't she been among the first to condemn him . . . unheard? With a start he remembered her beauty, only to find that he considered it as impersonal as a painting.

Footsteps in the hall aroused him. A priest, shaved of head, a comfortably plump fellow, bowed as he shuffled into the room. He refused the offered cup of tea, intimating by gestures that he wished to speak to Wells in private.

"The abbot has sent me," he whispered earnestly. "There are missionaries in the next village. They will view the temple. They have prying eyes. The abbot wishes you to come for the maid."

"I am deep in devotion, honorable priest."

"You will find comfort in your sorrow. Be sure to warn your servants to be silent until the seiyon-jin depart. The matter is important. Be sure to bring the gold?"

Why not? Wells thought. Better get it over with. He clasped his hands, giving orders; he was bringing a maid to the household. Let none mention it. (Why did the priest say that?) Prepare for her.

The serving-woman hurried for a gay robe. Funerals were forgotten. Wells was soon ready, and accompanied the priest.

Already Wells saw the problems attendant upon buying a maid. He must tell her that she found no favor in his eyes—which would be difficult in view of the men already thinking of the house, the leading priest, ringing a tiny bell, and Kayama . . . Wells.

The whole affair was dreamlike to him. Shadowy. Impressions only, yet unimpressed.

JEREMIAH AND THE BABYLONIAN CRISIS

LESSON TEXT—Jer. 26.

GOLDEN TEXT—"And obey the voice of the Lord your God."—Jer. 26:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Saves a Brave Prophet.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of a Brave Prophet.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing Bravely for the Right.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jeremiah's Message to His People.

I. Jeremiah's Solemn Warning to Judah (vv. 1-7).

The Lord commanded him to stand in a conspicuous place in the Temple and proclaim the judgment which was about to fall upon them because of their sins. The object was to provoke them to repentance (v. 3). If they would repent, God would make the Temple as Shiloh (v. 6). Just as Shiloh was once the dwelling place of the Lord and now fallen into decay and abandoned, so will it be with the Temple. Jeremiah was sent to speak the words which the Lord had told him and not to diminish a word.

II. Jeremiah on Trial (vv. 8-11).

1. Cause of Arrest (v. 8). It was for faithfully speaking all the Lord had commanded. The one who speaks boldly what God commands shall be opposed. The time-server and self-seeker will not stand for such minorities. The Isalabs and Jeremiahs must suffer.

2. The Charge (vv. 8, 9). It was a capital crime. They said, "Thou shalt surely die." His guilt according to their charge was twofold: (1) Pretending to speak for God; (2) Speaking against the temple and the city. According to their charge he was guilty of blasphemy and sacrilege.

The one who prophesied without God's command was to be punished by death (Deut. 18:20). Blasphemy was also punished by death (Lev. 24:16). Both Jesus and Stephen were accused of blasphemy.

3. The Prisoner in Judgment (vv. 10, 11). When the excitement reached the ears of the princes they came to judge of the merits of the case. Matters of state were not entirely in the hands of the priests and elders, but were partly controlled by members of the royal family.

III. Jeremiah's Defense (vv. 12-15). Threats of death did not deter him from preaching, but only made him repeat his message.

1. Reiterates His Divine Commission (v. 12). He had nothing to deny, but to repeat what he had said. He plainly told them that in opposing him they were opposing God, for he was God's messenger.

2. His Exhortation (v. 13). He urged them to amend their ways and obey God, and God would not bring upon them judgment.

3. He Gave Himself Up (v. 14). He did not resist the power of government (Rom. 13:1). Knowing that he was sent of God he was content to trust God for deliverance.

4. Warnings of Fatal Consequence (v. 15). He frankly told them that God had sent him, and if they killed him they would be guilty of defying God. We would not only fall upon them, but the nation and city would suffer.

IV. Jeremiah Saved (vv. 16-24). He was acquitted. God is able to raise up friends and advocates from the ranks of those who oppose us.

1. Judgment of the Princes (v. 16). They pronounced him not guilty, as he had spoken in the name of the Lord. Jeremiah's words convinced them that he was speaking the truth.

2. Speech of the Elders (vv. 17-23). As the princes probably represented the king, so the elders represented the people. The elders pleaded for Jeremiah and adduced several cases in illustration:

(1) Micah (vv. 18, 19). Micah had prophesied against Jerusalem, but King Hezekiah instead of putting him to death, repented and thus turned aside the punishment which was impending.

(2) Uriah (vv. 20-23). Uriah prophesied against the city and land and thus incurred the wrath of Jehoiakim, who even brought him back from Egypt whence he had fled and slew him.

Though all this was done, judgment was not thus thwarted. Killing God's prophets does not prevent God's judgment, but intensifies it. In the case of Hezekiah God's judgments were turned aside through heeding the words of the prophet, and in the case of Jehoiakim judgment fell upon the nation because of refusal and maltreatment of the prophet.

3. Respect by Ahikam (v. 24). Ahikam must have been a man of influence to be able to interfere at such a time.

Opportunities

We may not at first see it, but almost always opportunities are hiding back of the difficulties—and it takes them out.

Speaking the Truth

It is better to hold back the truth than to speak it ungraciously.—St. Francis de Sales.

The Tongue

The tongue is the neck's worst enemy.—Arabian Proverb.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

THE OLD SOUTH YIELDS TO THE NEW WOMAN

A North Carolina newspaper recently ran a picture that any society editor would crave. The well-arranged hair, the shapely throat, the charming profile were accompanied by mention of a "member of an old and prominent family of Cartaret county." It was a story of an island of femininity entirely surrounded by men. But the men had sat about a directors' table, and welcomed Bertha Hellen as the newest officer of the Raleigh Banking and Trust company, the first woman assistant cashier in Raleigh.

Southern Main Street men please take to heart her words to other business girls.

"No one of you can appreciate my position unless you have been a girl in the South, where the woman is still having a struggle to gain her position in the business world. My home town cashier told me he had no question as to my ability. I could never be an officer in his bank merely because I was a woman. From that day I worked to become an officer in a larger bank than his."

Young Bertha Hellen, after she had got her foot on the ladder of success, had to face the one hardest type of opposition. "I worked for eight years in the little bank in my home town," she says. "I never had more than ten days' time off during a year. Sometimes I worked two years without vacation. I took as much interest in that bank as if I had a big salary, or the presidency. In the ninth year I asked to be made assistant cashier."

"I don't think a woman can hold that kind of position," the cashier told her. That ended the matter—for him—but not for me.

"The next year I was paying teller in a large bank in Wilson, at doubled salary. Seventeen months later I promoted myself to a Raleigh bank."

Save for the petty vision of that first cashier and others like him, Bertha Hellen finds many big things on Main Street. "The average young girl's character grows better, I feel, when she can have the influence of home life. She has a chance to know people better. My experience is that she can have more social life along with her work than the strange girl in a strange city."

"If one aspires to big things, it looks sometimes as if it is necessary to leave the small town. But we ourselves may be bigger in a small town. Even if we do not have a big-paying position, our lives may count for more in the little home church and community."

ENGINEERING BOTH BABIES AND BUSINESS

Would you expect a woman who had adopted as her slogan, "Babies Before Business," to be written up in all sorts of magazines as an "unusually successful geological engineer?"

Ten years ago, when the two Gould kiddies were healthy, little school children, Nina S. Gould went back to her job of being an assistant geological engineer. In the office of Gould & Gould she has charge of reports, maps, cost estimates and enough other technical details to make the average woman—or man—blink. She's an honorary member of Chi Epsilon, a fraternity for women doing geological work.

Mrs. Gould found time, as the children's interests and her own led her outside home walls, to take an active interest first in the kindergarten club and then in the school patrons' club, to organize two Camp Fire groups, and to become an active member in a social study club.

At present she serves as the business women's representative on the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A., as vice president of the civic committee of the chamber of commerce, keeps up church and Sunday school work as president over the Town club with 7

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress.

The South seems to be as solid as ever—except Alabama—and it got hog-tied this time.

After spending 11 years of his life and over $1,500.00 Harry Thaw has succeeded in convincing a jury that he is sane.

The few warm days this week induced the little cotton to wake up and the farmers to put on a smile.

We hardly believe that women who wear trousers will ever become popular as mothers and home builders.

The American public are learning rapidly these days and the professional politician is going out of fashion in the same ratio.

The cotton mill promoters will be here this week. Open your heart and pocket book and land that mill. Clanton must have some industries.

How long since and upon whose authority has it become objectionable for 100 per cent Americans to have a voice in the democratic National Convention?

If we were to wear our pants as tight as some of the women folks wear their dresses, the first time we sat down in our sanctum we would have to meet all callers without turning around.

Monday the Senate rode rough shod over the president's veto and the bonus bill became a law. The soldier boys will now get a little recognition for their glorious service.

Mr. Underwood distinguished himself again Monday when he voted with his New York friends and the Coolidge republicans against the bonus bill. He seems to have changed parties altogether.

National politics this year are in the most chaotic state of recent times. The stand pat republicans have lost control of their bunch, while the democrats seem to be going through an elimination period of professionals.

The fishing fever is still running pretty high but most of those who intend going get a line on our movement first. They don't want any more of the kind of luck that followed us out there last week.

The lower house of Congress the other day passed the Bonus bill almost unanimously after President Coolidge had vetoed it. Party lines mean less and less and legislation gets better and better.

Detective Burns, the Sherlock Holmes of the present administration, had to resign under fire and now he is shocked and mad because the government did not go to pieces when they fired him.

Farmers don't fail to read the article of Dr. Parnell on how to poison the weevil. He knows how from experience and has won out. Now he is kindly giving you all the benefit of his hard earned knowledge. We are grateful to him for the service.

The robbing of automobiles parked at the church, or other places of public gathering, is becoming a little too common around Clanton. Secret police should be quietly stationed around such places a few times and contrive to send some of these gentry on a visit to Kilby Prison for the summer. It would do good.

The oil investigation is still spreading and gathering in more high up officials every day. That seems to have been a real high class set of artistic crooks that got hold of the government on the last deal. Better call for a new deck when we deal this fall.

Bootlegging has developed into a fine art under the dispensation of the Volstead Act. Even the women are becoming real artists in transporting the precious stuff. If they are real good looking and can cry and goo goo their eyes at short notice, it takes a hard boiled officer to run them in.

AN HONEST CONFESSION

The Campaign Committee of Mr. Underwood have put the country on notice that they are going to do their utmost to have the democratic presidential convention that assembles in New York next month to incorporate a plank in their platform condemning the Ku Klux Klan for their alleged participation in the election of delegates to that convention.

It is surprising that they would have openly avowed their intentions in this matter, for by so doing they have tacitly admitted that they and their candidates are playing up solely to the foreign and anti-protestant vote.

From all of the propaganda we have seen that was put out by the Klan there are especially two distinctive clauses that we have noticed in their every public utterance and they are, that no one who is not 100 per cent American and a full blooded protestant is allowed to unite himself with the order.

If this is true, and we feel sure that it is, the wonderful and surprising thing to us is, that any political party or aspirant for office would boldly deny that class of citizenship their full rights in the selection of an American president to rule over a protestant America.

Has it gone so far in this country of supposed Americanism that a political party is willing to make an issue of expelling Americans from participation in the government of their own country.

We hold no brief for the Ku Klux Klan, but we count ourselves a full blooded American citizen who is a legal heir from our ancestry to a home in this great land and we resent the attempt that any one might make in an effort to belittle Americans or to deny to them all of the sacred prerogatives of their birthright.

Chopping cotton is in full blast this week and the boll weevil is organizing for an intensive campaign. Get out your poison guns and line up on the firing line. One weevil killed now means the reduction of the July crop by 5,000.

WE WENT FISHING

Thanks to the courtesy of Messrs. Mally White, Dr. Upchurch and Mr. Wingard we had the delightful experience of going fishing to the river last Friday afternoon.

Embarking in the car in town promptly at noon, in 35 minutes, with Mr. White at the wheel, we arrived at our destination.

Our first impression was that Mr. White had made a mistake and carried us to an immense camp meeting, for all of the surrounding territory was filled with autos and other vehicles and, as far as the eye could reach, the entire scene was thronged with busy humanity.

Upon closer investigation we found that the people were not singing and praying, but every last one of them was hard at work trying to entice some unwary fish to bite. The bill of fare, in the kind of bait being offered to these educated and epicurean denizens of the deep, embraced everything that could be thought of, from the homely eel worm to the very finest lure invented by artistic students of the habits and appetites of the finny tribe, but business was exceedingly dull.

There was as much and as varied intensive effort being put out as we ever saw, but so far as catching a fish was concerned the immense throng of fishermen had about as well been at home fishing in the bath tub.

For one time, however, our lot had fallen in pleasant places. Messrs. White and Upchurch, have a regular camp out there equipped with all of the comforts and conveniences of a modern home. They have every imaginable kind of fishing tackle and paraphernalia, besides a most commodious and comfortable motor boat.

We took about a ten mile jaunt down the lovely Mitchell Dam lake, between towering cliffs and undulating hills, where spring had surpassed herself in hanging wreaths of lovely flowers, carrying all the colors of the rainbow and every breeze was laden with a perfume more sweet and delicate than can even be approached by the chemist with all his skill.

Our pressence must have been a "Jonah" to all of the fishermen for during our stay of six hours out there we feel sure in saying that all of that vast army of fishermen never caught enough fish to feed one hungry man.

But that is perfectly all right. We love to catch fish as well as any body, but we had such a delightful trip and enjoyed our outing so much that even yet we do not feel the least bit disappointed.

Besides some of the most expert fishermen of this whole section were out there that afternoon, and working overtime in their efforts to make a catch, still, none of them could crow over us and say they beat us, for we caught the same amount that all of the others did.

We had told some of these boastful fishermen that we would have a fish shed about the wonderful catches they were claiming to have made so Friday we went out and saw them in active operation—but we didn't see any fish.

SHERIFF BUSY LAST WEEK

Last week Sheriff Littlejohn got on the war path again and went out, in full regalia, for a trip or so and things began to happen.

In about the first round he visited the home of Mr. Hall Tyus and dug up twelve gallons of sparkling joy juice where it had been nicely buried in the ground. Mr. Tyus came to town with the sheriff and made bond to appear before the Judge later and offer his explanation of having planted liquor in the grain.

He also found Mr. Dolphus Mims, down near the Autauga line, transporting some of the prohibited "snake bite" antidote on his person and arranged for him also to have a date with the judge.

But later on the Sheriff, Federal enforcement officers, Walter Gillespie and John Gore and Deputy Foshee, made a flying trip over on the Bibb county line. Here is where they made a record and left a wreck, for they found two stills set up and at work, one of 100 and the other 150 gallons capacity.

These they destroyed, together with much beer and succeeded in getting their hands and clothes badly soiled and smutted up in the process, but a barrel half full of the finished product of corn, yeast and buckeye balls was standing by, so they knocked the head out and proceeded to wash up. The sheriff says that was the most efficient washing extract and shampoo decoction he ever went up against.

After their successful ablutions they poured out the leavings while some astonished ladies looked on from a distance.

The operators of these plants were tipped off in time to make their escape before the officers arrived but they are known and will be apprehended by the Federal officers later.

Sheriff Littlejohn is going to make it so hard to get a drink of booze around here that the people will actually forget what it tastes like.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, protected by the services of the latest improved Liv-o-lax, manned by carefully trained and competent employees, is the most reliable and safe mode of transportation. Nobody likes to give or take castor oil. There is really hardly any need for it since the invention of Liv-o-lax.

And Liv-o-lax fills a double need. It has a marked action on the liver as well as the digestive tract, and so it can be used in cases of bilious attack, and when a cold is coming on, it takes the place of calomel and castor oil. ### FORD SALES PASS THREE QUARTER MILLION MARK

Car and truck deliveries alone show increase of 102,158 over last year. May has opened with a higher demand for Ford products than any month so far this year, the Ford Motor Company announced here today.

Ford retail sales in the United States during the first ten days of May averaged 8,385 daily, exceeding the last ten-day period of the record-breaking sales in the month of April and indicating the continued upward trend of the market.

Figures just compiled show a total of 757,023 Ford units retailed to customers from January 1st to and including May 10th, of which Ford car and truck deliveries alone show a gain of 102,158 over the same period a year ago.

With the increase already attained this month and with the present outlook for business the company anticipates a new high sales figure in May.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION FORMED IN CHILTON COUNTY

Strawberry Marketing a Feature

A few weeks ago, a group of farmers who have been active in the United Farmers' organization in this county met in Clanton for the purpose of surveying the co-operative situation in the county. At this meeting a plan of re-organization was decided upon and a committee was appointed to draw up plans and proceed with the necessary arrangements. This committee consisted of J. M. Smith, J. S. Weldon and O. H. Mastin.

By the middle of last week this committee had completed their work and called a meeting of the charter members in Clanton for Saturday, May 17, for the purpose of adopting a constitution and By-Laws and to elect the officers of the association.

Previous to the time of the meeting, the application for charter, signed by all of the forty-five charter members, had been filed with the Judge of Probate and proper acknowledgment received, giving the association the right to transact business under the laws of the state of Alabama.

The meeting Saturday was called to order at 2:00 p. m. and J. S. Weldon was elected chairman of the meeting and C. N. Eiland, secretary. The purpose of the meeting was then stated after which a complete list of the charter members was read.

The proposed Constitution and By-Laws was then presented for action to the members and was adopted after thorough discussion and the addition of one or two amendments.

The election of officers took place immediately after the adoption of the Constitution and By-Laws and the following were elected:

J. S. Weldon, President.
J. M. Smith, Vice President
E. Robinson, Secretary

A board of Directors was elected as follows:

J. M. Smith
W. B. Cooper
J. S. Weldon
J. A. Mims
R. M. Foshee
G. W. Robinson
S. E. Morris
R. L. Weaver
J. W. Lowery

The Board of Directors elected the following members to serve on the Executive Committee:

J. S. Weldon Chrm.
W. B. Cooper
R. M. Foshee

The manager was then elected, O. H. Mastin being selected to occupy this office.

The object of "The Farmers Co-operative Association" as the new organization is to be called, is stated as follows in the Constitution: "The object and purpose of this association will act as the agent for all members in the purchasing of seed, fertilizer farm equipment and other supplies; also in the marketing of the products of its members. The association will encourage the growing of strawberries and other fruit and truck crops and market same for its members."

As seen from the above, this association will be conducted along somewhat the same lines as the United Farmers, with more attention being given, however, to the purchasing of supplies, etc., for the members and also the production and marketing of Strawberry crops.

This latter feature, that of strawberry growing and marketing, should be of special interest to everyone in or near Clanton. Several strawberry growers near Clanton are among its charter members and it is expected that all strawberry producers whose logical shipping point is Clanton will soon become members. Before Clanton can hope to ship berries in car lots the acreage in this crop around Clanton will have to be increased considerably. The association will put on a campaign for strawberry growing in this territory, will buy the plants for its members and give them such other assistance as it is able. Already some of its members who have no strawberries at the present time have agreed to plant some and other farmers who are planning to put in some ground to this crop have stated their intention of joining. With an association here on the job systematically promoting the strawberry industry and ready to market the berries when they are produced, this industry should show rapid progress here. When it is remembered that the growers shipping berries from Thorsby this season will receive more than forty thousand ($40,000.00) dollars for their crop, the possibilities along this line here at Clanton are clearly evident.

As has been stated elsewhere in this article, the association will not be a strawberry marketing association alone by any means, but this is one valuable feature of the association. It must not be thought by anyone that the association will be antagonistic to the Thorsby Fruit and Fruit Growers' Association, as it will merely aim to serve the farmers around Clanton in the same way that the Thorsby Association is serving the farmers around Thorsby. Indeed several of the members of the Thorsby association are charter members of the new association and this will help to insure a friendly co-operation between the two associations.

Details as to the method of joining the Farmers Co-operative Association, the plans of operation and other information can be secured by asking any officer or member of the association. The association has no secrets and will simply conduct its affairs according to recognized business principles.

The most urgent immediate task of the association is to increase its membership. The opportunity is open to all farmers who wish to join, with the purpose of doing business through the association, to join. Since its organization on May 17, twenty-two new members have been secured, making a total membership at this time (May 20) of 67 of the leading farmers of the county. This is a home organization (founded by Chilton County

BITTEN BY MAD DOG

Last Sunday the little five year old son of Mr. W. M. Pairrett, who lives out two miles from town on the Lock 12 road, was at play in the road, when a yellow hound dog came trotting by and snapped him on the arm. The dog continued his course until he came to the home of Mr. Tom Wyatt, where he stopped long enough to bite three dogs. He escaped before they could get out and kill him and crossed over the creek.

Phone messages to look out for him were sent on ahead and he was rounded up in a cotton patch, where he had a fit, and was finally dispatched. Mr. Pairrett went over and got the head and brought it immediately to town where it was packed in ice and sent to the Pasteur institute at Montgomery for examination. Word came back that the dog was rabid and the farmers on a plan that fits our condition, with expenses held down accordingly. It is an organization of farmers and for farmers. It lies with the farmers of Chilton county to render the decision as to what it will accomplish.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Poincare's Downfall Makes for Settlement of the Troubles of Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PREMIER Poincare is out, or will be on June 1, because of the defeat of his national bloc in the French parliamentary elections. Some radical, possibly M. Herriot of Lyons, will form the new cabinet, and the policy of France toward the settlement of the reparations dispute with Germany will be so changed that definite solution of the problem seems in sight. That is, if the German factions that won dominance in the recent elections will adhere honestly to the Dawes plan. In that case the new French government will display a more conciliatory spirit toward Germany and may evacuate the Ruhr entirely.

In Germany the people's party, to which Chancellor Stresemann belongs, has formally endorsed the Dawes report and approved its acceptance. But it also agreed that the nationalists should name the new chancellor, on condition that the foreign office portfolio be given to a people's party man. The nationalists, together with the monarchists, oppose the Dawes plan. They, of course, rejoiced over the defeat of Poincare, but it may deprive them of their chief asset—the French occupation of the Ruhr. It is believed in Berlin that Herr Hertig will be the new chancellor.

The French chamber does not meet until June 3. President Millerand will then name the new premier, who may be Briand or Poincare, if Herriot is not selected. It is likely that Millerand himself will then resign. All those who have opposed Poincare's policies, including the British government, were happy over his downfall, but it is a source of anxiety for the small nations of central Europe that have been depending on French support. This is especially true of Rumania, which is in daily fear of war with Russia over Bessarabia. The French radical Socialists, who will have about 124 members in the new chamber, favor recognizing soviet Russia regardless of the latter's attitude concerning the French debt. This prospect is worrying Germany because of her break with Moscow over the raid on the Russian trade delegation's headquarters.

German monarchists and nationalists, led by General Ludendorff, held a great celebration of "German Day" in Halle and incidentally battled with the communists there, using tanks and cannon in storming the Red garrison. There were many casualties and the communists were utterly routed. Immediately after this occurrence there were reports that the former kaiser and his wife had left Holland for Silesia. This story was not confirmed. Japan's government also was overthrown by the popular vote, the liberal opposition winning 277 of the 464 seats in the new house. Premier Kiyoura and his cabinet, however, will not quit office until after the state celebration early in June of Prince Regent Hirohito's wedding.

President Coolidge successfully negotiated one hurdle last week, but there were other and higher ones in front of him. His veto of the Bureau bill increasing the pensions of Civil war veterans and widows was sustained by the senate by a margin of just one vote. Voting to override the veto were 32 Republicans, 19 Democrats and two Farmer-Labor, while sustaining the veto were 12 Republicans and 12 Democrats. At first the veto was beaten, but Senator Harrell of Oklahoma changed from one side to the other and the day was saved for the President. Senator Bursum said he would immediately draft a new measure which he believed would pass at this session, the increases provided being smaller. The President's disapproval was based on economy.

Veto of the soldiers' bonus bill came Thursday, and it was predicted that both the senate and house would override it, though perhaps by narrow margins. The President in his message condemned the measure severely as against the interests of the whole people, and asserted that it would frustrate the tax relief that the country desires.

As for the immigration bill, with its Japanese exclusion provision, the intention of the President is not known at this writing. The leaders of both parties in the house were called to the White House for a conference in the hope that postponement of the exclusion might be arranged, although congress had rejected that arrangement.

Farm relief legislation is causing the Republicans considerable worry, for they fear that if some bill to help the farmers is not passed at this session the Northwest will be lost to them next November. The McNary-Haugen bill is the first on the list, but it is opposed by many members of both parties and by some members of the cabinet, though Secretary of Agriculture Wallace favors it. This measure provides for creation of a $200,000,000 export corporation and for elaborate machinery under which the domestic price of grain and other products of the farm would be raised artificially and maintained at a higher level than if the domestic price were dependent on world price for the exportable surplus.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, under indictment on the charge of having accepted money to appear before a government department, was "wholly exonerated" of the accusation by the senate committee appointed to investigate the case. The committee's report says Wheeler did not agree to appear before any government official in behalf of Golden Campbell, did not do so, and did not get paid for doing so. Senator Spencer alone dissented, bringing in a minority report finding that the Department of Justice was justified in having Mr. Wheeler indicted. In this connection it should be recorded that Attorney General Stone has abandoned the governmental spy system and announced that in the future the work of the bureau of investigation will be strictly in the line of aiding the lawyers of the department in preparing their cases. All the "dollar-a-year men", among whom were many notables, have been "fired."

Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky, tried in Covington on a charge of conspiracy in connection with liquor withdrawals, was found guilty, denied a new trial and sentenced to two years in prison. He announced that he would take an appeal and that he would not resign his seat in the house. Two of Langley's co-defendants pleaded guilty and a third was convicted, and all received the same sentence.

Judge Wilkerson and Carpenter of the Federal court in Chicago last Thursday ruled that President Coolidge's pardon of Philip Grossman of Chicago was void, and ordered United States Marshal Levy to seize Grossman at once and put him in the house of correction. This was a simple liquor selling case at first, and Grossman was sentenced to a year in the bridewell by Judge Landis for contempt of court. Politicians went to his aid and C. W. Middlekauff, the government prosecutor, recommended a pardon. The whole case received an airing before the senate committee investigating Harry Daugherty. Judge Wilkerson and Carpenter held that the President has no power to pardon in contempt cases, declaring: "Such extension of the executive power would deal a death blow to the power of the judiciary, and would make the executive branch the ultimate source of justice."

Senator Underwood's supporters for the Democratic presidential nomination are planning to carry the fight on the Ku Klux Klan to the floor of the national convention. Governor Brandon of Alabama, who is to make the speech putting Underwood before the convention, will introduce the subject, and if the resolutions committee does not adopt a satisfactory plank the Underwood men will present a minority report calling for a reaffirmation of the Democratic plank of 1856. This reads: "That the foundation of this Union of States having been laid in, and its prosperity, expansion and pre-eminent example in free government built upon, entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of persons in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birthplace."

Democrats who do not wish to antagonize the Klan in such strongholds as Indiana nor to lose the strength that such men as Al Smith might give their ticket have thought up a new combination. This is to nominate Ralston for the presidency; to persuade Senator Copeland of New York to resign and take second place on the ticket, and then to run Governor Smith for the senate.

George Brennan of Illinois, chief of the anti-McAdoo leaders, has challenged McAdoo to consent to the abrogation of the time-honored two-thirds rule, and McAdoo's manager has replied that if Brennan will make the proposal in the convention the Californian will not oppose it. So it may be the next Democratic nominee will be selected by a mere majority vote of the convention.

Major Martin and his mechanic, Sergeant Harvey, of the world circling squadron of aviators, are safe and on their way to the United States. Early in the week word was received from Martin that they were at Port Moller on the Alaska peninsula, having reached that place after a week's wandering across the snow. Their plane crashed against a mountain in the fog soon after they left Chignik and was totally wrecked. The other three planes have continued on the trip and Major Martin, still nominally in command of the expedition, will regain them probably in Europe for the completion of the flight.

Lieutenant D'Oisy, the French aviator who is flying around the world from west to east, has reached India, China, and Stuart MacLaren, the Englishman, is in India.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherine of Russia and Zinovieff, president of the third international, should "get together." The former has declared repeatedly that the Russian government is refraining from propaganda in other countries, but the latter, in a statement of what the Communists have accomplished in the past year, makes these claims:

Russian money and propaganda and leadership are entirely responsible for the great Communist gains in Germany, where the Communist vote was increased sevenfold at the recent election. He says this is Moscow's biggest victory in years.

The soviets paved the way for a labor government in England. "Prime Minister MacDonald is a pure opportunist," adds M. Zinovieff, but labor maintains its step towards communism in England.

The Communist party claims vast gains in India and China, and is now one of the big parties in Japan, "thanks to the soviet government."

The naval oil commission named by the President has condemned the practice of exchanging oil for tank construction, as provided in the leases which Secretaries Denby and Hall made to Doheny and Sinclair. The commission says: "The oil that now remains under governmental control, or that will be brought under such control, must be treasured not for its market value, especially in these days of low prices, but for its emergency value at some future date."

"Considerable funds will be needed to provide adequate tankage, considerable more to purchase oil to fill those tanks, and still more funds to test and develop possible additional reserves. Without money the existing reserves can neither be adequately protected nor fully utilized."

"Whatever may be the outcome of litigation now pending, in the prosecution of which government agencies are co-operating, the commission bases its immediate recommendations for administrative action upon the broad principle of preserving for the navy as much as possible of the navy's oil reserve until the navy's need is most urgent."

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska.—"My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to."—Mrs. DONA PHILLIPS, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

ELLIS ISLAND

Ellis Island, in New York bay, near the Statue of Liberty, is the chief landing place provided by Uncle Sam for immigrants. Through it passes the constant stream of foreign-born which flows America-ward and from which they scatter to the four winds.

Formerly known both as Oyster and Gibbet Island, it was acquired by the national government from the State of New York in 1898 and became our leading immigration station in 1891.

After leaving quarantine immigrants are landed on barges which are towed to Ellis Island. As the immigrants land they are formed into lines and file past the inspectors who "size them up" to discover if there is any reason why they should not be permitted to enter America. They are reviewed by doctors and examined by inspectors and vice investigators. Feet, legs, hands, arms, body, face, eyes, head, are gone over. They are carefully scanned for skin, communicable and eye diseases.

If found to be O. K. in every way, immigrants are permitted to pass, purchase tickets to destination, their money exchanged for its equivalent in our currency and given assistance in locating friends or relatives. Otherwise, they are held for further investigation and developments and finally passed or returned to the country from which they came, as conditions warrant.

The majority of these newcomers go straightaway to the big cities—three-fourths of them, it is said, to the territory east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio river.

Ellis Island is intensely interesting. Amusing and pathetic incidents occur daily. All immigrants approach it in fear and trembling lest they prove unfit to enter. To nearly all of them our language and customs are unknown, hence they do not understand what it is all about. "Tis said that many tears have been shed here than any other place in the world. Many cry for joy over permission to enter, others because they are refused or because a family is separated, maybe for life, one member being unfit.

Uncle Sam's entrance laws are rigid—not that he wishes to keep out desirable, but because of the imperative necessity of preventing undesirable from entering. As many as 5,000 immigrants have passed through Ellis Island in a single day, and more than a million have entered during a single year.

THE NEW YORK SUBWAY

The rapid growth and consequent street congestion of our large cities seriously slows down local transportation and hastens the installation of improved methods. With the perfection of electric traction came the subway or underground transportation.

Crowded conditions on Manhattan Island, where in some sections authorities claim population reaches the unbelievable density of 700 persons per acre, are unmatched. New York city not only leads the world in subway operation, but probably possesses more miles of subway than all other cities combined.

There are now completed or being built there seventy miles of subway containing upwards of 200 miles of single track, the cost of which ranged from $1,200,000 to $2,500,000 per mile, according to time of construction and working conditions.

The building of a steel-reinforced concrete tunnel under the crowded streets and towering skyscrapers of our largest city, maintaining sewers, water, steam, gas and lighting mains, telegraph, telephone and fire-alarm cables and other public utilities vital to the success of a metropolitan city, through which to operate electric passenger trains on fast and frequent schedules is a herculean task.

The main trunk lines of this subway system are four tracks wide and provide for both express or through and local traffic in each direction. Patrons enter the subway from kiosks on the streets, broad stairways leading to the platform. As a rule, local stations are about five blocks and express stations about two miles apart.

During the busy periods, morning and night, in a trunk line subway express trains carrying eight to ten cars operate about one minute apart in each direction, making a speed better than thirty miles an hour. Local trains, carrying five and six cars, operate less than two minutes apart in each direction. The cars are about fifty feet long. Such a subway will transport 1,000,000 passengers daily.

The depth of the subway underground varies widely according to local conditions. The greatest depth is at about 180th street where the rails are about 180 feet below street level. At places of great depth elevators are used to carry the people to and from the trains.

GOOD BISCUITS Are Your Best Food

SCIENTISTS tell us that wholesome properly raised biscuits contain more calories and more nourishment than any other bread. But every one knows that to be healthful and easily digested, biscuits must be carefully made and properly baked.

"Happily, my experience has shown that it is almost impossible to make poor biscuits with self-rising flour," writes a housewife of Blythe-wood, S. C. "My biscuits in the North, made with ordinary flour, were invariably a failure, but I can truthfully say that when I use self-rising flour the reverse is the case. . . . Through a number of years' experience I have found self-rising flour to be all and more than its manufacturers claim it to be. . . . Its convenience and economy in saving both time and labor can hardly be over-estimated."

Because it simplifies the work of baking and practically eliminates failures, self-rising flour is the most economical flour you can use. Aside from this, dietitians and food experts commend its healthful qualities. Next time you cook biscuits try self-rising flour. You'll never regret it!

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour. (1) See that your oven is hot! (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water. (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt! (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter. (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Million Dollar Campaign for Alabama College Starts June 2

Alabama College at Montevallo will launch its Million Dollar Campaign June 2, with Dean O. C. Carmichael at the helm and the state fully organized for an intensive drive which will last for two months.

The purpose of this campaign is to provide funds for expansion. This sum will enable the college to take care of the hundreds of young women who are anxious to enter but who are barred because accommodations are limited. Today there are 650 students enrolled in the school, and there is not another crack or crevice into which a girl might be stowed.

Not only are the dormitories crowded to capacity but the classrooms are overflowing. Teachers find it difficult to teach their subjects satisfactorily with students sitting in chairs as well as in the desks provided, to say nothing of those who are standing lined about the walls because space cannot be found to place chairs for them. Yet according to the college authorities this is the condition in many of the Freshman courses where the growth of the college is naturally felt most.

Organization of the human machine which is to collect this million dollars is going forward rapidly, with all available clubs and groups in the state co-operating, and every one of the 650 girls now enrolled in the school pledged to spread the gospel in her own home town.

The congressional districts of the state have been taken as the first units of division and one member of the executive committee is to head each of the districts. These district chairmen will have student assistants who have already been appointed from among the student body to take charge of the detail work in their respective districts.

The district chairmen will appoint county chairmen, who will in turn divide their counties into sections and appoint heads of each section. These sectional organizations will have direct charge of collecting the money and will make periodical reports and remittances to the county chairman, thence to the district chairman and to the main organization.

The larger cities in the state will be organized separately, the local clubs in each city being invited to act as a basis for the organization.

The aim of the campaign is to provide funds for immediate expansion. Unless this expansion can be financed hundreds of girls must be turned away this year as they were last. It was only by putting up a temporary wooden dormitory that the school was able to make room for the students now enrolled. As it is, several hundred were turned away.

Enrollments on the first of May were equal to the number enrolled on the first of August last year, indicating that there will be more than four hundred who cannot be accommodated. "We have demonstrated that we can put up temporary living quarters as we did last year," says Dean Carmichael. "But we cannot provide class room space and educational equipment."

Today there are 3,000 young men of college age in state schools while there are only 1,000 young women in state schools, 650 of them being enrolled at Alabama College. These figures quoted in the face of the fact that there are almost twice as many young girls graduating from high schools of the state every year as there are boys indicates only one condition. The young women of Alabama are finding that their state cannot meet their demands and are going out of state to get their education.

"The quota of a million dollars has been divided among the citizens of the state in a general way. It is estimated that if every white man and woman gives one dollar the sum will run far in excess of the desired million. When one stops to consider that in Alabama alone the people spend more than two million dollars a year for chewing gum, the fact that Alabama College is asking for one million to invest in the young womanhood of the state seems conservative."

THE PLEASANT GROVE SINGING

Thanks to the courtesy of our good friend, Mr. S. E. Bruce, last Sunday afternoon we took a trip out to the Sacred Harp singing at Pleasant Grove.

To our unlimited surprise we found a crowd out there that was estimated as being anywhere from 750 to 1000.

The house would only accommodate about one fifth of the crowd at one time. We managed to find standing room for awhile in the pulpit and listened to some most excellent music.

Miss Edna Jackson, of Birmingham, and Miss Era Sanders, of Route 1, sang, by request, a song of mother. It was something to remember and to dream about. Many eyes, unused to tears were moist in that large crowd when they concluded.

Both of these young ladies are real song birds and music seems to be a natural part of their lives. The large audience certainly appreciated their offering and we offer them our sincere congratulations.

Below we append the official program as carried out during the two days devoted to real music:

The Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony Singing held its regular Semi-Annual Session at Pleasant Grove church, Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17th.

Promptly at ten o'clock Saturday morning the Convention was called to order by the vice president, who assumed the duties as chairman until the president, Mr. Z. J. Jones arrived.

The opening song "Idumes" was rendered by vice president, T. J. Jackson, after which the Convention was led in prayer by Mr. A. T. Davis.

A committee of four arranged for the directors and the time given each director being fifteen minutes.

Officers for the ensuing year were renominated and elected as follows: Z. J. Jones, President; T. J. Jackson, Vice-President; and Miss Era Sanders Secretary.

Delegates were appointed to attend the different State Conventions, convening in Birmingham in July and September.

Sunday was particularly a good day for the singing. Many singers and directors were present and also a vast audience of listeners who enjoyed the music.

Several special compositions were rendered during the day by the Vice president, the Secretary, Miss Edna Jackson, of Birmingham and W. J. Lawley.

The eleven o'clock Memorial Service was very impressive. Songs in memory of Messers White and Walker, authors of the Harp and Harmony were rendered by Mr. W. J. Lawley and the Secretary.

Songs also in memory of two of our deceased members, Mrs. E. A. (Annie) Teel and Mrs. J. H. Golden were rendered by Messers A. A. and T. J. Jackson.

The program of directors were composed of: The Vice President, the Secretary, A. T. Davis, J. N. Scott, A. J. Langston, W. J. Morris, W. J. Lawley, M. W. Brown, T. J. Baker, J. E. Cobb, the State President, A. A. Jackson and his daughter Miss Edna, Birmingham, Mrs. Sarah Bates, Hayes Brothers and Frank Culpepper.

Closing song, "Resurrection" was rendered by the Vice President.

We were glad to have the State President and Miss Jackson with us, also all other visitors and hope it will be our good pleasure to hear voices in songs in our next Convention.

The Pleasant Grove people were so good and hospitable during our sojourn with them, and the gooddeats prepared by the kind hands of the ladies of that community were fruits of a generous free giving heart, we are confident.

We appreciate it and thank you so much for having contributed your large share in making this convention the success it was.

The next Convention goes to Sardis.

STUDEBAKER SPECIAL IN 500 MILE RACE—EARL COOPER DRIVER

INDIANAPOLIS Ind. May 20—Earl Cooper, a veteran automobile racing driver when many of the present generation of speed pilots were in swaddling clothes, has arrived here with his Studebaker Special as his mount in the Twelfth International 500-mile race to be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

A Great Star

In the days of yesteryear—when Johnny Aitkens, Gil Anderson, Tom Rooney, Dario Resta and Barney Oldfield were the stars in automobile racing's electric lights—Cooper was a star of the first water.

He was a first placer in the sizzling road races as well as on specially constructed speedways. The one went into retirement and followed the more prosaic existence of a business man on the Pacific Coast.

Suddenly he announced his return to the track. That was two years ago. He jumped into Joe Thomas's car the day of the Fresno, Cal. race after Thomas was stricken with appendicitis and had to submit to a track-side operation.

A Lesson in Speed

Cooper drove the car into first place, giving the group of speedsters that had come to the top during his retirement a lesson in the art of getting around

WOCO PEP—In town, in the country in the woods, the air is full of it. Don't you smell it? Jno. T. Ellis & Son. a speed bowl a required number of times in the shortest period.

He was second in the Fourth of July race at Kansas City, last year, and second at Beverly Hills, Los Angeles in 1922. Cooper's best run at Indianapolis was in 1915 when he ran fourth. In 1924 he was the road race champ.

Cooper is of the studious, mechanical type, who keeps a detailed series of charts and notes on the actions of his racing car. These should be invaluable to The Studebaker Corporation, under whose banner Cooper is racing.

Welcomed By Mayor

Cooper was officially welcomed on his arrival here by Mayor Lew Shank. His blue speed creation is attracting much attention.

Reeves Dutton, also of the older school of mechanics, is with Cooper this year, assisting the racing driver in preparing his car for the 500-mile race.

A RESOLUTION

Whereas, there has been within the recent few days conduct on the part of certain people living within the town of Jemison, which casts reflection, upon the good name of the town and people living within its vicinity, who believe in law and order and maintaining the high ideals of citizenship, and

Whereas, those guilty of this conduct boldly persist in their manner of living and seem unaware of the seriousness of the situation and the ultimate results, in disaster, to the morals of our Town and community, if not deterred, and

Whereas, the Masonic Order stands for upholding the morals of our town and community and believe in and foster the high ideals of citizenship and the establishing by example, moral living and detest immoral conduct in every way, and

Whereas, there has gone out to the world at large an idea that the people of Jemison are not active in their efforts to bring to justice, parties guilty of violating the law, therefore be it Resolved by Jemison Lodge Number 411, A. F. & A. M., that we condemn the conduct of all parties who violate the moral and statutory laws and offer to the authorities our means and time to stamp out the condition mentioned; that we call upon all good citizens to join us in our efforts to make our town and community free from the vice and immoral condition in which we have been cast, and ask that all citizens of Chilton County give us their aid and support in bringing those guilty to justice, through the lawful channels of our government.

ANOTHER DOWN TOWN BUILDING

Material is being put on the ground and work will commence right away on another down town structure.

We refer to the new and modern office building that Dr. Arthur Johnson is going to have erected on the lot just east of the site formerly occupied by the old Baptist church.

He is going to put him up a new and beautiful home to accommodate his needs as a physician and specialist. It will be finished with glass and pressed brick front and will be an added attraction to the down town district.

Old man winter is learning to be a real modern guy. He wants to sit in the lap of coy spring the wheel year around.

GOING SOME

Mr. Will Plier broke all records here for long distance Ford driving last week.

He left St. Marys, Fla., at 8 a. m. one morning and arrived at his home here the next morning at 6.

The distance, the way he came was close to 400 miles and he drove continuously for the 22 hours, except a few moments stop, a time or two, for gas and oil. He made the entire round trip from here down there and back without a puncture or any other car trouble.

SOME MOTOR TRIP

Mr. J. C. Page and wife motored over to McMinnville, Tenn., for the last week end.

The distance is over 200 miles, but they report a most enjoyable, though rather strenuous time in going and coming. Some of the roads were fine and some were immensely the reverse.

GOING WEST

Mr. J. B. Downs and wife, will leave next Sunday for an extended visit out west.

They will visit their daughter, Mrs. J. J. Pickens, at Denver, Col., and, perhaps, spend considerable time in that section prospecting and sight seeing.

PARRISH-VINES

On last Thursday afternoon Mr. W. S. Parrish, of Mitchell Dam, and Miss Eula Mae Vines, who lives a few miles out of town, were happily united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. S. J. Ezell, at his home and the happy couple went immediately to their home.

Both of these young people are favorites in this section and their many friends follow them with good wishes.

"SIGNS OF THE TIMES"

The above subject was selected by Dr. Wilkerson, pastor of the Methodist church, last Sunday night as a fitting opening for the series of meetings that are progressing there this week.

The gifted speaker handled the subject in a way that should meet with the sincere and earnest approval of all good and decent people.

He depicted the awful conditions that certain elements of society have drifted into, in language so plain that all could understand. He referred to horrible social evils that we all see and know every day we live, but none of us seem to have the nerve to register our disapproval. His arraignment was true in its most minute detail and was given in a spirit of love, but it told of conditions that are horrible to contemplate. Such utterance from the pulpit of our country would do more than any other one thing to correct these terrible evils.

We extend to Dr. Wilkerson our hearty endorsement of every thing he said, and we feel like that all the good citizenship of this entire section are under obligations to him for this able and manly effort, on his part, to help save us from a daily shame.

MORE ABOUT COTTON MILLS
(By Our Mayor)

The need of some large industrial establishment at Clanton is more apparent every day. Our cotton crop in Chilton County has, in the past, run all the way from 5000 to above 20,000 bales annually. Now, suppose we had a large cotton mill or two in this county and could sell our cotton at home instead of shipping it elsewhere. Thus saving of freight and middle men's profit. We could easily realize $10.00 saving per bale at present prices, at least it is being done at such places. Say we made only 10,000 bales that would be $100,000.00 to our farmers in one year or $1,000,000.00 in ten years on cotton prices alone. (Enough to build a good large cotton mill.)

Then, when our farmers had vegetables and fruits, or farm products of any kind; more than was needed at home; how nice it would be to be able to convert that into hard cash by selling to the laborers at these cotton mills, who will be eager customers, instead of allowing his extra products to rot and ruin in waste because of no ready market as is the case today.

What would a pay-roll of between $25,000 and $50,000 mean to us? The people who work at these mills are, usually, the kind of folks that realize that money was made to spend and is worthless except as a medium of exchange; and thus they let it go and it is soon found circulating in the community and almost every member of the community realizes some benefit from it.

The maintenance of such a laboring population would mean wonders to the business men and producers on the farm. Suppose they and their dependents amounted to a population of 5000, and that their expenditures was $1.00 each per day for 300 days in the year. That would mean $1,500,000 annually spent here in our community that is not here now. If what some statistician has said is true that each dollar that goes into circulation pays seven dollars debts, see what a wonderful debt paying, we could have.

I know the remark has been made that too much has been said too little done, but I cannot refrain again from appealing to our people to let's wake up to the situation and act before it is too late. Do we need industries located in or near Clanton? Will our present agricultural interest keep business on a sound basis the year around? Can we go on as we have been going without putting forth any effort? Will we glide along leisurely down stream with the current and all continue to be well with us? Or, will it be necessary with us, as it is with others, to organize ourselves and put forth a united effort to forge ahead and keep pace with other towns of equal magnitude in the effort to secure industries, make up pay-rolls, encourage business, and bring our town and county to the notice of thriving, active, business men who will then be ready to fall in and help the fellow who helps himself.

If we do not do these things, we must go backward, for our lumber business is exhausted, our dams on the Coosa have been built and the flow of money from these sources has stopped. The time is at hand that we must have other sources or our business will suffer and our town will begin to change from a live active leader to a slow non progressive type that some one might actually describe as a dead town.

Now, if we will get together and try, we have a chance to make the start. We have a chance, by doing our part, to get a cotton mill; and when once the start is made other and larger mills will come. At least that is the hope of this industry. Look at the many mills in Georgia and the Carolina, or come closer home and see Huntsville, Sylvauga, Alexander City and others.

COOPERATION

There is nothing more necessary in any project, business, lodge, church, community nor town than a real spirit of cooperation, if they ever expect to do anything worth while.

United we stand, divided we fall. "In unity there is strength." A house divided against itself will fall.

These are axioms of truth that have been born out by years of experience. They are immutable and never fail. Any people or organization that wishes to succeed in any laudable undertaking must pin these truths to the mast head and sail under them day in and day out.

For the past few years a spirit of commendable cooperation has presided over the destinies of Clanton and you can look in any direction and see the effect in new and improved buildings and business blocks and in the wonderfully improved appearance on every hand.

Right at this particular time, owing to causes that are perfectly natural and absolutely unavoidable we are experiencing a period of rather slack trade. People are busy on the farms and money is scarce in circulation.

Upon the authority of the country there is nothing ahead to cause us to become either afraid or panicky. A better day is just ahead.

Now, we implore the business people of Clanton to bear these facts in mind and don't become blue and sour and suspicious of your neighbor nor niggardly in your public spirit. Let confidence in each other prevail and keep a united spirit of earnest cooperation always in the front of your every action.

Do not fall out over trifles or seriously differ over the expediences of every day life.

Put every shoulder to the wheel with a smile of confidence and let's all go together.

POLITENESS

A lady was driving her car up second avenue Saturday when a colored man, with his mind probably engaged with pleasant memories of possum dinner last winter and rosy dreams of cat fish suppers near by, walked directly in the path of the car without looking up.

The lady applied her brakes, but before the car could entirely stop one fender brushed the man.

His awakening was so sudden that he sprang entirely over the radiator and lacerated one thumb, but he was a man, all right. He sprang up and doffed his hat and assured the lady that no harm was done.

NEW FRONT

The new Hays Drug Store house is making some extensive repairs to their building this week.

Among other things they have torn out the entire front and are installing a brand new plate glass front that is going to be a beauty.

The Doctor is going to make his place class up in every way with all of the modern demands of the drug trade.

Harry Roper says this year has got him beat. It is always too hot or too cold too wet or too dry to do farm work, so he has gone to hunting cat-fish ticks and left the farm work to the other fellow.

BASE BALL LAST THURSDAY

One of the largest crowd of fans that has gathered at Folks Park this season turned out last Thursday afternoon to witness a game of base ball between the Clanton boys and a much touted team from Montgomery.

Promptly at 3 o'clock the game was called and the battle begun.

Both teams annexed goose eggs up until the fourth inning when the visitors made one score and repeating the performance in the fifth.

Clanton failed to connect at all until their half of the sixth inning, when they suddenly discovered how easy it was to score, and proceeded to chalk up 7 tallies before they could shut off steam. In the seventh they decided their tally would look better in even numbers, so they added another run and made it read eight.

The final score of the game was 8 to 6 in favor of Clanton. The Montgomery team earned 2 of these runs, and the alleged Crampton Bowl umpire they brought with them to hold the indicator, won the other four for them.

Even with the rottenness that developed upon the part of his umpirs this was a real interesting game of ball. Of course, people do not enjoy such flagrant and palpable unfairness as was developed by the Umpire in the latter half of this game, like they do a truly fair and sportsmanlike performance, but they made up for that, to some extent, by finally telling the boss where to get off.

The Clanton fans demand clean sport and do not appreciate any other kind and the team that comes here to play would always do well to bear that fact in mind if they wish to be popular or draw out a good attendance. The batteries for the teams were, for Clanton, Hutto and Thompson.

For Montgomery, D. Green, knocked out in the sixth frame and relieved by P. Heuan, Catcher, Cadelle.

Hutto, who was the mound artist for Clanton, is one of the coolest and most business-like pitchers we have seen in the box lately and never seems to lose either his head or control. The service of Thompson behind the bat was first class.

Both the visiting pitchers seemed to have very little control and their delivery was erratic all the way through. The catcher for the visitors seemed to be all to the good.

W. O. W.

Mr. J. Richardson has returned after having been engaged in work for W. O. W. in Blocton, Piper, Marvel, and other towns in Alabama. He reports that the "Wood Choppers" are in the most prosperous conditions since this large and growing order has been in existence. The W. O. W. members are planning to have a barbecue here some time in the not far distant future. In fact, they are going to make things hum. According to reports they are going to have one of the most distinguished orators and speakers in the state with us.

Miss Sallye Johnson, daughter of Dr. N. S. Johnson, has returned from Randolph-Macon College in Danville Virginia where she has completed her third year's work in that highly reputable institution.

ANGLERS AND FISHERMEN

The write up of the Editor in last week's issue of the News in reference to the outing of a large number of sportsmen on the back waters of the Coosa river and the observation of the writer at Knights ferry on the same stream prove that there is a vast deal of difference, between angling and fishing.

The report from above Lock 12 was that large numbers of men, with all sorts of paraphernalia toiled all the day and caught nothing, while at knights ferry Messers W. C. Wyatt, Charles Wyatt, and his scribe, with a flat bottom boat, some set hooks on wooden poles and a trot line landed ninety pounds of fish.

In addition to this catch, Mr. Charles Wyatt discovered on an old trap a sturgeon so large that it threatened to shake it loose from the foundation. Aided by Mr. West Cooper, the sturgeon was, by the Wyatt brothers gotten into the boat and conveyed through the shoals and rapids to the bank of the river, when a pair of mules snaked him up to the top of the hill where he was placed on a truck and carried to Cooper. His length was 9 feet and his weight was 333 pounds. Some fish and some fishermen. If the Editor will lay aside the rod and reel with the fancy lures and go with us down to Knights ferry, we will supply him with such tackles as fishermen use, and see to it that he, at least get a bite.

G. A. HORNADY

The Editor's wife is rather skeptical about the above fish story for the Reverent fisherman has promised her a mess of fish if he caught any and she has seen no fish yet and she had always looked upon this special fisherman as a man of his word.

ROBBING AUTOMOBILES

It is becoming a quite frequent fad with a certain thieving element around town to steal parts, tools or luggage out of any car they can find parked and no one in sight.

Last Friday week night, at the High School, we learn that while the entertainment was in progress and the crowd interested on the inside, that some low down loafing miscreant stole from the car of Dr. Wilkerson his entire kit of auto tools.

Then again Sunday night, during the services, some sticky fingered guy entered the coupe of Mr. Hugh Foshee and, finding an expensive rod and reel belonging to him and which he kept put away in his car, they appropriated it.

Such reckless and wanton roguery as that is disgraceful and needs attention and we earnestly hope that whoever is guilty will be apprehended and given all that is coming to him.

It is a shame that honest people can not even go out to church without putting their possessions all in their pockets or under lock and key.

Ex-Sheriff Harris is acting as Chief of police this week in the absence of our fellow townsman, G. D. Retherford.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Shaw were Birmingham visitors last Monday.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, up next to the Canadian line in Montana and a public playground of the first class, had its most successful season in 1923 and will doubtless set a new record this year. Glacier will come to its own in the matter of its attendance with the completion of its Transmountain Road across the Continental Divide, over Logan Pass, now in the third year of construction by the national park service. Already the service is planning for substantial extensions to present accommodations for visitors, which will then be necessary. Says Stephen T. Mather, director of the national park service, in his 1923 annual report to the secretary of the Interior:

In common with the majority of the other national parks, Glacier experienced her most successful season, enjoying more patronage than in any previous year, 25,913 visitors having registered in the park as compared with 23,986 visitors in 1922. This is only a forerunner of a tremendous increase in travel that is certain to take place the completion of the Transmountain Road, now in its third year of construction. Motorists traveling the northern highways to Glacier never had a direct route across the Continental Divide, this barrier requiring a detour of several hundred miles to the south. The Transmountain Road, crossing the Continental Divide through Logan Pass, will, aside from furnishing a direct means of traversing the mountains, attract thousands of motorists by its unsurpassed scenic qualities.

This is good as far as it goes, but the situation may be made plainer by a more detailed explanation of Glacier's hard luck in the matter of automobile highways. An attendance of only 33,988 for a first-class national park like Glacier is a joke—and a bad one. But the reasons for this comparatively small attendance are easily found. A few years ago the bulk of the tourist travel to the national parks was by railroad. Now the bulk of it is by private car. The percentage varies. Contrasting examples: Rocky Mountain, in 1923, had 51,500 private cars in which probably more than 80 per cent of its 218,000 visitors traveled. Glacier had 5,999 private cars; not more than 50 per cent of its 33,988 visitors arrived by private car. This tells part of the story. Rocky Mountain is of no higher class than Glacier and is only about one quarter as large—400 square miles in the one and 1,539 in the other—but Rocky Mountain is the most easily accessible by automobile from the geographical and population center of the country of all the 19 national parks.

Another factor in the attendance comparison between Rocky Mountain and Glacier is this: Each park has an independent east and west entrance on either side of the Continental Divide, each entrance taking care of separate and distinct lines of automobile tourist travel. In Rocky Mountain the east and west entrances are Estes Park and Grand Lake. In Glacier they are Glacier Park and Belton. In Rocky Mountain the Fall River Road crosses the Continental Divide, connects Estes Park and Grand Lake and makes possible through travel, which otherwise would be impossible. In Glacier automobile tourist travel from both the east and west halts at the Continental Divide. The Great Northern, which serves Glacier and runs along the south line of the park, ameliorates the situation by maintaining daily shipments of motor cars between the two entrances. Unless motorists take advantage of this rail shipment they have to make a wide detour either through Montana—as far south as Helena—or through Canada.

What the Fall River Road does for Rocky Mountain the Transmountain Road will do for Glacier. Here is what the 1923 reports say of the progress of the work:

Work on the second section of the Transmountain Road on the west side was begun and about six miles, extending from the end of the first section at the head of Lake McDonald, up McDonald Creek to above Avalanche Creek, will be finished this fall (1923). Also a contract has been let for the construction of eight or nine miles, on the east side, including the construction of a bridge across the St. Mary River, extending from St. Mary Chalet along the north shore of St. Mary Lake toward Going-to-the-Sun Chalet. With construction under way on both sides of the Continental Divide, the Transmountain Road can be pushed with more speed to completion.

And here is a glimpse into the future that promises all kinds of things for Glacier: It will be only a short time before the Bab-I-International Boundary Road is improved. This road runs through the Blackfoot Indian reservation adjoining Glacier on the east and will connect with the Canadian National parks highway system. The National Park-to-Park Highway, which connects all the western national parks, is in full operation and getting better every season. The Banff-Windermere Highway across the Canadian Rockies, opened last year, makes direct connection with the National Park-to-Park Highway at Spokane, Wash.

With the Bab-I-International Boundary Road and the Transmountain Road completed, Glacier will offer much to automobile tourists. Any car owner in the United States or Canada can easily reach Glacier, either to stay or go on. The entire scenic West, American and Canadian, will be open to him. When Glacier comes to its own, its attendance will jump up amazingly. And what it gains it will keep, for its visitors have a habit of going back year after year. Glacier has its devotees, just as have Rocky Mountain in Colorado and Yosemite in California. Yellowstone, oldest, biggest and most famous of all our 19 national parks, has been lacking in this our date.

Take Mary Roberts Rinehart—nature lover, outdoor woman, novelist and nature writer—she's an example. She has been much in Glacier. And here is the way Glacier got her. Her enthusiasm induced her to write an "Appreciation of Glacier" for publicity purposes. And here's what she says, in part:

There are no "Keep Off the Grass" signs in Glacier National Park. It is the wildest part of America. It is perhaps the most unique of all our parks, as it is undoubtedly the most magnificent. Here the Rocky Mountains run north-west and southeast, and in the glacier-carved basins are great spaces; cool, shadowy depths in which the blue lakes and mountain-side threads with white, where, from some hidden lake or glacier far above, the overflow falls a thousand feet or more, and over all the great silence of the Rockies. Here is the last home of a vanishing race—the Blackfoot Indians. Here is the last stand of the Rocky Mountain sheep and the Rocky Mountain goat; here are elk, deer, black and grizzly bears, and mountain lions. Here are trails that follow the old game trails along the mountain side; here are meadows of June roses, forget-me-not, larkspur, and Indian paintbrush growing beside glaciers, snowfields and trails of a beauty to make you gasp. But there is no voice in all the world so insistent to me as the wordless call of these mountains. I shall go back. Those who go once always hope to go back. The lure of the great free spaces is in their blood.

One can imagine without the slightest difficulty a throng of devotees of other national parks surrounding Mrs. Rinehart, bawling her out—in perfectly polite language, of course—and asking in unison: "How do you get that way, Mary?" And the babel, sifted out, interpreted and reduced to prosaic utterance, would contain these statements:

There's nothing in Glacier wilder than are areas in other parks. Glacier isn't "perhaps the most unique," nor is it "undoubtedly the most magnificent." Other parks have "glacier-carved basins," lakes, glaciers, falls, wild animals and flowers. Yellowstone beats all the parks—except possibly Mount McKinley—for wild animal life. Rocky Mountain probably has more mountain sheep than Glacier. Mount Rainier is the champion "Wild Flower Park." The Blackfoot are a liability rather than an asset, inasmuch as they slaughter relentlessly the park game on the east side of the Continental Divide is gradually being wiped out. Glacier's highest mountain, Mount Cleveland, is only 10,438 feet; Rocky Mountain has 43 between 10,000 and 14,255 feet.

Getting down to the really unique features of the National park system, this is what we find:

The Yellowstone contains more and greater geysers than all the rest of the world together.

Mount Rainier's single-peak system with 23 living glaciers has no equal.

Crater Lake occupies the hole left after a large volcano had slipped back into earth's interior through its own rim; it is the deepest and bluest accessible lake in the world.

The Sequoia contains more than a million "Big Trees," 12,000 of which are more than 10 feet in diameter; some are more than 30 feet in diameter and are the largest and oldest living things of earth.

Hawaii National Park contains the largest living volcano in the world. Mauna Loa; and Kilauea, continuously active for a century, with its Lake of Fire, which draws visitors from all the world.

Mount McKinley is scientifically the world's loftiest mountain, since it rises more than 20,000 feet above sea level and 17,000 feet above its surrounding valleys.

Mesa Verde contains the most notable and best preserved prehistoric cliff dwellings in the United States, if not in the world.

Grand Canyon, earth's largest and noblest example of erosion, gorgeously carved and colored, is one of the natural wonders of the world.

Curiously enough, Mrs. Rinehart omitted mention of the one feature that, in the opinion of many, does entitle Glacier to a place among the unique national parks—its "Lewis Overthrust" and the gorgeous coloration of its mountains. Zion National Park in Utah, Bryce Canyon in Utah, likely to be made the Utah National Park, and Grand Canyon probably surpass Glacier in coloration, but their colors are down in the depths, while Glacier's are flung up into the sky.

Now, don't be scared by the Lewis Overthrust. Here's briefly what the geologists mean by the term: The rock nearest the center of the earth is called Archean and the geologists know very little about it. The next oldest strata are the Algonkian, which were laid as an ocean bottom sediment something like 80,000,000 years ago. It is this Algonkian group that are exposed in Glacier; nowhere in the world are they displayed in such area, profusion and variety and in such magnitude of coloring.

These Algonkian rocks lie in four differently-colored strata, all of which the Glacier visitor may see for himself. The lowest is the Altyn limestone, about 1,600 feet thick. It weathers a pale buff. There are whole yellow mountains of this on the eastern edge of Glacier. Next above lies a stratum of Appukunay argillite, or green shale, about 3,400 feet thick. It weathers every possible shade of dull green. Next above that lie about 2,200 feet of Grinnell argillite or red shale. It weathers every possible shade of deep red and purple. On top is about 4,000 feet of Sibley limestone, gray and running in places to yellow. Horizontally through the middle of this limestone is a broad dark band called the diorite intrusion.

Now, when these brilliantly colored strata were thrust up from the bottom of the sea, they were practically level. Then there came a gigantic squeeze. The strata yielded in long irregular, wave-like folds. Finally they cracked and then broke. One broken edge, the western, was thrust upward and over the other. This western edge was thousands of feet thick. It overlapped the eastern edge ten to fifteen miles.

This is the Lewis (Range) Overthrust. It is this overthrust that accounts for the inconceivably tumbled character of the vast rocky masses. There is a sag where the park lies. A horizontal line drawn straight across Glacier would pass through the bottom of the Altyn limestone on the east and west boundaries and in the middle of the park through the top of the Sibley limestone. It would cut diagonally through the green and red shales on both sides of the Continental Divide.

The uninformed tourist doubtless says to himself, as he heads the flatter west, "Three fine national parks in a row—Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Glacier. All three in the Rockies and on the Continental Divide. Probably all much alike. See one and I've seen them all."

That shows the necessity of the campaign of education that the federal government and the National Parks association and many out-of-door organizations are waging to get the American people to see their national parks with understanding, as well as emotionally.

For Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Glacier are essentially different. Rocky Mountain is lofty granite, a most astonishing aggregation of lofty peaks and beautiful valleys perched on the top of the Continental Divide. Yellowstone is volcanic, with volcanic activities everywhere in evidence. Glacier is sedimentary rock, twisted and jumbled and gorgeously colored.

Congress has just passed an act authorizing the making of a budget for road building purposes in the national parks, carrying a total of $7,500,000 over three years. If funds are appropriated, Glacier's tentative allotment is $1,000,000. This would doubtless hurry the Transmountain Road to completion. Speed the day!

VETERAN JUDGE GIVES FACTS IN HIS CASE

Honorable A. P. Tarbox, distinguished lawyer and judge, residing at 217 West 23rd St., University Place, Neb., lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac, the famous treatment that has proved of such great benefit to him.

"If anybody knows what Tanlac will do," recently said Judge Tarbox, "it is me, for the medicine has kept me on my feet and able to work for the past two years."

Judge Tarbox has been a member of the bar since early manhood and has practiced law in Illinois, Nebraska and Oklahoma for more than a half century. He is a charter member of Faragut Post, Lincoln, G. A. R., and also prominent in fraternal order circles. Speaking further of his experience with Tanlac, Judge Tarbox said: "Stomach trouble had been the bane of my existence even before the Civil War. Indigestion such as I had is about the worst enemy a person could have, and it kept getting worse all the time."

"I simply could not have kept going the past two years if it had not been for Tanlac. It made my weak stomach sound and wholesome, did away with all signs of indigestion and built me up in a way I had thought impossible. In fact, Tanlac has brought me health, strength and happiness when I was sick and suffering, so I have every

Poison Ivy

Zonite is a specific in the treatment of poison ivy. Although this affliction is rarely serious in itself, it is most irritating and there is great danger of infection wherever the skin is broken. Zonite not only relieves the inflammation and irritation in a remarkably short time, but also keeps the skin in a safely disinfected condition. If at all susceptible to poison ivy, you should not be without a bottle of Zonite. Your druggist has it in bottles—fifty cents and one dollar.

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress.

Fairy tales and fish tales are resending each other more and more these days.

What the South needs now is a variety of cotton that is freeze and frost proof.

Those Mobilians want their liquor and Mr. Volstead will have to go and come again before he stops them from having it.

Mr. Coolidge and all of the country are passing the Mellon tax and other day and passed the Mellon tax plus its democratic amendments.

Horses "Knicker", Mules Knicker and Jackasses "Knicker" and it seems like we have heard of some other kind of "Knickers" too.

We bet a dime there is not a lawyer in Alabama who can tell you which is the law making department of our state—the legislature or the Supreme Court.

We feel just like the holding convention in New York in June is going to down the democratic party to at least 25 years in the also to class.

Did you ever stop and figure out how infinitesimally small and narrow a man is who allows his political affiliation to influence his estimate of or friendship for his neighbor?

When all of the pulpits in the country cease to be rostrums of apologetics and go to preaching the naked truth we look for a decided improvement in our social conditions.

This afternoon the Clanton base ball team is going up against the real thing and if they get beat it will be no discredit for they are meeting real base ball veterans this time.

When songs, music titles and magazine covers become so vulgar that they can not be sent through the mails and have to be circulated by express, their popularity is assured.

Poor old Alabama is ashamed of herself for being betrayed by her supposed friends and getting out of the "Solid South" this time. Our people are all right but our last legislature was punk.

It is highly probable, we understand that plans have about been completed for the letting of the other 17 miles of our highway project and this will be advertised in the very near future.

We saw a mule Saturday in the latest fashion. It had its knee painted and dumpled—painted with red mud and dimpled where the little rocks had broken the hide. It slipped down and caught on its knees.

There is no part of the constitution that seems to be either remembered or recognized these days except the 18th amendment. But that's all right for the whole power of the government can't enforce that one clause.

The fate, happiness and prosperity of the people of this great land has become only a political pawn in the hands of politicians. You can't point to one simple honest and unselfish statesman playing the game today.

When Volstead, Bryan and Co. make it a hanging crime to make or sell whiskey, the bootlegger will almost amass a fortune overnight. The price will go up and the manufacturer and sale will go on just the same.

In this day and time it is neither profitable nor popular for people to openly condemn certain social sins, for the devil has got his spot light on the situation and his screen shows terrible pictures of decency and righteousness.

When a business man begins to lose money the first thing he does is to cut expenses. When the government adds on expensive political machines until they can not travel, do they ever reduce expenses? Not on your life. They add on more taxes and the people meet the bills.

CHANGES COMING

In our opinion it will be a good while Alabama elects another legislature that will be in the same class of the last three.

We feel like the people are becoming better informed along political and that these lobby ridden and combinations that have been in Montgomery and in time to political machine will be rigidly retired. We have been suffering from entirely too much law making with the utter needful and constructive. We need hundreds of abolishing bills wiped off and a few real laws in their stead.

During the many years of our active life we have seen a good many things tried out where individuals and even states have kinder gone snooks with the Federal government on different enterprises and we have yet to learn of one that was even a dimmed success.

There is one thing that is true as we write, and that is, that the Federal government when once associated with any kind of an enterprise never turns loose and never relinquishes the real control of that enterprise.

They may make any kind of deal they please, but when they put any cash in to it, you bet your life, they will always hold the reins and do the driving. The life of one congress is too short to depend on and the very next one that is elected will proceed to "investigate" all monies gone, or going out, with the result, that so many new and unthought of strings will be tied to an enterprise that all outside parties will be excluded.

This Federal aid school bill that is before Congress now has swept the whole country off its feet and it will be no satisfaction, or there doubtless go through. As we view of doubt, upon the part are individually concerned, that is, as to the future of the nation, we are all right with us, for our day is in the ratings or are nearly numbered and we will hardly be here when the real trouble comes.

We have the law making on paper far as the South is concerned it will be one of the most elaborate laws in the history of the world. The idea prevails with a large number of people that when you get a variety of the Federal Government is just in that much. It is not the Federal government that is the trouble, it is the money on the high seas. You realize it or not. Tariff taxes and internal revenue taxes don't ever show up on your clothing and grocery bill, but believe us, they are always included and Uncle Sam always get it.

If you are going to furnish this Federal aid money, why not keep it at home in the first place? Every Southern state is able to take its own children and unless they want to reap unheard of troubles and aggravations ahead, they better attend to the job at hand, and leave Uncle Sam entirely out of the game. Some of you people who differ with us stick this prediction away in your memory and sometime in the future you will find that "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own land."

THE FEDERAL CHILD LABOR BILL

Of all of the revolutionary proposals for law making the Bryce Child Labor Bill takes the cake.

For pure assinine imbecility it can't be beat. Even the crudest debating society in existence would refuse to discuss a question so totally made up of absurdity.

It proposes to prohibit the parent, or any one else, from employing a child male or female, at any kind of labor until it reaches the age of 18 years.

It is unthinkable that the Congress would allow such a piece of, blatant policy as that to consume enough of their time as required in the first reading of the bill. The author should rather have been arrested and placed in an asylum for the criminal insane.

If that law were passed and put in to operation every prison in the land would have to be enlarged at least ten times its present dimensions, for when you turn all of the boys, to say nothing of the girls, over into a life of idleness until they are 18 years of age, over half of them will gravitate naturally into criminality and find their way to prison.

"An idle brain is the devil's workshop," and with that many idle brains to work on he would have hell running over with tenants before he could enlarge the premises.

The fellow who introduced this bill must be some slab-sided penurious old bachelor, who has soured on the world in general and mankind in particular, but we are not going to let him get away with them and there is no normal basis is moving now with increasing regularity. He has decided to quit begging and to work.

VERBENA HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

Verbena High School closed its first session as an accredited institution Monday evening May 19, when six graduates were presented their diplomas. The Methodist church was well filled with friends of the school and of the seniors, who had come to wish them good luck on their journey into the highway, and to hear the address delivered by Dr. J. S. Thomas, Director of Extension of the University of Alabama.

Friday evening the Senior play "putting it over" was played to a full house in the school auditorium, and was a source of thorough enjoyment to all present. It was one of the cleverest in theme and in presentation that has ever been put on in Verbena. The Class of '24 will always be remembered for its dramatic talent, it having been before the people in many splendid productions.

Sunday morning Rev. Henry C. Cowan of Citronelle, Ala., preached the commencement sermon. His text was the first verse of the twelfth chapter of Romans, and his theme was "Consecration." He brought his message in forceful eloquent words, pleading earnestly for the young people just passing out of the high school life to hold fast to right, virtuous life, always keeping in touch with the Master in service.

Monday morning the Class exercises were held in the church auditorium. A short welcome address was made by William H. Deramus, class president. The following program was rendered: Piano solo, Sarah Maude Pattillo; Salutatory, Crayton L. Norris; Quartette, "I Never Knew" Sarah Maude Pattillo, Virginia Scott, William Deramus, Adelbert Norris, Class Prophecy, Jannie Allen; Piano solo, Dolphus Harris; Class Poem, Mary Stonecipher; Class History, Paul B. Damsby; Crumbings of the Class, Dolphus Harris; Vocal solo, "Can't Remember," Mary Stonecipher; Class Will, Crayton Norris; Class Song.

Exercises were opened Monday evening by a piano duet, Virginia Scott, Sarah Maude Pattillo, followed by a vocal solo, "Homing" by Mrs. P. F. Mitchell. The Valedictory was well delivered by William H. Deramus. Misses Parnell and Allen furnished a piano duet. The speaker of the evening Dr. J. S. Thomas, in his usual brilliant manner held the entire interest of the audience in a fifty minute address, so very pertinent to the occasion and to the mounting school interest that is being felt in Verbena. The school and community feels itself very fortunate in having secured the services of Dr. Thomas as well as those of Reverend Cowan.

Diplomas were delivered the following graduates by the principal of the school, Prof. W. E. G. Sutton: Jannie Estella Allen; Paul Barnett Damsby; William Henry Deramus; Dolphus Watson Harris; Crayton Lee Norris; Mary Helen Stonecipher.

Miss Zula Parnell presented her music classes in the annual recital Tuesday evening at the Community House.

The program was replete with interest and showed well the individual talent and the careful training they had received.

The committee on raising funds for the erection of a modern consolidated high school building is daily in the field canvassing, and is meeting with splendid success. The building will be started at an early date, and will be of the one story type, eight class rooms, laboratory, manual training room, home economics room, and auditorium to seat over five hundred people. The entire citizenship is to be congratulated on the manner in which they are visualizing the future needs of the school as well as their whole-hearted way they are cooperating in the financing the affair. By the time of opening school next fall it is hoped that the building will be ready for use, and such a one that for the needs of the district will be second to none in the state.

DANCE AT EXCHANGE HOTEL. Last Thursday night after the performance of the Sylacauga Hawaiians at the auditorium, they adjourned to the Exchange Hotel where a few Terp sychorean devotees assembled and tripped the "light fantastic toe" until some thing near midnight.

A very lively and enjoyable time seemed to result and the spacious Hotel dining room was a merry scene for a few brief hours.

Mr. O. W. Wells, one of the upright and true citizens of Jemison was here Saturday.

The interesting figures quoted below were taken from the latest available statistics of the National Safety Council, and substantiate in a most convincing way the statement made in the headline of this advertisement. Read them carefully and then decide for yourself that 57,646,281 passengers were carried by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad during the past year and not one was killed in a train accident, according to figures published by the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the year 1923, there were 13,434 passengers who used trains of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and only a negligible few sustained even slight injuries.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, protected by the services of the latest improved and manned by carefully-trained competent employees, and administered by officers who have earned their positions through years of experience, ranks as one of the safest railroads in America. Automatic block signals have been installed on a part of the line of the L. & N. Railroad, and the year in extending the block system, and nearly one half million dollars has been appropriated for immediate installation of automatic control devices, which mechanically regulate speed of trains according to signal indications.

Latest available figures show that an average of 206 American citizens are killed by accidents every day in the year. Of this number, automobiles take much the heaviest toll—averaging 88 deaths per day. Accidental falls rank second, with 35; drowning, third with 19; burning, fourth with 16—and so on down the line until the remarkably small average of fatalities on American railroads is a little over 1 per day is reached. The latter figure represents passengers and employees who were killed in collisions or derailments.

Constant vigilance on the part of the carriers who are safe on an American railroad train is the only way to prevent accidents.

"I Never Give My Children Calomel"

"I used to feel it necessary to give the children calomel or castor oil," said one mother to W. L. Hand "but it was such a distressing procedure that often I lost the courage to give the dose."

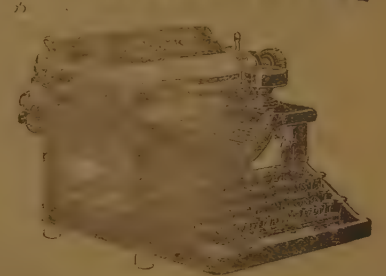

"And the children would just fret and fuss." "I bless the day that I learned of your Live-o-lax. I find that it will do the same work in bilious conditions as calomel and castor oil, and the children love to take it."

Live-o-lax, a vegetable liquid preparation, may be had at any drug store and may be relied upon for adults as well as children in cases of indigestion, biliousness, etc.

Avoid Using Castor Oil

—W. L. Hand.

Nobody likes to give or take castor oil. There is really hardly any use for it since the invention of Live-o-lax.

And Live-o-lax fills the place of castor oil. It has a marked action on the liver as well as the bowels. It can be used in children and when a cold is coming on. Literally hundreds of mothers have recently thanked me for putting this good remedy on the market.

Children love to take Live-o-lax and it is just as good for the same conditions as castor oil.

A bottle of Live-o-lax costs but 30c at any drug store.

A GENEROUS MOVEMENT

There is a movement going on all over the country to allow the clerks, bookkeepers and other help around the stores and other places of business a half holiday one day in every week.

We notice that the business people of Montgomery have requested a vote from their employed help as to which afternoon will suit them best, so they can accommodate the greatest number in selecting the day.

Our neighboring towns of Wetumpka and Sylacauga have already adopted a half holiday on every Thursday and other towns are arranging to have the same generous concession.

Clanton went on record two weeks ago, and we have already had two of the best ball games ever pulled off here and today we expect to have one that will class up in Big League company. The local boys are going to trim a Birmingham team this afternoon—or get trimmed.

The rural trade will soon get used to the Thursday afternoon closing, and we feel like they will be glad that these whole-souled "boss men" are giving their labor one half day rest without cost.

SINGING AT NEW PROSPECT

Last Sunday, over in Autauga county, at New Prospect Baptist church, an all day singing was held that was a success in every sense of the word.

An immense crowd was present. The very best of order prevailed and the music was beautiful beyond compare. A sumptuous dinner was served on the ground that amply took care of all present and the good ladies of that community won much praise and appreciation for the excellence of the repast.

The Directors were, W. M. DeVaughn, L. T. Grant, O. L. DeVaughn, Ralph Grant, E. A. Beard, Geo. Harris, Prof. Carter, Erby Holland, Henry Askins, and State Evangelist Farr from Marbury, who sang a beautiful solo and led two songs.

A quartette composed of O. L. DeVaughn, L. T. Grant, Ralph Grant and E. A. Beard rendered some excellent service that was greatly enjoyed.

Rev. J. E. George is pastor of this church and was present and helped them enjoy this great musical festival.

PRESIDENT SIGNS IMMIGRATION

Monday President Coolidge affixed his signature to the recently passed immigration bill, carrying with it the Japanese exclusive clause without change.

This splendid piece of legislation is now a law and will go in to effect July 1st.

The President was for a long time bitterly opposed to this measure and used all of his influence to defeat it in Congress, but the "voice from back home" was too strong for him to overcome, so the bill passed with such an overwhelming majority that he realized that his veto would be overthrown, so he decided to sign it under protest.

There has not been an act passed in recent years that means half as much for the material prosperity of our country as this immigration bill does, so far as the real people are concerned.

We were being flooded with a mongrel scum from the old countries, whose tendencies were all for evil, and whose existence over here has been an actual curse to America.

Now we look for a rest from this curse.

Mr. T. L. Lecroy and little son Baxter were in town Monday morning. Mr. Lecroy is a citizen of the Mulberry community. Few men in Chilton county have more civic pride than Mr. Lecroy. He is a good church, Sunday school worker and also one of the best men in the county when it comes to building up his local consolidated school.

Ticket sellers, gatemen, conductors, dining car stewards, waiters and porters are about the only employees of a railroad with whom you ever come in contact; yet, in the operation of a great transportation system, almost every trade and profession is represented.

In order to maintain the high standard of safety, comfort and satisfactory freight and passenger service which has long distinguished the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, more than 52,000 men and women each day perform some special and definite task.

Approximately 300 executives direct the operation of various departments; 7,000 clerks handle the mass of detail, records, figures, etc.; 12,400 track workers guard the safety of passengers; 18,800 mechanics and helpers keep the equipment in repair; while 2,600 brakemen and flagmen, 5,000 dispatchers, agents and others, 1,000 conductors, 8,400 engineers and firemen complete the list of active workers. To this number must be added construction engineers, lawyers, doctors, agricultural agents and other specialists—all of whom contribute to the sum total of successful railroad operation.

Remember that one out of every fifteen bread winners in the Nation is employed in the transportation industry, and that these employees are good citizens—an asset to any community.

JELLIED CITRUS PEEL IS GOOD ANY TIME

Cutting and Preparing Jellied Peel.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Jellied peel from grapefruit, oranges or lemons, sometimes referred to as "candied" or "crystallized" peel, is easy to make. If wrapped in waxed paper and kept tightly covered in tin or glass containers until used it will keep tender two or three weeks.

The following directions for making jellied peel are given by the United States Department of Agriculture, which has thoroughly tested the recipe. Jellied Grapefruit, Orange or Lemon Peel.

5 ounces of peel 1/4 teaspoonful salt
1 cupful granulated sugar for sirup (7 ounces) rolling strips a 1/2 cupful water (about 3 ounces) for sirup, or enough to cover

Thick, soft, unblemished peel from smooth rolling strips (about 3 ounces). Light-colored grapefruit skins are best for this purpose, since russet skins impart a dingy shade. Orange skins may be bright or pale in color, but should not be russet or spotted. Small oranges from which the juice has been squeezed may be further utilized in this way.

Cut the peel into strips 1/4 to 1/2 inch wide, or into inch squares, which are not so easily handled. Parboil three times, using one quart of cold water and boiling in a lightly covered pan for one-half hour each time, and discarding the water after each cooking. The strips should then be tender and must be handled gently to prevent breaking.

Place the water, salt and sugar for the sirup in a saucepan about 6 inches in diameter at the top and stir until the sugar is dissolved; then add the strips of peel, arranging carefully so that they lie parallel to each other, to prevent their being broken when turned. Place the pan over the flame. Cook the contents rapidly for about 20 minutes, then reduce the heat and continue to boil very gently for about 20 minutes longer, or until the sirup is all absorbed by the peel. Great care must be taken at this point that the sirup does not scorch, and the strips of peel must be lifted or turned frequently so that all are equally penetrated by the sirup. Use a fork in turning the strips and in removing them from the pan.

Keep for Weeks.

Place the peel on waxed paper and when cool roll the strips in granulated sugar, turning them carefully with a knife. Let them dry out for a few hours or over night, then wrap in waxed paper and keep in tightly covered tin or glass containers until used. If left in paper boxes they tend to become hard and crusty in winter or sticky in summer. However, they should keep in good condition for two or three weeks if properly stored in a moderately cool place.

The peel should be jellied through-out, translucent, thick, tender and juicy, not shrunken nor gummy; the skin should be soft and the outer coating of sirup in distinct crystals, not in a crust.

MARK CLOTHES WHEN PUTTING THEM AWAY

Use of Individual Boxes Will Simplify Matters.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If individual boxes are used from year to year to put clothes away in, there may be kept in or near each one a small roll of mending pieces belonging to the person whose clothes are in the box. If the scraps left over when a dress is cut out are stored in the right place at the time of cutting, patching or remodeling pieces may be found in a jiffy, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Millinery trimmings (feathers, ribbons, flowers, velvet pieces) should be stored in good condition, in a box by themselves, where they can be easily found if a hat must be unexpectedly freshened. Laces of different kinds can be wound on cards or otherwise put away, so that a glance will make the right piece accessible. Lining materials and old dress foundations which have further uses are best selected by themselves. Each housekeeper must evolve her own system, but if she aims to arrange the family clothing and materials in storage so that everything is readily found when wanted she serves the double purpose of saving much time and keeping the storage room in good order, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Wicker and Glass

A compact and useful little table is made of wicker, painted white, with two trays, glass covered and lined with cretanne, one above the other. A delightful piece of furniture for a child's room.

MAKING CORN BREAD WITH USE OF MILK

Two Ways of Mixing Outlined by Federal Experts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good corn bread may be made with either sweet or sour milk. The United States Department of Agriculture has found that in the sour-milk breads the method of mixing influences the texture. The first method described in this recipe, though longer than the second, yields bread of better texture.

Sour-Milk Corn Bread.

2 cupfuls corn-meal 1 1/2 teaspoonfuls salt
2 cupfuls sour milk 1 teaspoonful soda
2 tablespoonfuls butter 1 tablespoonful cold water

There are two ways of mixing this bread, which includes milk and eggs. By the first method the meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar are cooked in a double boiler for ten minutes. When the mixture is cool the eggs are added, well beaten, and the soda dissolved in the water.

By the other method all the dry ingredients, including the soda, are mixed together, and then the sour milk, the well-beaten eggs and the butter are added. If the second method is followed the cold water is not needed. The bread should be baked in a shallow iron or granite pan for 30 minutes.

Buttermilk may be substituted for the sour milk, in which case the butter should be increased slightly; or sour cream may be used and the butter omitted. This serves six persons.

Sweet Milk Corn Bread.

2 cupfuls yellow cornmeal 1/2 cupful sugar
1 cupful wheat flour 2 teaspoonfuls baking powder

Sift together the cornmeal, flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Add the well-beaten eggs and the milk, and bake for one-half hour in a moderate oven.

In this case, as in the recipe for sour milk corn bread, the cornmeal can be cooked for a short time with the milk if a softer bread is desired.

Use left-over coffee for mixing gingerbread or for gelatin desserts. Never warm it up for a beverage as the flavor of coffee lies in a volatile oil which soon goes after the coffee is made.

When setting a table place knives at the right of the plate, forks at the left and the spoon beyond the knives. Teaspoons for entrees and desserts, are placed when those courses are served.

RING SYMBOL OF FAITH AND POWER

In Olden Times Always Associated With Magic.

It needed no Aladdin story to assure the credulous that rings have mystical powers, which might be invoked by the initiate with the certainty that one of the genii will appear to do our bidding.

From time immemorial man (and especially woman) has adorned his person with all kinds of fetiches and charms, not only to add to his beauty of appearance, but very often to enhance his dignity, to impress others with his grandeur, wealth and power. Of all these ornaments the ring surpasses every other bijou, even the crown royal, which it actually outshines by its traditional power and quaint and varied symbolism.

In olden times it was more for its magic than for its beauty or value that the ring was worn. Rings innumerable have been preserved in national collections all over the world, have been among the treasure found by archaeologists in their excavations or garnered by collectors and connoisseurs. Some of these, entombed 5,000 years with Tut-Ankh-Amen, are eloquent witnesses of the highly developed art of their original period, and the artistic imagination of Egyptian craftsmen.

The ring has always been a symbol of faith and power. By his ring the Pharaoh invested Joseph with his authority.

Darius sealed with his ring the entrance to the lions' den, where Daniel spent a night. An almost infinite power was attributed to King Solomon's sealing ring, upon which was engraved that mysterious word, "Shemhamphorash."

By its magic, according to tradition, King Solomon was able to summon a demon who helped him to build the temple of Jerusalem, and every day carried the king up to the firmament where he learned to understand the secrets and wonders of the universe.

Ancient authors describe the celebrated ring of the Greek Polykrates, tyrant of Samos. This jewel was a large emerald, upon which were engraved a lyre, a bee, a bull's head and a dolphin. According to legends, Polykrates was so fortunate in everything he undertook that his friend, the king of Egypt, who was visiting him, warned him that this unprecedented luck would invite the envy of the gods, who never permit a mortal to be entirely happy.

"Beware the jealousy of the Immortals," warned the Egyptian, "and sacrifice to them whatever is dearest to you."

Polykrates, awed by the king's advice, took the ring, as being his most precious possession, and threw it into the sea, but next morning it was returned to him, discovered by the royal cook in a fish he was preparing for his master's luncheon.

Upon this proof that the gods would not accept the sacrifice from Polykrates, the king of Egypt left him, but history records that Polykrates was afterward slain in an uprising of his subjects.

A Child that Mopes Isn't a Well Child

—W. L. Hand.

A normal child wants to play. If the little one is sulky, listless and irritable, something is amiss. First off, the child needs a laxative. But mothers are so often disappointed when the favorite laxative fails to restore the youngster's spirits. This is because there is a bilious condition usually and the laxative used hasn't the needed effect on a sluggish liver.

My preparation, Liv-o-lax, was made to answer this frequent need. While it has been used for years, it has never been better. It is just as pleasant to take as any of the usual children's laxatives. It isn't a bit drastic, causes no distress and the children love to take it. Liv-o-lax is available at your own drug store and is just as effective for adults as it is for children.

NEW AGRICULTURAL ERA FORECAST

Montgomery, Ala.—(Special)—What agricultural economists regard as the possible beginning of a new era in Southern farming was inaugurated recently when the converted steam plant owned by the Alabama Power Company and dedicated by them to the cause of boll weevil control began production of calcium arsenate according to the newly discovered process of electrolytic precipitation. Officials of the Gulf States Chemical & Refining Company, operators of the plant, expressed themselves as delighted with the first day's production of three tons which, according to J. A. Moore, President of the Company, is sufficient to exterminate or control the boll weevil on 1,200 acres of cotton. "The first day's production," said Mr. Moore, "is but a fraction of the daily capacity which will be delivered when the plant is under full operating control and manufacturing processes become synchronized."

The manufactured product is said to equal in every way that prepared by the inventors using laboratory methods and is of such purity that it may be used not only as a boll weevil destroyer but on fruit trees, in gardens and on other plants which formerly required lead arsenate, a more expensive insecticide but one less harsh than calcium arsenate produced by former methods.

The electrolytic process was discovered two years ago by A. M. Kennedy, at that time a member of the engineering staff of the Alabama Power Company and a former close associate of Thomas A. Edison in chemical work. Mr. Kennedy became impressed with the need of an adequate supply of a poison which would facilitate boll weevil extermination or control. Calcium arsenate, is considered to be the only effective poison yet discovered for the South's cotton scourge, but its manufacture by old methods was cumbersome and the resulting product was not uniform and frequently contained traces of free acid which burned the plants. Mr. Kennedy had spent the greater portion of his life in the study of electrochemistry and conceived the idea of producing calcium arsenate by electrolysis to yield a product free from harmful ingredients and of specific composition. He acquainted officials of the Alabama Power Company with his ideas and received their enthusiastic support. President Thomas W. Martin placing at his disposal all necessary resources for carrying out the work.

Mr. Kennedy perfected the principles of his process, later enlisting the aid of Dr. Stowers J. Loyd, head of the Department of Chemistry at the University of Alabama, who assisted him in making his ideas practicable. Numerous experiments were performed in the State, and later the Power Company secured the cooperation of the General Electric Company who extended to the inventors the facilities of their laboratories at Schenectady where the Kennedy-Loyd process, as it is now known, was perfected.

Realizing the immediate need for tremendously increased production of calcium arsenate in the South, and wishing to place a superior product at once in the hands of the farmers, the inventors, through the influence of Power Company officials, enlisted the aid of J. A. Moore, Jr., President of the Gulf States Chemical and Refining Company who agreed to bring about practical application of their discovery.

Immediate action was necessary to bring out the new product in sufficient quantity to combat the boll weevil during the season of 1924, and realizing the futility of attempting to construct a new plant in time to produce the poison during this year, Mr. Moore some months ago appealed to the Power Company who placed at the disposal of his concern, free of charge for a period of years, a steam plant with full equipment which had been acquired by the Alabama Power Company at the time the Montgomery utilities were taken over. Then followed a period of feverish work in which forces of the Power Company joined hands with those of the Chemical concern in the task of converting the plant from a power producer to a boll weevil death-mill. Conversion was completed recently and the smoothness of performance in producing today's output is ample evidence of the thoroughness of the transformation.

J. A. Moore, President of the Gulf States Company, explained that it is the purpose of his Company to develop further the production of calcium arsenate and other arsenical insecticides through their research department in such manner that production costs can be materially lowered, all of which will react to the ultimate good of the Southern farmer and orchardist. "The location of this plant in Montgomery," said Mr. Moore, "insures Southern cotton growers of a source for immediate supply of practically any quantity of calcium arsenate they may wish. Shipping facilities are good as the Gulf States Chemical and Refining Company's plant is served by several roads. Distribution has been established, and there are enough orders already on hand to keep the plant operating full capacity for several weeks ahead."

A. M. Kennedy, inventor of the process paid high tribute to the Alabama Power Company who, he said, by providing facilities for perfecting the process and in donating the use of the factory and equipment have given to the South its greatest asset in controlling the boll weevil.

How Montevallo Campaign Fund From Drive Will Be Expended

Detailed plans for the distribution of the million dollars which the Alabama College is going to realize from its drive for funds, have been worked out by officials of the college. They include many features which should prove interesting to the mothers and fathers of daughters throughout the State.

The following list of immediate needs of the college which was given out by the trustees will give an idea of the extent of the proposed expansion:

Dormitory and furnishings for four to five hundred students; auditorium and administration offices; academic building and equipment; social religious building; president's residence; gymnasium; two practice homes; dormitory and furnishings for teachers; addition to music building.

Enrollment for 1923-24 was 427 students; 1923-24, 659; approximately 300 students will have to be turned away in 1924 after every available room, including the temporary dormitory, has been filled. A dormitory for 400 students would be filled during the session 1924-25.

Need for Auditorium and Offices.

The present auditorium is inadequate even for seating the present student body. The seats are very poor, the building is old, and it was never designed for the student body or for the artists' concerts and lectures which are held each year by the institution. An auditorium is sorely needed.

For office space, the president, dean, with two secretaries, registrar, and bookkeeper of the college occupy three small rooms in the main dormitory. There is only one place for private conference to be used by the entire administration force. For lack of space, the records are housed in a room almost a block away from the administration offices. This arrangement handicaps seriously effective work of the executive organization.

Need for Academic Building.

The class rooms for the academic courses are scattered from one end of the campus to the other. It is often difficult to find rooms for all the classes that must meet at a particular hour. The teachers have no offices or places where they can meet with students in conference. While they are not holding classes themselves, other classes are being held in their class rooms and hence it is impossible for the teachers to hold necessary conferences with their students. This situation makes it imperative that something be done to provide an adequate academic building.

Need for a Social Building.

The college clubs are forced to use old cottages on the campus and off the campus for their places of meeting. Many of the clubs have no places at all in which to meet. Large organizations such as the student body, the Y. W. C. A., the Technical Staff, the Alumnae Association, and the Newspaper Staff have no adequate places for carrying on their work. The

MUSICAL

Mrs. Jatie L. Middleton, of Clanton, Alabama presented her pupils in a varied musical program at the High School Auditorium on Friday night, May 16, the recital continuing for about one hour and a half. All the seats and standing room of the auditorium was occupied to its fullest capacity and many people were turned away unable to find standing room. On the program were various numbers including vocal and instrumental talent and varying from young musicians of extreme tender age to several elderly married people. The program was the conclusion of a years work and showed decided accomplishments on the part of the pupils as well as inspiration and training on the part of Mrs. Middleton. The numbers were not too prolix but sufficiently long enough to demonstrate to the attentive audience the talents of each pupil.

The decoration and scenery and stage settings too exhibited in its beauty and suitability for the several numbers, considerable work and the feature of the recital was the appearance of Mildred White Wallace of Columbiana, Alabama, a composer and singer of quite extensive fame in two vocal numbers of her own composition, "I will hold you in My parlors in the main dormitory are entirely inadequate for the uses of the student body and faculty. There is no suitable place for holding the religious services which are held on Sunday and Wednesday nights of each week. For all these purposes a separate building is sorely needed. This building should be the center of the social and religious life of the institution and no institution can properly develop without a building such as this.

Need for a Home for the President.

The president of the institution has for three years been without a home. His home was burned in the spring of 1921. Since that time he and his family have been domiciled in the college infirmary without privacy, without the necessities of home life. A most pressing need of the institution is a home for the president and his family.

Need for a Gymnasium.

Every student who attends Alabama College must take physical education. Hundreds of them engage in games of all kinds. For the physical education work and for the various games which are a necessary part of the recreation of students, a gymnasium building is badly needed. The present building is not half large enough for a single basketball court and not one-third large enough for class instruction. For the proper physical development of the students the institutions must have a well equipped gymnasium.

Need for Home Economics Practice

There is only one practice home which can be used by the students in this department. A necessary part of their course is a term in the practice home for the purpose of making practical application of the work which they learn in textbooks, lecture-room and laboratories. This department is seriously handicapped. At least two more practice homes will be required for the courses which are being given.

Need for a Teachers' Home.

It is obvious that if the teachers are to do their best work they must be comfortably situated. The town of Montevallo is very small and does not provide adequate boarding places for the teachers. The result is they must occupy the student dormitories, have no dormitory of their own. The latter plan deprives them of the point of view of the students and teachers, and it is proposed that one of the first uses of the funds be the erection of a dormitory for teachers.

Need for an Addition to Music Building.

One of the most handsome buildings of the State is Calkins Hall at Alabama College. It is used exclusively for music instruction. It is scarcely more than half large enough for the present demands of the music department. Classes and practice sessions must use other rooms in the dormitory and elsewhere. The present building was constructed with a view to additions. This should be made at once in order to take care of the immediate demands of the students who desire music instruction.

Arms, and also Good night, Sweet Dreams Enfold You." Mrs. Wallace has composed several famous pieces, probably the most noted is "Little Cherry Blossoms." Another feature of the program was a Violin Ensemble by Mesdames Saxon, Taylor, Hendrick, and Miss Leslie Polk, accompanied by Mildred White Wallace all of Columbiana.

Mrs. Middleton is quite an accomplished teacher and instructress in piano and violin and has taught music throughout central Alabama. Mrs. Middleton is thoroughly versed with the art of teaching having had several years experience as well as excellent training herself, and through her recital exhibited her ability to bring out the best of musical talent in her pupils.

The community is well pleased with the progress made in the music line of the last year and we trust that Mrs. Middleton will see fit to remain with us through the coming seasons.

Thirty years ago if a young man had taken the liberties with a decent girl anywhere that he takes with them now on the ball room floor, a double barreled shot gun, loaded with buck shot, would have been looking for him in deadly earnest as soon as it was known.

CONGRESS STANDS PAT

President Coolidge and administration leaders have surrendered to the insistent demands of 80,000,000 patriotic American citizens, as voiced by a majority of the members of both branches of Congress, and will sign the immigration bill, which passed both Houses by overwhelming majorities. The 1890 census and Japanese exclusion features of the measure will not be changed. This information comes from authentic sources, and the President is expected to approve the bill at any moment.

When the President affixes his signature to this bill and it becomes law it will be great victory for the patriots in Congress, who refused to bend to Secretary Hughes wishing to amend the bill to grant the State Department power to exclude Japanese by treaty and not by law. At one time President Coolidge was on the verge of disapproving the bill, after the enemies of Americanism began to bring pressure to bear from one side and Mr. Hughes brought pressure from the other side, insisting that approval of the Japanese exclusion clause would seriously hamper diplomatic and commercial relations with Japan.

The present Congress is the greatest in the history of the world was proven on frequent occasions during the past few months. The patriotic congressmen and senators proved to the world that they held Americanism above everything, and that when the question of Americanism and devotion to the flag is at stake parties are of a secondary consideration.

Wall Street, foreign governments, religious and alien interests of every description brought every pressure to bear upon Congress to force it to desert Americanism for capitalism and hyphenism, but to no avail. The little band of patriots on "The Hill" stood off the onslaughts of the combined armies of Americanism and deserved party ties without hesitation and went down the line for Americanism.

The temper of Congress burst forth when it cast aside party alignments and passed the soldier's bonus and then repassed it over the President's veto in the face of a flood of telegrams from Wall Street and its agents scattered all over the country.

Previous to that it overwhelmingly passed the immigration bill, and when the Secretary of State brought pressure upon the President and caused the conferees to insert the Japanese treaty clause it repudiated party ties and insisted upon retaining its right to determine who shall be permitted to enter this country and who shall be excluded from our borders.

Administration leaders, after frequent conferences with government officials, became alarmed over the possibility of strained relations with Japan should the bill be approved, and made a canvass of both houses to let them out on the question of a veto. They learned that should the American immigration bill be vetoed Congress would override the veto without any difficulty.

This information was taken to the White House and reports were current in official circles that Mr. Coolidge would sign the bill within a short time. He has until midnight Thursday to sign or veto the bill. If he does not act on it by then the bill will automatically become a law without his signature.

The "Trinity of Americanism" is about to be realized for the first time in the history of our country. Two of the most patriotic bills in history have been approved by Congress—the soldiers' bonus, which is now a law, and the 1890 census immigration act, and the third part of the "Trinity of Americanism" will come to pass if the present Congress adopts an education bill, which will provide federal recognition of the public-school system of our country and the creation of a department of education free from the Bureau of Public Welfare, and grant this important question of Americanism membership in the President's cabinet.

Friends of the education bill are working on "The Hill" to force the committee on education to report out the Sterling-Reed bill with amendments that will make it less objectionable to its many friends, formidable to its many enemies.—Fellowship Forum.

SAXAPHONE QUARTETT

WHEN PEOPLE MARRY

On Monday night last the famous Vaughn Saxaphone Quartett, gave a performance at the High School auditorium which was a howling success from every angle.

These popular and versatile entertainers make us an annual visit and grow in friends and favor every time they come. They always draw an overflow audience and always send them home happier and with an added esteem for these high class, clean and competent musical entertainers.

Monday night was no exception to the rule, for long before the hour for the curtain to rise the large auditorium was overflowing and many anxious attendants had to retrace their steps homeward, sadly disappointed because they arrived a few minutes late.

Both the instrumental and vocal parts of the program were especially entertaining and round after round of applause greeted the participants while many numbers were encored over and over.

Clanton and community will always welcome the Vaughns and be glad when they come and sorry to see them go.

Concert was held under the auspices of the ladies of the Baptist church. The receipts at the door amounted to $159.00.

MEETING CLOSES

The series of meetings that were in progress all of last week at the Methodist church, closed Sunday night. Rev. Rice, of Opelika, who was assisting the pastor, did some splendid preaching and will be pleasantly remembered by the good people of Clanton.

FROM SYLACAUGA

Editor: Please allow me a small space in the paper to tell the people of Clanton and vicinity that they need a cotton mill and such it will build up their town. I am a Chilton county boy though am working at a cotton mill and know that if it was not for the cotton mills, Sylacauga would be as dead as Lomax, and that is the way Clanton will go if they don't get some large industrial plants there.

The Dams on the river are about completed and I don't see where Clanton is going to get its trade in the far future.

Listen, friends, would it not be nice for Clanton to have a $30,000 pay day every two weeks? The only way for you to do this is for you Chilton county people to put your shoulder to the wheel and do all you can to bring some large industry to Clanton. It will help the merchants and all the farmers, for it will give to the farmers a ready market for every kind of product that they can raise.

It is said, you know that cotton mill people are the only class of people who spend money like it was made to spend. If you can locate a large mill there like this one, it will be of more benefit to the whole county than anything you can imagine. If you people object to this kind of an industry coming to Clanton you ought to have to live for a living.

DEWEY BROADHEAD

Some how or other we can't get away from the old idea that marriage is a sacred ordinance and that it really means something.

When one promises in the sight of God and the witnesses who may be present, to "forsake all others and to cleave only to" the chosen one beside them, it sounds to us just like a very sacred promise had been made and that to all decent, honest and honorable people it would carry some weight.

We believe that a sacred bond has been solemnly established between the two contracting parties and that its observance is necessary if marital happiness is desired. To our mind this bond carries with it certain very important stipulations and duties.

Marriage is not intended to bar either party from enjoying the social side of life, and is not intended to make a recluse nor a slave out of either party. But it is expected to change the relations of both parties to other people with whom they are thrown socially. Neither one of them has the right to flirt or be flirted with by members of the opposite sex, they never do this, neither can do so, without violating the most sacred tenets intended to be protected by marriage.

To our mind, no married man nor woman has the right to be in the arms of any member of the opposite sex under any circumstances whatever, unless mortal danger threatens and a rescue from death or injury is taking place.

Cesar said that his "wife must live above suspicion" and he was right. That is the sphere for a real wife or real husband to live in if they wish to enjoy the very best there is in this mundane existence. A wife or husband like that is the greatest and most precious blessing that can ever wait on us here.

Marry seriously and for love and then remember every day, every where and under all circumstances that you are married and that you owe your allegiance before God to each other and guide your daily life, and every action in the shadow of this remembrance and blighted homes will be only a horrid memory and the divorce courts will close their doors for good.

OUR DUMB BRUTES

In almost every town and city the law against cruelty to animals is enforced more or less.

In Birmingham the ladies organized several years ago to see to its enforcement and many a horse and mule has been saved from untold cruelty and torture by the efficiency of these ladies in watching for, reporting and prosecuting people who were cruel to their teams or over loaded them.

To drive a crippled horse or mule in Birmingham means that you will be arrested and pay a fine. To drive one over the stones and rocks of that section without shoes on all four of its feet means punishment to the driver. To unmercifully beat one gets you into trouble and to work one too poor for strength or with a sore neck, back or leg also calls for a fine.

The ladies are mainly responsible for this enforcement. They are always on the watch and a phone message will quickly put an officer on your track.

There is a State law for the pro-

A GREAT DAY

Last Sunday was the day set apart for the annual all day singing of the Clanton County Singing Convention.

The exercises were held at the High School auditorium and were attended by one of the largest crowds that ever assembled in Clanton. Even the spacious auditorium could not accommodate a third of the people present.

Many noted singers were present from abroad. The great song writer and publisher, of Chattanooga, was on hand and took an active part in the program.

The Vaughn Saxaphone Quartette of Tennessee, were also present and added immensely to the enjoyment of the session, by exhibitions of their vocal as well as their instrumental talent. Melody emanates from them as naturally as breathing.

Many beautiful songs were sung, both new and old, as the day went by and every one was loud in their praises. This was, perhaps, the greatest success ever scored by the Convention, while it has always been popular and has always drawn a large crowd together.

Clanton county has a large number of good singers and they are interested and always encourage any movement that looks to the advancement of the musical education of the people.

Following are a few of the noted singers who were present and who did their part towards making the exercises wonderfully attractive:

H. C. Collins, Georgia; John M. Dyer of Birmingham; A. J. Showalter, of Chattanooga; A. M. Pace, Lawrenceburg, Tenn. N. A. Smith, Seaman, Ala.; W. B. Walbert, Lawrenceburg, Tenn. G. A. Mau, Seaman, Ala.; W. A. DeVaughn, Pelham, Prof. Barnett, Lawrenceburg.

PLANT ONE

Before the dawn of the motor-car age, a passing motorist picked up a farmer who had never before seen an automobile. The farmer was duly impressed and delighted. To impress him still more, the motorist put his foot on the accelerator and for six or seven miles they tore along like the wind. Then something went wrong with the steering gear and they ran into a tree. The farmer and the motorist alighted unhurt on a bank of moss. The car was not damaged.

"That was fine," said the farmer, as he got up. "We sartinly went the pace. Tell me this though—how do you stop her when there ain't no trees?"—The Baptist

We wish the good Clanton ladies would take this matter up before the hot days of summer come and protect the poor mules and horses from starving hitched all day without water or feed. Many other animals are worked around here when they can hardly stand up or walk. How about it ladies?

REAL LEAGUE BALL

The fans of Clanton and vicinity were treated to a game of real league base ball last Thursday when the "Yellow Cab" team of Birmingham came down and crossed bats with the local boys.

Remarkably few errors were made by either side and the game was in grave doubt as to who would win up until the last man came to bat.

It is a real pleasure to witness a game so hardly contested and so free from any semblance of "beefing" and rag chewing.

Both teams fought as hard as possible all the way through, but the very finest spirit of sportsmanship prevailed all the way through.

We congratulate both teams, not only upon their very excellent playing, but especially on the clean and honest game they put up.

The score was 4 to 3 in favor of the local boys and every run was honestly made and really earned by both teams. The "Yellow Cab" boys would be a drawing card in Clanton if they ever decide to try our boys again.

This afternoon Tallassee is billed for a game on the home diamond.

POISONING THE WEEVIL

There is no doubt in our mind at all in regard to the feasibility of poisoning the boll weevil and making a successful any paying job of it.

Too many reliable farmers have already won out and made successful cotton crops, in spite of the weevil, for us to longer entertain a doubt in regard to the practical results following an intelligent and persistent application of poison.

While this is true, we are surprised that a great many farmers are not at all interested in the subject and are not going to undertake to make any resistance whatever to the inroads of the weevil. To our mind this is most unwise.

If the weevil is even as plentiful as they were last year, with cotton relatively late, they will be almost able to destroy the entire crop.

According to the best information we have been able to obtain, it cost only about six dollars per acre to poison the crop. That six dollars will add, at least, 50 per cent to the yield and is the very best investment a farmer can make.

We all realize that the weevil can, and does, almost destroy the cotton crop, and his entry into the game makes the raising of cotton an extremely hazardous financial proposition to the farmer, and it is strange to us why they are not all a unit in a determination to beat the weevil to it and make cotton in spite of him.

We are not farming now, but we have farmer and we feel like we know a good deal about the trials and disappointments that belong to the farm, and our idea has always been to take every advantage possible in making a crop.

Miss Mary and Earl Ellis are in South Alabama visiting relatives for about two weeks, when they will go to Mobile and spend a couple of weeks before returning home.

Mrs. Willis Crosby, of Deatsville, was a visitor to Clanton friends and relatives last Sunday.

AT HOME SICK

The many friends of Mr. W. W. Fox will regret to hear that he has been confined to his home this week by an attack of illness.

His physician, Dr. Gragg informs us that he is now improving and will be out again in a few days, unless other complications set up.

We especially miss his jolly presence at our office, for he has just opened up his mercantile and auction house next door to us and nothing is ever dull where he hangs out.

COTTON CONDITIONS LOWEST IN YEARS

This year's cotton crop began the season with the lowest condition, with the exception of 1920, since the keeping of condition records was begun 53 years ago.

In its first report of the season issued today, the department of agriculture placed the condition on May 25 as 65.6 per cent of a normal. In 1920 it was 62.4 per cent of a normal on the same date. The condition this year is 7.2 per cent below the average condition on that date in the last ten years.

A forecast of production was not made with today's report as statistics or acreage are not collected until June 25. The estimate of acreage and forecast of production will be made on July 2.

JUPITER PLUVIUS SCORED A RUN

The Clanton Invincibles were intended to go to Tallassee last Tuesday and challenge another victory on their ball team score board, but old Jupiter Pluvius intervened with a young flood that morning and saved somebody from getting a licking.

Last year the Tallassee ball team was always able to take care of itself and report has it that they have not forgotten anything yet.

ALABAMA NEWS HAPPENINGS

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Drunkness can never excuse the commission of murder and even if a person is so drunk as not to be able to form a purpose of taking life, though such fact might tend to reduce the offense to manslaughter, it could not reduce it lower than manslaughter in the first degree. It was so held in the opinion of the supreme court written by Justice Ormond Somerville in the case of Albert Cagle, appealed from the Jackson circuit court. Cagle was convicted of murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life. On appeal, counsel for the defendant claimed that at the time the crime was committed Cagle was so intoxicated that he did not have the intelligence to form a purpose to take human life, and that the jury should have been instructed that the offense committed could not be more than murder in the second degree. The supreme court affirmed the trial court's judgment.

Showing an accounting of affairs of the Gulf Coast Produce Exchange, also the Horticultural Development company, each devoted to the citrus industry in Mobile county, a suit for $3,000 by a member of the two exchanges is under way in federal court. Attorneys are arguing the question of a separation of the two associations before the court prior to actual trial of the case. One of the members of the exchange in the suit charges that $3,000 is due him for oranges sold from his place. He charged extravagance in the operation on the exchange and declares that a contract was made to handle oranges, but that he has never received any money. An accounting from the citrus exchange.

In order to find out just where the candidates for municipal offices at Clanton stand on various and important issues, the League of Women Voters will give them a dinner within the next few days, the date not being set. Nearly 50 candidates for mayor, president of the council and the several aldermanic positions will attend. It is expected that a number of women interested in political matters will also be invited. Candidates will be called upon to pledge their efforts to behalf of parks, playgrounds, dry enforcement, sanitation and the general moral welfare of the city.

Recognition of the ability of the woman as office holders in Walker county is perhaps greater than in any other county in the state. The women have already captured two county offices in Walker and another one will fall to a woman before the end of the year. Miss Mary Amis, democrat, holds the office of circuit clerk of Walker and Mrs. Lillian Davison, republican, is county auditor. On May 13 Miss Lennie Swindle won the democratic nomination for county treasurer over five male opponents.

The 167th regiment band of Gadsden will go to the New York national democratic convention if a movement now on foot succeeds. It is said troops have been asked by the Alabama boosters who will go to the convention to fight for Senator Underwood's nomination. The band numbers 48 pieces and has frequently been pronounced the best national guard organization of its kind in the country.

Two thousand men are engaged in clearing the Tennessee river area which will be covered by water when Wilson dam is completed. The government requires that all logs and other material which would float be piled up and destroyed by fire.

Marshall and DeKalb counties will each show a tax gain of $250,000 to $500,000, according to S. A. Jordan, district agent of the state tax commission. Mr. Jordan states that taxes are fairly well equalized in both counties.

The old Forman grist mill on Canoe creek, near Gadsden, one of the largest and oldest in Alabama, was washed away during the storm of last week.

Plans are being drawn for a $200,000 grammar school building to be erected in Fairfield by Jan. 1 in the event of success in a special election for a proposed bond issue to cover the cost.

Birmingham was selected as the 1925 meeting place by the Southeastern Hardware and Implement Dealers at the recent convention in Anniston.

Two Birmingham men were elected to high offices at the convention of the Bankhead Highway association in Albuquerque, N. M. Erskine Ramsay of Birmingham was elected treasurer of the association and J. Asa Rountree of Birmingham was elected director general. Another Alabama man, Leon J. Jones, of Talladega, was honored, being named to the third vice presidency of the organization.

The closing day of the semi-centennial and commencement at the Florence normal school was marked by the decision of the alumni association to erect a memorial to the soldiers of the World War. It will be in the form of a stone and concrete stage for the open air amphitheatre and will have a memorial tablet bearing the names of those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Date for hearing charges brought against Sheriff P. H. McQueen, of Crenshaw county, by five citizens of the county, seeking his impeachment and removal from office, has been postponed by the Alabama supreme court from July 1 to July 3. Postponement was granted on request of counsel for the sheriff.

"Moonshiners" in Mobile county are using moving stills, according to Sheriff Paul C. Cazalas after his raiding squad, composed of Deputy Sheriffs Burch, Stringfellow and Hudoff, reported that in "still locations" they found 21 barrels of mash, but that the whisky making outfits had been moved.

Alabama City will inaugurate a series of home talent concerts. The first was held at the Methodist Tabernacle. The initial program included vocal and instrumental solos, orchestral selections, duets, trios and literary readings. The concerts are to be continued throughout the summer months.

Post office clerks and rural carriers of Alabama to the number of some 200 met in Montgomery for their annual convention. A business session in the morning at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium was followed by a barbecue at Oak park in the afternoon.

The Troy Kiwanis club was entertained by the Boy Scouts at a fish fry at the river, three miles from Troy. A 100 per cent attendance of the scouts was recorded for the meeting. The boys gave their yells and some demonstrations of signalling, knot tying and first aid.

Three hours after her older brother, Malcolm was taken to the hospital probably fatally injured in an automobile accident, little Mathilde Reeves, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Reeves, was run over by an automobile in Opelika and instantly killed.

C. Homer Billingsley, former food and feed clerk of the state department of agriculture, pleaded guilty to an indictment alleging the embezzlement of agriculture, pleaded guilty to sentence of one to three years in prison by the circuit court of Montgomery county.

Thomasville people, bent on improving their streets since the past winter has shown them the necessity, have passed an ordinance to grade and gravel about six blocks on Wilson avenue and the same number on West Front street.

Albert Kilgore and Owen Lambert were placed under $100 bonds, when they were alleged by officers to have attempted to "shoot up" the Shady Glen school house near Anniston, following the closing exercises at the school.

Revenues derived from the gasoline tax in the State during April totaled $134,729.50. The amount is to be equally distributed among the 67 counties to be used in road and bridge construction.

The Supreme court affirmed the decision of the Talladega circuit court in the case of Gordon Fincher convicted of killing Maybell McCullers, and set Friday, July 11th, as the day for execution.

The Florence City commission has authorized the purchase of necessary pipe for the installation of new water mains in that city.

Wide Variance in Cost of Potatoes

Study Carried on by Department of Agriculture in Big Producing States.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Yield per acre is the principal cause of variation in the cost of producing potatoes, the United States Department of Agriculture points out in a cost study in important potato producing sections of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, and Maine. The survey dealt with costs in 1919, but the conclusions drawn are generally applicable to other years. Farmers who received better than 130 bushels of potatoes per acre produced them at an average of 72 cents while those who had a yield of less than 70 bushels had an average cost per bushel of $1.49. The cost per bushel of potatoes grown on 461 farms ranged from 30 cents to $2.45, with most farms producing at a cost of $1 or less per bushel.

Important Cost Items.

Man and horse labor were the most important items of cost in areas studied in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and New York, whereas commercial fertilizer was the largest item of cost in Aroostook county, Maine. In Aroostook county the fertilizer cost was larger per acre than the combined cost of man and horse labor.

The cost per acre was lowest in Clay county, Minnesota, being $78.00, and higher in Aroostook county, Maine, where the acre cost was $219.60. The yield per acre in Clay county, Minnesota, was 103 bushels, making the cost per bushel 76 cents, while a yield of 278 bushels in Aroostook, Maine, resulted in an average cost per bushel of 79 cents.

Potatoes fitted into a fairly definite crop rotation in all areas except in Clay county, Minnesota, where wheat and oats were not grown in any definite rotation with potatoes. In the other areas hay, potatoes, corn, (where corn is grown) and a small grain seeded to grass constituted the rotation. The per cent of farm receipts coming through the sale of potatoes varied from 41.5 per cent in Barron county, Wisconsin, to 94.5 per cent in Aroostook, Maine.

Man and Horse Labor.

In areas where none of the picking labor was contracted for and as a result the hours of picking up potatoes were included, the total hours of man labor expended in raising an acre of potatoes varied from 93.7 hours in Anoka county, Minnesota, to 92.7 hours per acre in Barron county, Wisconsin. The hours of horse work used per acre were the lowest or 65.7 in Clay county, Minnesota, and highest in Monroe county, New York, where 116.0 hours were used. Commercial fertilizer was applied at the rate of 1,980 pounds per acre upon potato land in Aroostook county, Maine. None of the other areas studied approached this quantity of commercial fertilizer application.

The amount of man labor and horse work, together with the cultural practices for each area, are given in detail in Department Bulletin 1188, Cost and Farm Practices in Producing Potatoes, copies of which may be obtained free upon request to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Most Farm Cooperatives in North Central West

More than 45 per cent of the 10,160 farmers' business organizations reporting to the United States Department of Agriculture up to April 1 are in the seven west North Central states including Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, and Kansas. Over 25 per cent of the associations are in the five east North Central states, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, and more than 8 per cent are in the three Pacific Coast states.

Minnesota leads in number of associations, 1,350 organizations being reported from that state. Other states with numerous farmers' business organizations are Iowa with 1,050; Wisconsin, 879; Illinois, 640, and Nebraska, 477. Seven hundred and seventeen co-operatives are engaged in retailing. These are mostly stores and a large percentage of them are located in the following states: Minnesota, 98; Nebraska, 86; Iowa, 84; Kansas, 63; Wisconsin, 49.

Cattle-Tick Eradication Now Possible Anywhere

Experience shows that it is possible to eradicate cattle-fever ticks anywhere, even on swampy, brushy, range land, asserts the United States Department of Agriculture in an exhibit panel recently prepared for display in tick-infested localities.

To convince the skeptical observer, the department shows a picture of such land, where eradication was accomplished and which has been free from ticks ever since. The average observer might think it futile to attempt tick eradication in a region such as pictured. The grass often swarms with young ticks.

Dipping cattle, however, kills the ticks before they develop to the reproductive stage, and ticks that do not get on cattle die in a few months. In the cattle-fever tick becomes extinct in one season in localities that conduct thorough systematic dipping.

Candle Eggs Before Shipment Is Urged

Plan Will Eliminate Bad Ones or Those Dirty.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Eggs shipped in interstate commerce should be carefully candled by shippers, in order to eliminate those that are bad or that may spoil en route, say officials of the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, who are charged with the enforcement of the federal food and drug act. Shipments containing eggs which have yolks stuck to the shell, muddy eggs, black spots, added eggs, any other eggs which are filthy, decomposed or putrid are in violation of the law.

Federal food inspectors have been instructed to give particular attention to shipments of eggs during the warm months of spring and summer to see that the channels of interstate commerce are kept as free as possible from eggs that do not comply with the law. Shipments of eggs that are in violation of the law may be seized and the individuals responsible for the interstate shipment prosecuted under the federal food and drug act, say the officials. Some of the states have specific laws requiring the candling of all eggs placed on sale.

Careful candling before shipment will enable dealers to eliminate the bad eggs. The elimination of the spoiled eggs before shipment not only removes the hazard of violating federal and state food laws, but it is economical in that it saves shipping charges on eggs likely to be rejected at place of receipt.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a bulletin on the best methods and equipment for candling eggs. This bulletin may be obtained without cost upon application to the department at Washington. Ask for Department Bulletin 565, "How to Candle Eggs."

Materials and Methods for Efficient Spraying

In "Some Sidelights on Dusting and Spraying Practices," Prof. P. J. Parrott, entomologist at the Geneva experiment station, said:

"The past summer was notable for the destructive work of the codling moth. Worm holes in apples were second in importance to apple scab, both being chiefly responsible for the large numbers of inferior apples produced in many orchards. Unusual abundance of side-wormy apples in carefully sprayed orchards proved that methods and materials which have been reasonably efficient in the past did not give as good control as usual."

Speaking of the double benefits, Professor Parrott said it was well to keep in mind the fact that customary treatment given to prevent wormy apples serve two objects, that of keeping the apples free from worms and of reducing the extent of the carry-over of the pest in the orchard which largely determines the degree of infestation during the following year.

Top-Dressing Hay Land Is Profitable Practice

Fertilizer demonstrations conducted by the Middlesex, Mass., county extension service, during the past year bear out the evidence obtained in previous work of a similar nature, namely, that the proper use of fertilizers on hay land produces increased crops at good profit. The returns from both nitrate of soda or an 8-6-6 fertilizer were uniformly good on the six farms in the county on which demonstrations were carried on.

In each test, a fertilized plot was compared with a check plot, the combined average yields for all six being 2.4 tons and 1.3 tons per acre, respectively. Thus the fertilizer treatment, produced an average gain of 1.1 tons of hay per acre.

FARM NOTES

Plan a large acreage of feed crops.

Destroy all breeding places of flies.

Mow weeds off of pastures every two weeks.

Uncovered garbage pails and manure piles are breeding places for flies.

Spray, or dust, the Irish potatoes with arsenate of lead to control the potato bug.

Plant every acre possible in soil building crops, such as velvet beans, cow peas, and soybeans.

Any farmer convicted of soil robbing should be sentenced to the condemnation of his neighbors.

For the striped beetle in the garden use Bordeaux-arsenate spray or a 2 per cent nicotine dust.

Mulch the tomato plants heavily with straw or leaves to conserve moisture and prolong the fruiting period.

Apply nitrate of soda to the garden crops if they are not growing satisfactorily. Spray apple trees to control the codling moth.

It is the duty of every family to plant a garden which will provide an adequate supply of vegetables for the entire year.

In order to reach a man's intelligence, you may sometimes have to reach it for a long time beforehand.

National Forest Visitor

The prominent part the 146 national forests play in the recreational activities and outdoor life is emphasized by the fact that almost 10,000,000 persons visited these forests during 1923, according to the final tabulation made by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

The importance of the automobile as a means of conveyance to recreation seekers is shown by the further fact that more than eight out of ten forest visitors, or more than 8,000,000, came in privately-owned cars.

"That's what she thought, but found she had him on her hands."

OLD WESTERN TRAIL IS SCENIC HIGHWAY

Stretches From Salt Lake City to Alden Gulch.

One of the attractive northwest routes which is being improved for the increasing summer travel to the Yellowstone and Glacier National parks traverses the old stage route of pioneer days known as the Corinne trail leading from Salt Lake City to Alden gulch, near Dillon, Mont. The route from Salt Lake City, starting from Brigham Young monument, has been paved with concrete from that point through Ogden, the second largest city of Utah, and continuing 22 miles to Alden to Brigham. A few miles beyond there is another concrete surface through Logan to Smithfield.

Crossing into Idaho, the country becomes rolling and is chiefly adapted to dry farming and stock raising. Beyond Pocatello, the great Fort Hill Indian reservation is reached, where the ruins of the first settlement in Idaho may yet be seen, the site being an of Hudson's Bay trading post. At Idaho Falls, in the Snake River valley, the road leads toward Yellowstone park by way of Rexburg. This is the region which was explored by Lewis and Clark in 1805, and is the original home of the Blackfoot tribe of Shoshone Indians.

The road then enters the mountains, according to a description in the Concrete Highway Magazine, winding through the Targhee National forest, and excellent trout streams to Yellowstone. Toward the west is a magnificent wilderness where the headwaters of the Missouri river have their origin. Following the Centennial valley to Montana and Dillon, the town of Armistead is passed, where there is a fine memorial erected by the women of Montana in memory of the square-headed men, who piloted Lewis and Clark through the territory.

Just before Dillon, the site of the State Normal college, is Hannock, the first capital of Montana. At this spot gold was discovered and at Hangman gulch the Vigilantes rid the state of bandits.

Through the Big Hole valley, the across the Continental divide into the beautiful Flitter Root valley, the highway continues to Missoula, the center of western Montana and the home of the state university. Northward, the road crosses the Flathead Indian reservation, where buffalo still range, and penetrates the land of the 8-11 peace-loving Indians who still live in native picturesque. A splendid road follows the western shore of Flathead lake, the largest body of fresh water in the United States, except the Great Lakes. Beyond the lake the stupendous, snow-capped peaks of the Lingenlim and then Kallispell reached, the gateway to the Glacier National park.

A few miles beyond the boundary line is crossed in Canada and the road continues north along the recently completed Banff-Windermere road through virgin mountains and forest country to Lake Louise and Banff, Switzerland of America.

BOB IN AMERICA

SYNOPSIS.—In a low drinking place in the Japanese town of Mitagiri, Kiyama, dissolute son of the wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Thunder Gate, boasts of a girl he is to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following a fight in the place, a drunken white man, speaking perfect Japanese, is left unconscious. Kiyama, drawing his father's anger, sees a way of escape. He changes clothes with the unconscious white man (to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance), leaving a note of explanation. Leaving, Kiyama is robbed and slain. The white man, as Kiyama, is taken, unconscious, to the house of Aochi. His name is Robert Wells. Wells awakes bewildered, but to familiar scenes, in Aochi's house. Aochi, almost sightless from age, does not perceive the deception. He had determined his unwelcome son should be put to death, but Wells' deportment leads him to think a reformation is possible. Aochi dies that day. Wells finds Kiyama's notes and understands. Priests remind him of a bargain he has made, to buy a girl. He goes to the temple and purchases the girl, to all appearances white, though the priests assure him she has Chinese blood. She tells him she is white—"all white"—and begs him to spare her.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

But with all the explanations which Doctor Wells must make, and the distraction to the household affairs, the coming of Misako was a boon to the frightened lady-mother of little Bobbie. Misako brought (it was all they could do) a letter from the missionaries in a village near Mitagiri; six months later she became Bobbie's nurse-in-bed and a kiss-in-the-night, for the lady-mother died.

His father, always a silent man, became doubly stern; devoted perfunctorily to his duties, insisting that she spend long hours over dry books. Bobbie saw him seldom.

As contact with his father decreased, so did Misako usurp all of Bobbie's affection. Long tales she told him, as they sat evenings upon the veranda. Most of all of the town from whence she had come, its grandeur and richness, the terrible god who dwelt in Mitagiri, the Thunder God, whose face was veiled, that ordinary men and women might live. To look upon the god, save for the highborn, was certain death, so awful was his visage.

As the child grew, a sturdy, brown-skinned youngster, Misako's love became rapt devotion. It was typical of Doctor Wells that he had not flinched at having been sent to Takusaki, although he had seen its location upon the map, and knew that he would be the only missionary for miles around. This had not daunted him, inspired rather. He did not consider it as martyrdom; it was his duty.

Now this very thing reacted against him. More than once he had felt that if it were only he had been able to secure medical attention, he might have lost Elsie. Now he saw his son playing in the dust with the ragged urchins of the village. Takusaki itself, as a town, might well have been any of a thousand. He did not consider it as a town. It was a place of heathen, who did not listen or, listening, did not learn.

His wife, in her brief stay, had been delighted with it. This Wells did not understand. He remembered only her last tired hours, and had them with him often.

That Bobbie should acquire the mannerisms of his playmates was natural, but that his skin became a creamy-yellow in tan, that long days in the hot sun should cause his eyes to narrow—this gave his father secret dismay. The lad swam, played with the rest. His arms and legs browned—the missionary saw nothing in the way that resembled either his wife or himself.

The lad was bright. His subtle reasonings and brilliant cross-cuts through problems in mathematics were. Doctor Wells felt, means to learn with superficial rapidity. Nor had the boy proper reverence; he had early been disgraced for clapping his hands in Shinto prayer, learned at the temple, while Doctor Wells was performing a funeral ceremony over a departed church member. The excuse was that "He was a Japanese, father-then." I thought he would like it.

Bobbie saw in the village many things that were beautiful. These, his father, with the stern taste of the West already developed, did not see, or would not look for. Especially were the temples unesthetic and abominable; he had no patience with the very few missionaries who saw them as objects of art.

It can be seen that Doctor Wells had no sympathy with the very air which his son breathed, since that air was filled with ancient folk-lore and myths, filled with Orientalism and perfumes and habits.

He felt that application to his studies would soon remove Bobbie far from this insidious influence even better than he himself might do. It was merely an induced phase.

Misako became toothless. There was no more Bobbie-San. She could remember no such person. Instead, there lived in the house the heir to the house of the Thunder Gate. She bowed before him, calling the boy Kiyama-San. Doctor Wells did not exist, save as a sort of upper servant. The house was Bobbie's. Bobbie was served first. Bobbie's wishes must be consulted before she would permit a servant to carry out one of Doctor Wells' orders.

Bobbie took it as a matter of course. Misako liked it. That was enough. Wasn't she his little mother?

To please her, he would memorize long Shinto prayers. Became adept in the Rules of Courtesy. Because it delighted her to see him imperious, he could adopt a commanding manner before her and the other servants. Misako had one principal worry. The boy was old enough to be married. To whom?

In vain she painted a picture for the boy. There would be a beautiful girl, versed in every duty and appreciative of her exalted position. A girl with long, fine nose, with eyes that would shine like black jewels under brows curved as the wings of the nightbirds; her black hair, would be woven with the blossom of the plum; she would have kimono of pale silk with shifting colors changing with the light. Here, and here alone, Bobbie would laugh, although he took pains to conceal his amusement from Misako.

The position of Doctor Wells, in his own household, became intolerable. He could discharge Misako, yet dreaded facing his Maker and admitting that he had acted so with one of such great and simple faith.

It was in a bitter moment that he fumbled through his scant correspondence. He found a letter already creamy with age. It had been written shortly after the death of Bobbie's mother:

"Send the boy to me, if you will. If you want the little fellow educated in America I will see that it is done. Elsie would have liked him. He will not be permitted to follow in his father's footsteps. I tell you that frankly. To my way of thinking, there is more religion in bringing water to a desert, or housing the poor properly, than in preaching to a horde of savages. You won't do this at once, Richard. You were always obstinate. But this is an open offer. It isn't a favor to you, remember. It is for Elsie, and the boy."

Doctor Wells, from his window, the letter upon the desk before him, watched a mendicant, copper bowl hanging against skin, shanks, weary, sore of feet, ending his bowl at the doorway to Misako, begging a handful of rice, the scrapings of the bean-curd pot, a few shreds of fish. Whispering, the mendicant thanked Misako for her gift.

Doctor Wells heard her answer—that thanks be poured down upon her great and revered lord, Kiyama-San.

Nonsense. Nonsense. What would the boy come to? Better swallow his pride. Suppose Bobbie were left alone. What would happen? He was sudden in his judgment.

"Send me my son," he ordered. "We see little of each other, Robert," he said when the boy entered. "Sit down, son. How," his voice faltered a moment, "how old are you?"

"I was born in the year of the Forty-third Blossoming of the Sacred Plum, in the Season of—"

Doctor Wells, shivering slightly, cut him short. "English, Robert! English!"

"Eighteen, father."

"So soon. So soon . . . or . . . so long . . ." he mused, vacant-eyed. At eighteen. His own boyhood: the great square house in a commodious yard, well shaded by left-over forest trees, elm and walnut and beech, with here and there a line of leafy sycamores where the creek had been filled in. Coolness and quiet; ordered days. A well-marked program, not too staidly delineated. Cookies in the kitchen. Strange that he should remember that! The starched glanzh of his mother. Her pride in him, a minister setting forth to strange lands. . . .

"Would you like to go to America? To a college for learning?"

"If you command, father."

"I do not command, son. It is a request. You should go. Yes . . . yes . . . I do command. You must go."

Bobbie bowed his head. "The son refusing to obey his father shall be punished with one hundred blows of the bamboo," he said sadly. "When is it you will that I depart?"

"Why . . . don't you want to go? Are you only going because I order you?"

"Yes, father."

"Why not?"

"Only missionaries go to college."

The boy smiled slyly. "I would not care to be a missionary."

"Rather be a monk, ruler of a host—a host consisting of a dozing servant, senile," Wells said harshly, adding somberly, almost apologetically, "Your uncle would see to it that you were not a missionary," and explained what colleges were for.

Listening Misako, without the door, her ears sharp for all the many vanished seasons heard Doctor Wells put his question again, and sent up a wall of protest and anguish at Bobbie's delighted answer.

CHAPTER V

James Sanderson was pleased with the lad's build and clear eyes. The big house on Nob hill was pleased with him likewise. While he was unimpressed with the grandeur, taking it as a matter of course, yet he had a smile for every one without being familiar. It was not to be doubted that he had a manner, as if he were the master's son, let alone the child of the master's sister and a penny-scrunchin' missionary.

When James Sanderson had arrived at that place which permitted him to build a house of his own, it was of a place with its neighbors, a wonderful example of ornamentation. The portion was colonial-columned. There were pinnacles and many-angled roofs, all wood painted gray. Wherever a space permitted, the whole was iced with carved wood, acanthi and fat Rubens-like babies all sprawling together.

It was with a twinge, after the fire and earthquake had swept away his house with all of the others, that Sanderson admitted that a change would be necessary. This he agreed to, as far as the exterior of the house was concerned. There was now nothing but severe lines, and even his plea for a Doric column was overwhelmed by the architect.

He was, however, positive about two things. He would have none of two low ceilings. He wanted large rooms, where there was space for a man to breathe.

The other matter was a view-room. Formerly, a cupola had served this purpose. The nearest that Sanderson could come was to insist that upon the roof be built a pill-box (as the architect called it) which set at the opposite end from the roof's water tank. It had many windows and was reached by a spiral staircase which had a landing before the door, and then continued to a trapdoor in the roof. From the windows of this tower room was a sheer drop of sixty feet.

Widely, Sanderson had this room prepared for Bob. It was apart from the house. "No sense keepin' the lad in a boarding school. A fellow wants a little privacy. A place to bring his friends where we grownups won't disturb them, nor hear them."

The room pleased Bob immensely. Sanderson had fitted it up, as he said, to give the lonely boy a homelike place. Actually, he had adorned the room with a bed, a table, a chair, a lamp, a bookcase, and a view of his own room when he was a lad.

Floor space, nothing to speak of; walls covered with the sort of hunting prints that Sanderson had always admired; four chairs, all bought second-hand, so as to be "homelike, and not stiff"; a rack of books, filled with some of his uncle's own. A broad double bed, curtained from the room (Sanderson had slept upon grain-sacks when he first came around the Horn); a table with a humidor, lest Bob take to cigarettes (which he early did).

His first days in the streets startled him. It was strange to walk through the crowds of hurrying people and see no face that he knew. Once or twice he had greeted a Japanese, only to be rewarded with a blank stare, or a supercilious giggle. After that he was silent. Yet he could not help but feel each time he saw a brown face disappear in the crowd, an unexpected poignant loneliness. . . . It seemed to him that a fragment of his familiar world had vanished, leaving him alone.

He was entirely unaware of encouraging looks thrown at him. Bob was, as a woman with two tiny bundles remarked to her companion, not at all hard to look at. There was something compelling about him. Not infrequently a girl, or a free-and-easy young matron, found time to smile at him.

Sanderson liked the man-company. It gave him a feeling that no guest, no matter how intimate, could instill. The boy's rapt attention when he spoke he took not as duty, but as interest. It was a combination of both. The slightest encouragement was sufficient to start him reminiscing of his college days. He felt that Bob should be forewarned, but did not realize that he was arming him as well.

Bob is learning to be an American. What will be the effect on him?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Wasted Effort

Baby was going on at a great rate and the father of the family finally demanded to know what the youngster was crying about.

"He wants his own way," responded the child's mother.

"Eh?"

"And he can't have it."

"Yes, he might as well get that idea out of his head at the start," said the old man, grimly.

GRIND TOUGH END OF PORTERHOUSE STEAK

Putting Tail-End Through Meat Hopper.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

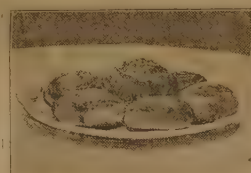

The flank end of the porterhouse is to be classed with the toughest of cuts and with those which, when cooked alone, are with difficulty made tender even by long heating, and yet people quite generally broil this part of the steak with the tenderloin and expect it to be eaten. The United States Department of Agriculture says the fact is that to broil this part of the porterhouse steak is not good management. It is much more profitable to put it into the soup kettle or to make it into a stew. In families where most of the members are away during the day the latter is a good plan, for the end of a steak makes a good stew for two or three people. This may be seasoned with vegetables left from dinner, or two or three olives cut up in gravy will give a very good flavor; or a few drops of some one of the bottled meat sauces. If the flavor is rebuffed, a little chili sauce may be added to the stew. But if the tough end of a porterhouse is needed with the rest, a good plan is to put it through a meat grinder, make it into balls, and broil it with the tender portions. Each member of the family can then be served with a piece of the tenderloin and a meat ball. If the chopped meat is seasoned with a little onion juice, grated lemon rind, or chopped parsley, a good flavor is imparted to the gravy.

TO MAKE CURRANT OR CINNAMON BUNS

May Be Baked Without Any Top Coating.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Take a portion of dough for light rolls; when it is ready for molding, place on a floured breadboard and roll into a rectangular sheet one-half inch in thickness. Pin down the corners to keep in shape. Spread lightly with softened butter, sprinkle with powdered (or soft) sugar and stew with currants or cinnamon. Roll up the sheet as for a jelly roll, cut into inch slices and place on a greased sheet about one inch apart. Let rise until about trebled in bulk; sprinkle the top with chopped nuts, or brush with a mixture of sugar and milk, and bake about twenty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven. If desired, these buns may be baked without any top coating and need just a few minutes before taking from the oven, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Vegetable Chowder Makes Most Substantial Dish

Here is a mixed vegetable chowder that is good. It makes a substantial dish. Rice and okra may be substituted for potatoes and carrots, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture, indeed almost any vegetables may be used with or in place of those mentioned.

4 potatoes 2 tablespoons fat or a piece of salt pork
3 carrots 3 onions
1 pint canned tomatoes
1/2 teaspoonful salt
2 cups milk

Cut potatoes and carrots in small pieces, add enough water to cover, and cook for 20 minutes. Do not drain off the water. Brown the chopped onions in the fat for five minutes. Add this and the tomatoes to the vegetables. Heat to boiling, add two cups of skim milk, and thicken with flour. Celery tops or green peppers give a good flavor to the chowder if you happen to have them, so do finely chopped chives.

Creamed Peanuts and Rice

The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following dish for a change. It can be easily and quickly made when boiled rice is on hand.

1 cupful rice (uncooked) 2 tablespoons fat
2 cups chopped peanuts 2 tablespoons salt
1/2 teaspoonful paprika 3 cups milk (whole or skim)

Boil rice. Make white sauce by mixing flour in melted fat and mixing with milk. Stir over fire until it thickens. Mix rice, peanuts and seasoning with sauce, place in greased baking dish and bake for 20 minutes.

PRODUCE AND CARE FOR MILK PRODUCTS

Cleanliness Will Help Quality and Flavor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Milk and cream are among the most perishable and easily contaminated of all foods, and since they are often served uncooked, they may be a menace to health unless produced and handled in a cleanly way. Milk produced for home use on the farm deserves as careful attention as it would receive in a first-class dairy. Cleanliness in milking, the use of sterilized utensils, prompt straining and cooling of the milk, and keeping it at a temperature of 50 degrees F. or less if possible, in a place free from odors, dust, and flies will bring large returns in quality and flavor and consequently to family well-being. 2. Indifference or aversion of farm children to milk has been traced in many cases to the fact that milk smells and tastes of the cow, the stable, and of poorly washed utensils.

The proper care of milk, butter and cheese is very important. It is discussed in a new Farmers' Bulletin 1374, Care of Food in the Home, which may be obtained by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Milk bought from a dairy is best kept until used in the bottles in which it is delivered. They should be brought indoors as soon as possible after delivery, washed, and placed in the refrigerator or other storage place where the temperature is 50 degrees F. or preferably less. In washing, special attention should be given to the mouth of the bottle and the cap. Even a temporary rise in the temperature of milk aids the development of bacteria.

Butter should be kept cold and in a covered container that excludes light and prevents the absorption of foreign flavors. Creamery print butter keeps well in the cartons in which it is marketed. Butter purchased in bulk should be rinsed off with cold water to remove any drops of butter-milk which may have come to the surface and may then be wrapped in several thicknesses of cheesecloth wet in weak brine.

Cheese of any kind is especially susceptible to mold, but it can be protected to some degree by keeping it cool and well wrapped in waxed paper. Soft cheeses should be left in their original containers until used. The odor of cheese is so penetrating that it should be kept in a tight container if stored near butter, eggs, or other foods likely to be flavored by it.

One Most Satisfactory Way for Coddling Eggs

Many means have been suggested for cooking eggs in such a way that the yolks will be cooked and the whites will not be overcooked. One of the most satisfactory is by coddling, which is done as follows: Allow a cupful of water to each egg, bring the water to the boiling point, remove it from the fire, put in the eggs, cover the dish closely and leave the eggs in the water for about seven minutes. There is some uncertainty about this method, for eggs differ in weight and also in temperature at the time the cooking begins. On the whole, the best results can be obtained by pouring hot water over eggs, if the same dish with the same amount of water is always used, but each cook must make her own rules.

Summer Find You Miserable?

It's hard to do one's work when every day brings morning lameness, throbbing backache, and a dull, tired feeling. If you suffer thus, why not find the cause? Likely it's your kidneys. Headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities may give further proof that your kidneys need help. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Thousands have been helped by Doan's. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

Mrs. A. P. Vaughn, Luverne, Ala., says: "I had a dull, dragging ache in my back and couldn't do any work at all, for I tired quickly. My kidneys were badly disordered. Finally I was attended by a physician, but he gave me no relief. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Pills. They cured me entirely."

Can you guess who the local Casper, Toots and Buttercup are?

Grass and boll weevils have no cause for complaint at the weather we are having this year.

About the most unpopular thing you can do these days is to talk, write or preach the truth.

This rainy weather is not only very unsatisfactory to the farmer, it also seriously interferes with the plans of those who love to go fishing.

Nice, ripe peaches from local orchards have been on sale here this week. Look out. Georgia, we are after your laurels.

The farmer has a hot fight to make with General Green right now. Climatic conditions are all against the farmer so far.

Female barber shops do not succeed because the girls prefer the place with the real atmosphere that surrounds the barber shop of other days.

Women contend for all of their rights as voters, but they bawl the law out when it comes to working the road, going to war or obeying the traffic regulations.

Boys are getting fastidious about the flavor the girls use in their face powder and lip stick. They prefer certain flavors in their milkshakes and kisses.

The Federal Aid School Bill is not going through Congress without a fight and, to our surprise, Senator Underwood is strongly opposed to it. We are with him there.

Senator LaFollette is going to run for president this time on an independent ticket. Certain developments may occur that might give him a real opportunity.

Every Southern state that allows its legislature to vote for Federal aid in our schools will live to regret it unless the world comes to an end very soon afterwards.

The political dopesters were never so badly mixed up before in their life. There is an unknown element in politics this time that has us all guessing.

The disagreeable and expensive experience the state are having in trying to accept Federal aid in road building should convince every one that "Federal aid" is a monster delusion and a snare.

A young man is in jail over in South Carolina for killing his father with a rock. A father who begins to lose his efficiency as a bread winner these days has to watch his step or he will hit a snag.

The dean of the famous Princeton University is out in a very strong article in the American Magazine advising parents to look after the boys and protect them from the girls. The reverse used to be true. 25 years ago, but he says times have changed and that the girls are now setting the pace and leading the race towards hell.

New York Cops are arresting female traffic law violators now the same as men. John D. Rockefeller's daughter got pulled and fined the other day. Her plea in court was that she was a woman, but it didn't save her. The judge assessed a fine and told her that the sex looked just alike to him.

The government report on the cotton crop for May is not very flattering. The condition is only 65 per cent of normal and the price hopped up. About October 1st they will play the other end of the game and put out a 12,000,000 bale estimate and cotton will hop down. That is a most iniquitous scheme.

The congressional Committee that has been investigating the different bids for Muscle Shoals, turned down the Ford bid absolutely last week by a vote of 10 to 5. They recommended a government controlled corporation as the best plan upon which to solve this mooted question.

INGRATITUDE

Sometimes we wonder if ingratitude is not the "unpardonable sin" we have heard so much about. If it is not, then it must be because God knew it would be so widespread in its operations, that practically the entire human race would be damned.

How many times in your life have you stuck to a friend, though thick and thin, done him favor after favor, and stayed by him in adversity as well as in prosperity often to your own injury or inconvenience, and then see a day come when you could not possibly do any more, or go any further in your efforts, and find that same party embittered against you and exerting himself in every way to injure you, just because you were not able to oblige or humor his last call on you for help?

You may not grieve much over losing a friend like that, but his base ingratitude will sting you all over and almost cause you to lose faith in humanity.

Ingratitude in the heart of a person stamps that person as being of a lower order of beings than some decent brutes. Be kind to a dog and will he ever forget you or fail to show his appreciation on any and every occasion? Not on your life. His loyalty is one of the most beautiful pictures in the world. A common cat and even a hog will display a high type of gratitude for kindness and it is left to we high and lordly humans to demonstrate how small we are, and how contemptible by displaying, at times, an ingratitude for kindness that would shame even the devil.

The world is full of parents today whose hearts are broken and whose smiles have faded and whose lives are burdens of sorrow, because of the fearful ingratitude of boys and girls, who are spending, every day, the very life blood of their parents, drop by drop, in wicked and riotous living, and heaping contempt and insults to the burden of ingratitude if these burdened and broken parents even attempt to raise a hand to save or a voice to advise a better and a safer road for their children to follow.

As their steps falter and their heads whiten under the burden of striving to care for these ungrateful charges, they sink lower and lower in the estimation of these fast speeding youngsters and, unless death claims them before their strength finally deserts them, and they become unable to keep the wolf from the door, they become public charges or pitiful dependents who are reminded daily in a thousand ways, that their room would be far preferable to their presence.

The ingratitude of the average young person these days is monumental. Where it will lead to if their comes another generation is unthinkable. A society has already been formed in Chicago to work for the passage of a law, by Congress to electrify all old people as soon as they become unable to provide for themselves. This may be the relief that the next generation will have from their parents as soon as they cease to be the bread winner of the family.

Ingratitude has always appealed to us as being a fitting epitome to the unpardonable sin. If hell can invent a more damnable one it would be hard to imagine.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr and Mrs J W Wyatt and the members of their family desire to express their thanks for the many kindnesses extended to them by their friends near their home as well as in Coosa county, when they had to attend the funeral services of little Kermit Hull who died at the home of his parents on the night of May 29th.

CHARLES E. WYATTE

Messrs Leon Kemp, Guy DeLoach, Julius Burnett, and Euburn Wooley, attended the Commencement services at Jacksonville, Alabama last Sunday.

A female gun fighter and hold up crook in Chicago made a mistake and told a plain clothes officer to "stick 'em up." He knocked her down with his billy and run her in, like any other crook, and the judge handed her a sentence of 20 years. She will have time for reflection and may desert the suffrage party by the time she gets out.

A DEMOCRATIC CRISIS

As the time draws near for the assembling of the Democratic national convention in New York, many of the prominent political prophets are inclining to the belief that Al Smith, of New York, has a bright prospect of landing the nomination.

Such a calamity as that to democracy would mean its utter defeat and disgrace before the electorate at the general election. Even if he could be elected the grand old party would be destroyed. With a man of his stamp as a leader, the real democrats of the country would be forced to reorganize their entire line up and it would be, at least, 25 years before they could again come before the public with any hope of success.

It is really inconceivable that such a character as Al Smith could even loom up at all as a democrat for he does not represent a single principle that goes into the making up of a democrat. He is an avowed whiskey man, in fact is gathering his strength mainly from the ranks of the wets. He is also a Roman Catholic and is the candidate of this insidious and dangerous anti-democratic political hierarchy.

If the nominating convention, that meets in a few days in the city of New York, should nominate for president this most notable enemy of democracy, every real democrat in the land will thereby be absolved from his allegiance to the party and should refrain from casting his ballot at all or go over to the support of LaFollette, in case he really decides to run as a progressive. Al Smith and Calvin Coolidge are both impossible to the person who cherishes the principles of a real democracy as the best form of government for our great republic.

Our party needs a national house cleaning and needs it bad, when a character like Al Smith, steeped in liquor, the rabid representative of the foreign element and owing his allegiance to the government on Tiber can even loom up as a possible leader.

If he is the nominee the democratic party will be defeated from that very hour and his defeat will be one of the most notable victories of our grand old party. A large per cent of the democratic vote is cast on principle. Most of us really believe in it as the party of the real people, but when a man like Al Smith gets in the lead we will know it is time to back up and reorganize. He is not a democrat.

WIND STORM

On Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock when the most of the folks were attending the all day singing at Clanton a violent wind storm which at one time began to look cyclonic passed through the neighborhood in which are situated the Taylor Poole and Wyatt homes two and one-half miles from town.

In spite of the recent heavy rains making it impossible to plow the land there was a blinding storm of dust and for a few minutes things looked equally. But little rain followed the blow and no damage was done.

HURRAH FOR THE MEN

Years ago it was common to hear folks talk about the churches being good for women, children and preachers. Nowadays the tune is changed. Our good women are not less faithful, but the men are becoming more so. We attended a regular Wednesday night prayer meeting recently, where there were two girls present, and about 10 men. The total attendance was unforgivably small, but the proportion of male to female was 5 to 1, and not a single grown woman in the congregation. At Tuskegee recently the men and the women had an attendance contest, and the men outstripped the women. Pastor Haskew, however says the women gave the men the inspiration to win the victory. The point is that more men are attending church today, than ever before.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Nix, of the Mulberry community, were at the singing here Sunday.

A REMARKABLE FAMILY

In 1839 there came to Talladega county Alabama from Baldwin county Georgia Thomas M. Wyatt and wife both of them natives of the "Empire State of the South." With them they brought a son 7 years of age, John M. Wyatt. When he was 14 years old his parents moved to Coosa county Alabama and he grew up to manhood on his father's farm. In 1871 he was married to Miss Rachel Varner, the daughter of E. P. Varner and his wife Jane Knight of Coosa County. To them was born eight children—seven sons and one daughter. The sons Thos. E. Joseph, John W. William B. Charles E. Miles G. and T. C. all of whom were born in Coosa county. These sons are all like their father, they are all farmers and good citizens.

The one daughter Eula married George Hull of Coosa county and still lives there.

Sixteen children have been born to these sons and the daughter.

The remarkable feature about John W. Wyatt and his family is that both his wife and himself have passed the three score and ten mark, and in the fifty third year of their married life they have not been called to mourn the loss of any child.

Within the past three years three of their grand children all young have died. Truly the Lord has been good to them.

HUSBANDS WHO WOULD "BRACE UP."

As a part of the propagandist to promote the success of the great Rally of Big Talking Husbands, we quote the following from E. W. Howe's Monthly:

One frequently hears that husbands should brace up and assert themselves. They brace up as much as they dare; husbands make many a fuss the public knows nothing about in addition to the millions the public does know about.

The trouble is that husbands in bracing up, lack a fair show. Husbands are strong employers; the unions are too strong for them, and the unions and wives have the benefit of public sympathy.

I know a husband who has been trying to brace up for twenty years, and recently heard him say: "People generally declare I should assert myself. I wish those who say this had my troubles to meet, and see what they would do with them."

LOOKING SAD

The gentlemen around town who are able to fish and can afford the spare time, are looking sad and discouraged for the past few days.

The river has been on a high lone some and is yet, for that matter, and the almost daily rains are keeping the creeks so muddy that fishing in them is impossible, so the sport is all off for the present and these Nimrods are at a loss as to what to do.

If they try to stay at home their good wives will make them work the garden, mow the lawn etc, and if they come down in town they are annoyed by people who go to them for the latest piscatorial dope, so there you are. They are really to be pitied, don't you think?

GOOD ROAD SERVICE

The story of what improved highways mean to the rural community as told in the motion picture, "The Road to Happiness," is given a new impetus to good roads sentiment every where through the country.

This is shown in reports being received by government officials who co-operated in the making of the picture and by the Ford Motion Picture Laboratory which produced it.

"The Road to Happiness" films are distributed free from all Ford Branches in the United States and since the first of them went out a few weeks ago the demand for their showing has been so great that it has been necessary to supply every branch with extra copies.

The picture tells of the influence of improved highways upon the social, educational religious and economic phases of life in rural communities, and the need for skilled highway engineering to bring about the improvement, the moral of all of which is that "we pay for improved roads whether we have them or not, and we pay less if we have them than if we have not."

The film was produced jointly by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, representing the motor car industry and the Highway Education Board, and was made by the Ford Motor Picture Laboratory, under the guidance of the Bureau of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Because of the success of the picture in this country, the titles are being translated into foreign languages and as soon as possible it will be sent to Mexico, South America and Europe.

HIGHWAYS

When a man is sick he calls the doctor. He has faith in the doctor as long as the doctor makes him better. But when he finds that the physician has diagnosed the case incorrectly or is using a treatment which does not bring back health he either changes doctors or asks for a consultation.

Sick for good roads, the American people called in a doctor (Congress) and received a "first-aid" treatment, called Federal aid, by which the physician ordered from the pharmacy (the Public Treasury) sufficient dollars to help the various parts of the United States to build new arteries.

But the United States needs not a few but a very large number of new arteries, and the prescription of the doctor isn't producing them in time to save the economic life of the patient!

It is, therefore, not the part of wisdom to ask for a consultation, and have the doctor confer with other physicians with another and a newer vision of the illness of poor roads and the method of their cure?

One of the cures advocated, and the only one which hasn't been tried, is the appointment of a National Highway Commission, to consider and report to the Congress on the subject of establishing, building and forever maintaining a system of national highways. States which tried State aid and found it did not cure have tried State highway commissions and found they did cure; why should not the United States find as a whole the same good result the several States have found for themselves?

Roads are a national, not a State, problem. Transportation is a national not a State problem. Only the Nation can adequately and intelligently lay out a system of roads for the Nation, and only the Nation can afford to build and maintain such highways as will adequately care for the present, not to speak of the future, traffic.

THE NORRIS ABSURDITY

The Norris bill for government ownership and operation of the Muscle Shoals projects as finally amended in committee is one of the most ridiculous measures yet presented. Certainly none on which so much time and apparent thought have been ever reflected so little of human genius. If the reports as to the amendments to the bill are correct, then the much-heard purpose of federal operation is but a cloak under which various and sundry plans for the piecemeal disposition of the great project may be consummated. Certainly there is neither coherence nor vision displayed in the Norris measure. The friends of Muscle Shoals, however, are well content that the committee has evolved such an obvious hodge-podge. It insures the defeat in the senate of the Norris maneuvering and paves the way for consideration of the Ford offer.

One amendment for example, provides that, in the event the department of agriculture does not wish to undertake the manufacture and sale of fertilizer, the privilege may be extended to some private concern. Even the possibility, however, is nullified by the provision that no more than twenty-five thousand primary horsepower shall be available for this purpose. No concern of responsibility and importance would seek the concession. The suggestion that additional power for fertilizer would have to be secondary power is absurd; for no concern is going to jeopardize its ability to produce at capacity by placing its output at the mercy of secondary power. The bill also would provide that the dams may be leased to private concerns for the distribution of power.

There is only one reason for consid-dering the Norris measure seriously. That is not because of any merit it possesses; but because those who propose it happen by political chance to be in influential position. On its merits alone the plan would be dismissed as utterly lacking in understanding of the principles involved in the Muscle Shoals opportunity. It is hoped that the friends of Muscle Shoals will greet the introduction of the Norris plan with their heavy artillery and will keep it up until it is reduced to its original elements, which would probably be highly gaseous. —Age-Herald.

PATRIOTISM AND MONEY

Grindell Mathews, who claims to have invented a ray that will destroy all machines of war and thus destroy all war, is giving an excellent exhibition of a lack of patriotism. Mathews is an Englishman. He was born in England. He has grown up under the protection of the British flag. The brain that developed the ray is a British brain. It should be dedicated first to the uses and the needs of Britain.

But Mathews is not thinking of his obligation, his duty to his native land. He is after the coin of the realm. He was considerate enough to offer his invention to the British government for a price. The government didn't take immediate action, preferring to exercise prudence and to make investigations before investing money of the government in the so-called ray. But we find Mathews impatient. We find that he wants the coin at once. We find that he is not willing to allow his own government time for an investigation. Dispatches announce that he is now in France in negotiation with the French government. He has offered his ray to the best bidder. There are a few persons in the world who put price upon patriotism. The Lord be thanked that not many of them reside in America. —Journal.

MINOOKA

We call the attention of the patrons of school district, number 61, known as the Minooka District, that after a thorough investigation we have been convinced beyond any doubt that the election that is now pending in our district is exactly what we want and need. According to the information we have received, we are convinced that it does not mean that our school will be consolidated with any other school. Also the tax money paid in our district will be used only for our school at Minooka, district number 61. We earnestly urge all the voters in our district to aid us and give their support and influence in helping us get the necessary finance to build up one of the very best schools in this section of Chilton county.

We feel confident that you will never regret your support in this direction.

—Of A "Fair Return"

The Transportation Act of 1920 permits a rate of return on the value of the railroads' properties of 5%. However, in no year since the Act became effective on September 1, 1920, have the railroads earned anything like the amount contemplated or permitted therein.

The following statement, compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics, shows the amount of money the American railroads were entitled to earn under the Transportation Act, the amount and the rate they actually did earn, and the shortage of the so-called "fair return."

| Period      | Permitted to Earn | Did Earn        | Shortage        | Rate  |
|-------------|-------------------|-----------------|-----------------|-------|
| 4 mos. 1920 | $ 435,417,220    | $ 220,523,618  | $ 214,893,602  | 5.10% |
| Year 1921   | 1,108,397,020     | 519,945,614     | 588,451,406     | 4.69% |
| Year 1922   | 1,084,806,233     | 776,665,360     | 308,140,873     | 3.14% |
| Year 1923   | 1,102,871,923     | 877,643,590     | 225,228,333     | 2.10% |
| 40 Months   | $3,723,093,426   | $2,590,729,042 | $1,132,364,383 | 4.03% |

Note that during the 40 months in which the Transportation Act has been in effect, the railroads have earned only 4% on the value of their properties; and that there was a shortage under the so-called "fair return" of $1,132,364,383.

The reader's attention is called to the fact that the Transportation Act permits, but does not guarantee, the "fair return." If the real earnings of the railroads were guaranteed by the Government, the carriers would now have a sizeable bill of over one billion dollars to present to Uncle Sam.

Left alone and given the opportunity to work out their own destinies under the Transportation Act, the railroads would solve their problems; but further tinkering with railroad legislation is bound to be destructive to the unsurpassed service they are now giving.

Give the Transportation Act a chance to make good; give the railroads a chance to continue to make good—and the Nation will prosper accordingly.

No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on my trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain. Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do everything from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. ## NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Tax Reduction Bill Goes to the President—Immigration Measure Signed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

UNLESS the prognosticators of Washington are wrong, the tax reduction bill will be a law before this reaches the reader. The conference report on the measure was accepted by the senate by a vote of 60 to 6, and by the house by a vote of 376 to 9. Backed by these overwhelming majorities it went to the President, and congressional leaders were confident that Mr. Coolidge would sign it. First, of course, he asked the opinion of the Treasury department, whose experts analyzed the bill. It was said that Secretary Mellon had at no time advised the President to veto the measure and that he had come to the conclusion that it should be signed as representing an improvement over the old law.

Of the six senators who voted against the conference report, four are radicals—Brookhart, Frazier, Norris and Johnson of Minnesota. The others were Ernest of Kentucky and Moses of New Hampshire, who favored the original Mellon plan. In the house the nine who voted in the negative were all Mellon plan supporters and all Republicans. They were: Penn (Conn.), Tilson (Conn.), Merritt (Conn.), Mills (N. Y.), Walworth (N. Y.), McFadden (Pa.), Phillips (Pa.), Hill (Md.), and Moores (Ind.).

Talk of a big deficit due to the bonus law and the tax reduction provided for by the bill faded away. Representative Green told the house: "The actuary of the treasury assured me that there would be a sufficient surplus for the fiscal year 1924 to pay the bonus twice over. The actuary's figures also show that the 1925 surplus, without including the bonus, which can be taken care of out of the previous surplus, will be $138,000,000. The difference between the present bill and the Mellon plan is only the very slight sum of $22,000,000, of which $10,000,000 is in the individual income and corporation taxes and the balance in the excise taxes. One-half of the 25 per cent reduction comes out of the fiscal year 1924, the other half out of the fiscal year 1925. The present bill reduces taxes $22,000,000 more than the Mellon plan would have done."

Later estimates by members of the house committee on appropriations indicated that the financial status of the government with the enactment of these two measures would be even more favorable than had been thought. This is in part due to the probability that aggregate appropriations by congress this session for purposes including the original budget recommendation will amount to about $7,000,000 less than the total recommended by the budget.

President Coolidge transmitted to congress a request from the veterans' bureau for an appropriation of $127,817,898 to defray the costs of the soldiers' bonus until July 1, 1925. Of this total, $118,850,000 would be for administrative expenses.

SENATORS BORAH, FEES and WILLIS cast the only votes in the negative when the postal salary increase bill was passed by the senate. By this measure, which then went to the house, the salaries of 300,000 postal employees would be increased by an average of $200 each annually, the total being estimated at $60,000,000. This is the schedule of salaries provided for by the bill:

Clerks and carriers, $1,700 to $2,100; special clerks at first and second class offices, $2,200 to $2,800; substitute and temporary clerks, 85 cents per hour; watchmen, laborers and messengers, $1,450 to $1,550; marine carriers, $2,400.

Railway mail service: clerks (seven grades), $1,900 to $2,700; supervisory officials, $2,800 to $4,500; substitute clerks, $1,850.

Rural delivery: no change in salaries, but allowance of 4 cents a mile a day for maintenance of equipment, amounting up to $230 for average route.

Postmasters: no change in first class salaries between $3,200 and $3,000; second class increased from $2,500 to $2,400.

Attached as a rider to this bill was an amendment offered by Senator Borah which requires full publicity of political contributions at intervals of ten days during all campaigns for election of members of congress and all officials of the government, the publication of the amount of any deficit at the end of the campaign and public announcement thereafter monthly of the amounts received from each contributor to wipe out the deficit.

STILL expressing his objections to the exclusion of Japanese by bill instead of by treaty, President Coolidge signed the immigration bill and it became a law. He justified his action by the general excellence of the bill and the imperative need of the legislation to take the place of the quota act of 1921, expiring on June 30. As to the Japanese exclusion, he said:

"I gladly recognize that the enactment of this provision does not imply any change in our sentiment of admiration and cordial friendship for the Japanese people, a sentiment which has had, and will continue to have, abundant manifestation. The bill rather expresses the determination of the congress to exercise its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration, instead of leaving it to international arrangements."

Over in Japan the signing of the bill, though no surprise, was the signal for great outbursts of indignation. A formal protest against the exclusion clauses was drafted, approved by the cabinet and cabled to Ambassador Rauhara for presentation to Secretary Hughes. It is a dignified protest, based on the alleged violation of an existing treaty with the United States—the gentlemen's agreement. In Tokyo and elsewhere there were big mass meetings at which the American law was denounced. At one of them Professor Uesugi of the Imperial University concluded a fiery address with the words: "A storm is coming; prepare." Comments in the Japanese press are bitter and inflammatory pamphlets are numerous.

Premier Kiyomura told the cabinet he would recommend Viscount Kato as the next premier. The present government will resign about June 6.

BRING the navy up to the 5-5-3 ratio, the house passed a bill authorizing construction of eight scout cruisers and six river gunboats and extensive improvements to six battleships. The total cost is estimated at $111,000,000. Money for elevation of guns on thirteen battleships was refused on the ground that it would violate the arms conference treaty.

ADVOCATES of the acceptance of Henry Ford's bid for Muscle Shoals have been trying for a long time to get it to the floor of the senate for debate and a vote, and last Tuesday they succeeded, although the majority of the agriculture committee was firmly opposed to the Ford offer and had twice rejected a motion that the bill accepting it be reported out favorably. By a bit of parliamentary juggling it was brought about that the Norris bill for government ownership of the project was reported out favorably as a substitute and carried with it the Ford bill. It was expected the debate in the senate would be heated and that a vote would be reached in a few days. Heflin, Pat Harrison and Underwood, presidential aspirant, prepared long speeches in favor of the Ford bid. Norris leads the opposition to the automobile maker and is assisted by Magnus Johnson and Jim Reed. It was noted that Ralston, who years for the presidential nomination, straddled the fence when the Norris and Ford bills were voted on by the committee. He voted "present" each time. Cautious, but not likely to do him much good with either side.

BOTH the Presbyterian general assembly, at Grand Rapids, Mich., and the Methodist general conference, at Springfield, Mass., took important action last week. The former adopted a resolution "pledging all its energies to the outlawing of war," but rejected amendments pledging loyalty to the government and allying the assembly with peace organizations carrying on campaigns of propaganda. It renewed its approval of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead law. It favored the constructive control of the motion picture industry and named as one of the evils the caricaturing of Protestant ministers. It adopted condemnatory resolutions against divorce, use of tobacco, child labor, harmful amusements, literature, gambling, profanity and in favor of Sabbath rest day for actors, and at least one day's rest in seven for all in commercial employment. The fight on Dr. Harry Emmerson Fosdick was renewed, with William Jennings Bryan as its leader.

The Methodist conference, by a decisive vote, lifted the ban upon amusements, except "those which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." The definitions given in the special advice to the discipline were altered to read:

"We lift up a solemn note of warning and entreaty particularly against attendance upon immoral, questionable and misleading theatrical and motion-picture performances."

A proposal to change the Apostles' creed, substituting the words "Christ's Holy Church" for "the Holy Catholic Church," was rejected by a close vote.

The trial board of the Protestant Episcopal church met in Cleveland and began hearing the charges against Rt. Rev. William Montgomery Brown, former bishop of Arkansas, who is accused of teaching doctrines contrary to those held by the Episcopal church.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE has warned both Republicans and Democrats in unmistakable language that he will head a third party ticket this year unless the two big conventions "demonstrate to the people, whether either of those parties can and will ouster itself of the evil influences which have long dominated them." This he says in a letter to Attorney General Ekers of Wisconsin. He also denounces the communists and charges that they are seeking to take control of the farmer-labor progressive convention that will meet June 17 in St. Paul. He declares that all progressives should refuse to participate in any movement which makes common cause with any communist organization.

Al Smith's campaign managers have received information that the McAdoo forces in the Democratic convention, if and when their candidate fails to obtain the nomination, will fall back on Carter Glass of Virginia and try to put him across. This is somewhat alarming to the Smith cohorts, for they admit that Senator Glass would have great strength as a candidate. He was one of Woodrow Wilson's closest friends and his record, both as secretary of the treasury and as senator, is excellent. Among the McAdoo leaders who are said to favor Glass as second choice are Col. Edward M. House, Bernard Baruch and Thomas L. Chadbourne.

David L. Rockwell, general manager of the McAdoo campaign, announced that the former United States Senator James D. Phelps of California will make the speech placing McAdoo in nomination. Four years ago in San Francisco he presented the name of Edward L. Doheny for the vice presidential nomination. His selection now is regarded as a move to offset rumors linking McAdoo with the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Phelps is one of the leading Roman Catholics of the Pacific coast.

CHANCELLOR MARX of Germany and his cabinet resigned on Monday as the new reichstag was about to open. President Ebert invited Herr Hergt, nationalist leader, to form a government, with the provision that he pledge himself to support the Dawes plan. This he declined to do, so Marx was asked to undertake the task again and accepted. The opening session of the reichstag was turned into a farce by the boisterous attacks of the Communists and Nationalists on each others' leaders and pets. Ludendorff was the special butt of the fibing.

MEMORIAL DAY, with all its beautiful and imposing ceremonies and its poignant memories, was celebrated Friday. Business was suspended throughout the land and all the people did honor to the memories of those who have given their lives to their country.

THE ASHOKAN RESERVOIR

The Ashokan reservoir is an artificial lake created as a water-storage reservoir for the city of New York, situated in the Catskill mountains more than 100 miles away.

The Esopus watershed, carrying the waters of the streams which flow from the high forest lands in the Catskills, emerged from the mountains through a deep gorge and drained into the Hudson river. The construction of a dam 4,650 feet long, with a maximum height of 252 feet, across this gorge, stopped the flow of water and created a reservoir 12 miles long, from one to three miles wide, with a maximum depth of 190 feet and a capacity of 130,000,000,000 gallons of water.

In the construction of this gigantic project, 15,222 acres of land, on which dwelt a population of 2,000 persons who had to find new homes, were acquired; 2,800 homes from seven cemeteries were re-interred; 11 miles of railroad were re-located 64 miles of highways were discontinued and 40 miles of new highways were constructed; 2,600,000 wagon loads of earth and rock were moved; embankments containing 7,800,000 wagon loads of material were built and 500,000 cubic yards (or wagon loads) of masonry work in which 1,500,000 barrels of cement were used, were constructed. Three thousand men, 30 miles of railroad, 33 locomotives, 350 cars, derricks, steam rollers, steam shovels, concrete mixing outfits, and miscellaneous equipment without end were employed.

As the lower division of the reservoir is 587 feet above the tide in New York harbor, the water flows to and is delivered within the city by gravity. Although the water of the Esopus drainage is of unusual softness and the sparse settlement of the country makes for purity, the water is drawn from the reservoir through 1,500 nozzles which break it into a spray and permit the escape of any odors or gases which it may contain.

The water flows, for the most part, through an aqueduct 17 1/2 feet wide and 17 feet high, with an average drop of 1-1/2 feet per mile. Cement-lined tunnels carry it through unavoidable hills and under valleys. It passes under the Hudson river through a tunnel driven in granite rock 1,114 feet below sea level, and reaches the city mains in a tunnel bored through solid rock, lying from 240 to 750 feet below the street level. The maximum capacity of this aqueduct is 20,833,333 gallons per hour.

LASSEN VOLCANIC NATIONAL PARK

Mount Lassen, which geologists are pleased to term "a dying volcano," is located in the southeastern part of Shasta county in northern California. Lassen, standing between the ends of two mountain ranges noted far and wide for the beauty of their scenery—the Sierra Nevada and the Cascades—rises to a height of 10,460 feet, and has the distinction of being the only volcano located within the confines of the United States that may be regarded as being at all active.

Although there were outward indications of the fact that tremendous internal heat continued to prevail, with the exception of the escape of some smoke or steam at somewhat irregular as well as infrequent periods, no serious eruption had occurred for so long (about two centuries) that the present generation of the world at large has practically forgotten that there was such a peak as Lassen, let alone the fact that it had volcanic tendencies. Consequently, in 1915, when Mount Lassen, with surprising suddenness, broke out in a series of violent explosions and eruptions which attracted the attention of the nations of the world to its doing, there was a rush for histories and geographies to post up on this mountain.

Although students of volcanic action contend that recent eruptions were feeble in violence as compared with those of long ago, nearby residents declare that these latest ones were terrifying to the nth degree. Tremendous, broad-spreading columns of dense smoke were forcibly expelled from the crater; small stones were thrown a mile or more, many hundreds not so far, sand and lava dust rained down on the surrounding country over a radius of two miles. A blast of heated gas escaped, swept down a creek valley, melted the snow and created a torrent.

The only possible sight of the kind in the United States, following out its policy of preserving the most distinguished of our scenic possibilities "For the Benefit and Enjoyment of the People," congress, in 1916, created the peak and the volcanic and lava fields, lakes, springs, and canyons which surround it, in all 124 square miles, as a national park.

MOTHER KNEW CARDUI'S VALUE

Georgia Lady, Who Had Lost Too Much Weight, Was Advised to Take Cardui and Is Now Well.

Columbus, Ga.—Mrs. George S. Hunter, of 17 North Columbus, was relieved of great pain and suffering by following the advice of her mother, who knew, from her own experience, of the value of Cardui.

"After I married, thirteen months ago," writes Mrs. Hunter, "I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides during . . . My side hurt so bad it nearly killed me. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time. I could not work and I just dragged around the house. . . . I got very thin—I went from 126 pounds down to less than 100. My mother had long been a user of Cardui and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble, so she told me to get some and take it. I sent to the store after it and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve. . . . My side hurt less, and I began to improve in health. . . . The Cardui acted as a fine tonic and I do not feel like the same person. I am so much better. I am well now. I have gained ten pounds and am still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all. . . . I wish every suffering woman knew about Cardui."

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, JUNE 12, 1924.

NUMBER 40

TALLASSEE GOT THEIRS

The Clanton Ball Team Don't Seem to Pick 'em. A 7 to 2 Win. ner With Ease.

Last Thursday afternoon the old time Tallassee invincibles, so far as the Clanton team was concerned, came over to the local ball park prepared to humble our boys as before, but somehow or other, they left their mascot, or lucky horse shoe, or rabbit foot at home this time for they never even became dangerous at all or ever got in sight of victory during the entire nine innings.

Our boys had a year old score to settle and a little revenge to gratify and they went into the game and rolled up great gobs of revenge with a neatness and dispatch that surely must have been satisfying. Pitcher Jones had them guessing from the very first and before they could solve one of his problems with the willow he gave them another and made them harder and harder as the game progressed. He is indeed a man of mystery when he gets in the box, for he don't seem to have anything much and looks easy, but the batters consistently fan out and then turn away from the plate with a look of surprise that is really amusing.

Catcher Thompson, for the locals, is a player that gets our everlasting admiration. He is the hardest working player we ever saw. He is most truly a star in handling hot ones off the bat, he covers more territory, and does it more efficiently, than any other catcher we ever saw. If a foul goes up in the back field at all, if it does not go over the fence, it is a safe bet that the batter is out.

Roper, in left field and at the bat, is another player that deserves a place among big league company. While Jack Hays, at short stop and in the willow, is a holy terror to opposing teams that sees him in on. He is one of the real defensible players on the Clanton.

He is not only safe and fast, he put a whole lot of head work into his playing and you know, head work is almost as great a winner in playing base ball as foot and hand work. Critt Jones, on first base, is also another very heavy asset, that the Clanton team can boast of. He takes care of the first sack like a veteran and when he goes to bat there is a big trick in it if he fails to land a one or two bag safety.

Albert Pyron, the veteran base ballist of the home team, played a game on second that was hard to head. He always has the head out work and Thursday he was running in high on speed.

All of the team played real ball and their team work was wonderful. They never forget to back each other up and every man played as if the final result rested solely on his shoulders.

The visitors also played a real game and the only reason they did not win was simply because the Clanton boys just managed to outclass them a little bit this time.

Batteries: For Tallassee, Tolley and Austin.

For Clanton, Jones and Thompson. Umpires: Terry and Smith.

Millions in Murder Trial

The pair of 19 year old human monstrosities in Chicago who kidnapped and murdered a little 13 year old neighbor boy and brutally killed him, so they could "enjoy a new sensation" are likely to get the opportunity of experiencing several new "sensations" before they finish up with this dastardly job.

If the courts in Chicago, do not hang them promptly and without disgusting the public with a long drawn out technical farce in the handing out of Justice, that city will be disgraced before the world and the entire country will be censured for establishing a system of law that is incompetent to deal with crime where millions are involved in the process of evading and prostituting the ends of Justice.

Both the murderers as well as their little victim are sons of millionaires and word has already been given out that as much as $25,000,000 will go in to the defense and prosecution of this case.

We predict that three, four or even more years will be consumed before the final disposition of this heinous crime will be finally made. Money is a great controlling influence in almost any human undertaking and it especially weighs largely in our courts of Justice.

Already some of the most noted legal talent of the entire country has been engaged on the side of the defense, while the state will have the best talent that money can employ to aid in meting out justice to these arch and heartless malafactors. One thing about this awful affair that affords us quite a good deal of satisfaction is that no real American is involved. These young degenerate reprobates belong to the hyphenated class, they are socialists and infidels. Their wealth, their idleness and their associations have only brought them to the logical and legitimate end of a career founded upon such utter lack of principles as is taught and engendered by the cults to which they arrogantly allied themselves.

The higher colleges of our country that are teaching such atheistic and damnable doctrine as these are largely responsible for the development of such demoniacal characters as this Leopold and Loeb. Being "broad" in one sense is to be commended. In the ultra modern sense it is damnable.

Mark Sullivan says McAdoo will go into the Democratic Convention with 612 votes. He has the solid South, except Alabama. If he can muster up a little over a hundred of those uninstructed delegates the United States will have a democratic president next time.

Next Thursday afternoon Clanton will go up against the "All Star" of Montgomery, which is given out to be, by the Montgomery papers, the best Amateur team in the state.

They come to us with a hot already full of scalp and are expecting to annex ours without any trouble.

They say they don't know how to get beat. We hope Clanton will add some information along this line to their experience here next Thursday.

SPLENDID SERMON

At 11 o'clock last Sunday Dr. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist Church, preached a sermon that should be taken to heart by every professed christian in the country.

He touched very kindly, but also very clearly and forcibly, upon the necessity of a distinct line of demarcation between the church and the world and painted out the palpable failure that church members are making in living a life that exemplifies the true christian.

Such sermons as this will do good and all preachers would do well to face the ungodly conditions that prevail today and meet them boldly with the truth "How to the line and let the chips fall where they may." There is one glaring fact that faces all intelligent people today, and that is, that we are drawing awfully dangerously near to the conditions that prevailed in Sodom and Gomorrah when fire from the heavens wiped them off the map.

Calvary waits upon us now unless we change our manner of living.

A WARM ENDORSEMENT

The Ku Klux Klan Officially endorse both 11 o'clock Sermons last Sunday

As an order dedicated to the betterment of humanity in every way and especially one opposed to moral depravity we wish to most heartily endorse and commend the 11 o'clock sermons last Sunday of both Dr. Ezell and Dr. Wilkerson at the Baptist and Methodist Churches respectively.

When ever the preachers of this country will start out on a consistent campaign against the awful social conditions so glaringly prevalent today, we want to assure them that the Klan stands ready to aid, cooperate with and uphold them in every possible way.

The highest aim of the Order is to assist to its utmost in making the world better, cleaner and happier and the American home the most chaste and sacred altar on earth.

Apperson-Caldwell Wedding

A Wedding of much interest to their many friends over the state was that of Miss Elsie Caldwell to Mr. Benjamin C. Apperson of Birmingham which occurred Monday afternoon, June 9th, at three o'clock at the home of the bride.

The attractive living room was beautifully the simply decorated in ferns and cut flowers. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Kate Mills of Birmingham, cousin of the bride, sang "At Dawning."

Mrs. Rodger B. Kennedy, of Tallapoosa, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and only attendant. She was charming in peach velle made basque and carried an arm cluster of Ophelia roses.

As the wedding march was being played by Miss Mills, the bride and groom entered together. The bride was a picture of girlish loveliness in a traveling costume of tan Roshanara with hat and accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of Mock roses. The beautiful and impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. C. D. Messer. During the ceremony "Just A-Wearin' For You" was very softly played on the piano.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Apperson left for Birmingham and from there will go to Chicago and later to points East. After their return, they will be at home in Birmingham where Mr. Apperson is prominently connected in business.

Mrs. Apperson is the charming and talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Caldwell of Fletcher Ala and has many friends throughout the state who will be interested in her wedding.

PREACHER GETS A POUNDING

Dr. Ezell told us Sunday about a very intensive pounding he and his good lady received the day before.

From the way he looked he did not mind it much, as he boasted of the fact that he would not be afraid of his grocery man for the next two months the pounding really must have had some especially good features.

He most courteously and gracefully returned the thanks of himself and his estimable better half to the unknown friends who administered the pounding.

A SMALL BLAZE

Early last Saturday morning fire was discovered in the front office of the Alabama Power Co. here.

The alarm was promptly turned in and the hose reels responded at once and the blaze was put out before very much damage was done.

The fire was a sequel to the great electrical storm that passed over about 2 A. M. that morning, some of the wiring having been "shorted" by the lightning and causing it to fire the wood work in the building.

MANY THINGS are told on Woco-Pep about the great injuries sustained by the use of it. Why not prove this and get the $1,000 reward offered by us and the Wofford Oil Company? ELLIS & SONS.

SAID TO HAVE MADE A RECORD

About midnight last Friday night a very heavy cloud arrived at Clanton hailing from a northwesterly direction.

The electrical display was one of the greatest ever witnessed by our oldest inhabitants. The elements were continually full of a brilliant fire, while the angry clouds were almost constantly riven by dazzling chains of lightning.

The crashing roar of the thunder must have reminded our soldier boys of some of the heavy bombardment that featured the late war. The very earth trembled at these fearful detonations, while the heavy crashing thunder never ceased for a moment during the two hour demonstration so lavishly staged by Jupiter Pluvius.

The rain fell in torrents and the streets resembled the angry rush of confined waters just broken loose.

The damage to the farmers is the most serious loss attending the storm. In many fields the terraces were swept away and the deluge of water tore the fields and young crops in a most disastrous manner.

It is believed that out west of town the rain fall assumed the form of a mud burst, for the rush of the waters took every thing in its course and many of the fields with growing crops were leveled down almost like a heavy roller had passed over them. No estimate as yet, can be made of the loss but it is very heavy.

The cloud did not travel very rapidly for it was 2 hours here without a single intermission in its fury.

One fortunate feature of the display was that the wind did not get very high at any period of the down pour.

A GLORIOUS TRIP.

Judge J. W. E. Gullledge, a 100 per cent Confederate veteran, took in the great reunion at Memphis last week.

He is home again now and is most enthusiastic in his praise for Memphis and its people.

Every courtesy and kindness was shown the grand old heroes and the town was theirs while they remained. Just a few more years; these remains will all be held on the other side.

Dallas Texas will be the rallying point next year and the Judge says he is going to begin right now getting ready to go to that one.

A SERIOUS LOSS

During the phenomenal play of electricity in the great thunder storm and cloud burst that visited us last Saturday in the early morning hours, the barn on the farm of Mr. Bud Alred, located out about one mile from the city, was struck by lightning and two very valuable mules were killed.

It is supposed that the torrental down pour of rain that was in progress prevented the barn from burning down.

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenlee, Texas. — "Words cannot express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, sleepy feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine." — Mrs. J. B. HOLLEMAN, 2214 E. Marshall Street, Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age. It is a dependable medicine for troubles common to women. Such symptoms as Mrs. Holleman had are relieved by correcting the cause of the trouble. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The supreme court reversed the Montgomery circuit court in the case of the damage suit brought by E. O. Hall against the Seaboard Air Line railroad and the Orange Crush Bottling company, which was decided against Hall in the lower court. The case now goes back to the circuit court for another trial. Hall's suit was for $25,000 for damages which were alleged to have been sustained in a peculiar manner. He claimed that he was walking along a public road at a point where it intersected the Seaboard Air Line track, when a collision took place between a train and a truck, the respective property of the two defendants, with a result that Hall was struck by the truck. The lower court decided for the defendants, but the supreme court held that the trial judge erred in sustaining the defendants' demurrers and reversed the case.

Charts for Keeping Record of Daily Work.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A chart, illustrated herewith, designed like the faces of two clocks, one for the forenoon and one for the afternoon, with the hour spaces divided into five-minute periods, has been made by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture for recording and studying a housewife's daily activities.

The advantage of the dial form is the similarity to the face of the clock. A minimum of time is required to keep a record of work done by this chart. The time does not need to be written for each task accomplished and only an abbreviation of the name of the task need be used. For instance, dw.—for dishwashing done between eight and eight-thirty—could be jotted down in the space the hand of the clock would pass over during this time; or the space covered by a crayon of a color used to designate dishwashing.

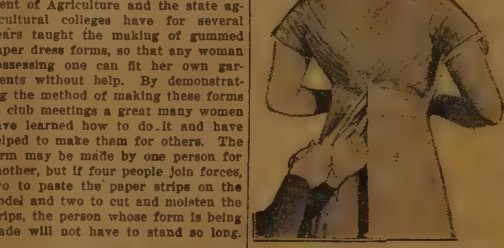

Some of the things that a chart like this will show are time spent in sleep,

MAKING OF GUMMED PAPER DRESS FORM

Any Woman Can Fit Own Garments Without Help.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Outstanding among the problems of the rural homemaker, or, indeed, of any housekeeper, is the making and remodeling of the family clothing, especially her own. To meet this need extension workers co-operatively employed by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges have for several years taught the making of gummed paper dress forms, so that any woman possessing one can fit her own garments without help. By demonstrating the method of making these forms at club meetings a great many women have learned how to do it and have helped to make them for others. The form may be made by one person for another, but if four people join forces, two to paste the paper strips on the model and two to cut and moisten the strips, the person whose form is being made will not have to stand so long.

The position of the shoulder seam, armseye, underarm seam, normal waistline and hip line may be indicated on the form, and also becoming outlines for round, square and V-shaped necks, and the right height for the tops of combinations and cantilevers.

Special Means to Keep Different Foods Cool

If no ice is available, good results can be obtained in some climates with an iceless refrigerator, which is described in a bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, or one of the earthenware devices in which air is cooled by the rapid evaporation of water. Foods may also be kept cool as well as hot in heat-tight containers, such as fireless cookers and vacuum-jacketed bottles. These devices, of course, will not make the food cooler than it was when placed in them.

On some farms the cold water pumped from deep wells for the live stock may first be used to cool foods by running it through a suitable storage box, or a house or box may be built over a spring or a brook. Foods in tight containers may also be lowered into the cool air of the cistern or well, but if the water is used for drinking great care must be taken not to let foods fall into it. Special wells or caves for the cool storage of foods are sometimes constructed.

Facts About the World's Greatest Hydraulic Development

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

MUSCLE SHOALS, an enormous hydraulic power and navigation development in process of construction by the United States government on the Tennessee river in northern Alabama, is a subject of nation-wide discussion by the American people. Various circumstances have combined to fix popular attention upon these government-owned properties, the world's largest hydraulic development.

America's entrance into the world war in 1917 found us dependent upon Chile for nitrates with which to manufacture explosives. Nitrates can be taken from the nitrogen in the air. The power and the facilities for the manufacture of an adequate supply were not available. Hence the federal government decided to construct a nitrate plant of its own. Muscle Shoals was selected as the site because it had ample water power, was convenient to the raw materials, coal and limestone, and was secure from a military viewpoint.

Work was begun at Muscle Shoals in July of 1918. At the signing of the armistice in November of 1918 a steam-power nitrate plant had been practically completed. Wilson Dam, however, had barely begun. Congress decided to complete Wilson Dam and it will be ready to deliver its power some time in 1925.

Muscle Shoals did not become useless at the signing of the armistice. On the contrary it possesses great peace-time possibilities. It can be made a source of two of the most important factors in our industrial development—electricity and nitrogen compounds. The uses of electrical power are almost limitless. Nitrogen compounds can be made into either explosives or fertilizer, the preliminary stages of manufacture being the same. Completion of the Muscle Shoals project will also greatly increase the navigability of the Tennessee river.

During the last two years several offers have been made to the War department for part or all of the Muscle Shoals properties. The secretary of war returned these offers to congress with the request for legislation covering the situation.

Muscle Shoals Project in Detail.

President Coolidge, in a message to congress December 6, 1923, recommended that the properties be sold, subject to the right of the government to retake them in time of war and with a covenant that experimentation for the manufacture of fertilizers be carried on to success. He recommended that congress consider offers, conduct negotiations and report definite recommendations.

This article, however, is solely for the purpose of giving the outstanding facts in connection with the physical aspects of the Muscle Shoals development. Other phases of the complicated situation are purposely ignored.

The strictly war-time works at Muscle Shoals are far from representing all of the present undertakings, existing and proposed. If present plans are carried out, the complete development comprises the following:

Dam No. 1—This is a small navigation dam to be erected at Florence, two miles below the Wilson Dam. Its estimated cost is $1,000,000. Its construction is not yet approved. It is to contain a navigation lock and will provide sufficient depth of water up-stream to the Wilson Dam. From Florence to the Ohio, a distance of 237 miles, there is to be a six-foot channel.

Dam No. 2—This is the Wilson Dam, elsewhere described in detail. It will develop power and is provided with navigation locks. Its final cost is estimated at $51,000,000.

Dam No. 3—This is a proposed power and navigation dam, located 18 miles above Wilson Dam. Its construction is not yet approved. It would raise the water in the river 40 feet and permit navigation a further distance up stream for about 65 miles. It would supply power to a maximum of 250,000 horsepower. This dam would be even longer than the Wilson Dam, but not so high. Its estimated cost is $25,000,000.

Nitrate Plant No. 1—This is a relatively small nitrate plant built in 1917 for experimental purposes at a cost of $10,000,000.

Nitrate Plant No. 2—This is a large nitrate plant built to supply nitrates for explosives during the war. Its total cost, including a 100,000-horsepower steam plant and a limestone quarry at Waco, was about $60,000,000.

Villages—In connection with Nitrate Plants Nos. 1 and 2 complete villages for workers were built. Plant No. 2 covers a site consisting of 2,900 acres of land. It consists of six separate plants for various chemical processes and there are in addition 186 permanent houses, with electric lights, sewers and water supply; one hotel with 100 rooms, furnished with all modern improvements; 22 miles of improved roads; 87 miles of standard-gauge railroad; 20 miles of sewers; 16 miles of domestic and fire water supply; a 60,000-gallon reservoir with pumping plant and filter, and an ice plant.

Wilson Dam [Muscle Shoals Dam No. 2], built by War Department. The largest dam in the world as it will appear when completed in 1925. Insert: Map shows relative location of dams and locks.

Gorgas Steam Power Plant—In order to obtain power for construction work and for operation of the nitrate plant while its main power supply was still unavailable, a 40,000-horsepower generating plant was erected on the property of the Alabama Power company at Gorgas, Ala., 88 miles away, and connected with Muscle Shoals by a long transmission line. This plant is not an integral portion of the Muscle Shoals development. It was, therefore, sold to the Alabama Power company under an agreement made with that company at the time it was erected.

Largest Dam in the World.

The illustration given herewith suggests outstanding features of Wilson Dam. The inserted map shows the relative positions of the three dams.

The navigation part of the Muscle Shoals project is too extensive and complicated to be described in detail here. In general it may be said that the Tennessee river rises in northeastern Tennessee, flows southwest, makes an east to west loop through northern Alabama and then flows north through Tennessee and Kentucky, joining the Ohio near its junction with the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill. The Tennessee is 652 miles long from Knoxville, Tenn., to Paducah, Ky. At Muscle Shoals, in northern Alabama, the river falls 134 feet in 37 miles. Here is the main obstruction to the through navigation of the river. With the three dams and the supplemental locks in operation, the Muscle Shoals obstacle would be removed.

The Wilson Dam, as the illustration suggests, is an impressive structure and pleasing to the eye. There are longer dams and dams that are higher, but none that is larger. Ministerial golfers in moments of stress requiring adequate expression will soon be expected to change over from Gator or Assuan to Wilson, or at least to cap the climax with Wilson. It should be remembered that the stream here runs from east to west and that in the illustration the north bank is at the left of the picture.

Wilson Dam was built primarily for the purpose of furnishing electric power, but the navigation phase had to be considered. This accounts for the lock on the north bank. Then comes the main dam and next the power house extending from the main dam to the south shore. The switch and control buildings will be located on the bluff on the south shore. If a drydock is needed in the future, it will be located upstream from the lock. Hugh L. Cooper, designing and supervising engineer of the Wilson Dam, says the entire structure will contain 85,500,000 solid cubic feet of masonry and cover 20 acres of ground. He visualizes this mass of masonry by saying it is equivalent to a concrete road from New York to Chicago, 16 feet wide and six inches thick. The project is being constructed by the War department, corps of engineers, U. S. A., under Maj. Gen. Lansing H. Beach, chief of engineers, and Brig. Gen. Harry Taylor, assistant chief, immediately in charge. The construction forces are under the direction of Lieut. Col. George R. Spalding. Mr. Cooper says of the dam proper:

The dam proper rises to a height of 187 feet above foundations and backs up the water to a depth of 35 feet, from the bedrock to the new water surface. The spillway section of the dam is of the gravity type of dam. Normal pool level above the dam is at elevation 441. Extreme fullwater level at elevation 465, thus making the normal head available 23 feet. The crest of the spillway is at elevation 448, and each spillway opening is 85 feet wide in the clear, with an 8-foot pier between. Supported on these piers and arching over each spillway opening is an arch bridge, serving as an operating deck for the spillway control gates and providing a double track bridge and roadway across the river. In all, there are 58 spillway openings, each with a control gate of structural steel, 28 feet high and 40 feet long.

The last five sections of the dam, adjoining and connecting to the power house forebay structure, are not spillway sections," says Mr. Cooper. "In these five sections there are located thirteen sluices. Each sluice is simply a 9-foot diameter conduit extending through the dam, protected at the upstream end by a massive concrete screen, and controlled at the downstream or discharge by a 108-inch butterfly valve. These valves are operated by a small compressed air engine, mounted on a car which travels on a track above valves. When one of the sluices is opened under full head it discharges a stream eight feet or more in diameter at a velocity at about 45 feet per second or thirty miles an hour.

Enormous Power to Be Generated.

"The power house structure can be divided into two parts: the forebay structure and the power house building. The forebay structure is that portion of the structure which retains the water and serves as a part of the water barrier. It is designed to withstand the entire water pressure without the aid of the power house building. The arch bridge and roadway continue without change of grade over the forebay structure to the south shore. The power house is approximately 1,250 feet long, 160 feet wide and 134 feet high, and when completed will contain eighteen main units, two auxiliary apparatus sections and a shore section.

"Ultimate installation calls for eighteen main power units, four of which are 30,000 horsepower each, and fourteen of 85,000 horsepower each. Four of the latter fourteen and the four 30,000 horsepower units are being installed at the present time, making an initial installation of 200,000 horsepower. Each power unit consists of a water turbine of the Francis type, in a vertical setting, with electrical generator above on the same shaft.

The four 30,000 horsepower turbines were manufactured by the William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Building company, and the generators for same were made by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

Five thousand men are employed on the construction of this project. The work is in three shifts, each shift working eight hours. This construction camp is in reality a fair-sized town. The main concrete mixing plant is located on an island in the middle of the river. From here the concrete is hauled in large buckets on railroad cars to any part of the job where it may be needed. Railroad tracks serve every available part of the work. In all more than twenty miles of track have been laid for construction purposes. A construction bridge carrying railroad tracks as well as tracks for huge traveling derricks had to be constructed. In order to build the formwork for the concrete, a lumber yard, sawmill and layout platform had to be erected. The lumber used on the job will run to millions of feet board measure."

The manufacture of destructive explosives from nitrates taken from the air is a fascinating subject, especially in connection with the fact that the same nitrates can easily be turned into harmless and beneficent fertilizer. As it stands today, Nitrate Plant No. 2 can fix from the atmosphere the nitrates required for the continuous supply of ammunition for an army of 1,250,000 men. In war time the cost of ammunition is not an essential feature.

But can fertilizer be manufactured at Muscle Shoals at peace-time prices? This seems to be an unsettled question. Maj. J. K. Crain, ordinance department, U. S. A., says on this much-evaded question in connection with the Muscle Shoals project.

There is some doubt that fertilizer can be produced by the process for which Muscle Shoals properties are now equipped at a price low enough to compete with fertilizer from other sources. However, this subject is engaging the attention of scientists in both private and governmental employ. Promising results have been attained at the fixed nitrogen laboratory in Washington, D. C., which laboratory was established by the War department, but turned over to the control of the Department of Agriculture in 1921. The doubtful outcome of experiments in this field has caused the War department to oppose relinquishment of the title to these properties without adequate guarantees that the plants must be returned to the control of the government in an effective condition to be utilized in the manufacture of explosives, should they pass to the control of persons who did not continue their use of the manufacture of fertilizers.

Taking Nitrogen From Air.

"The raw materials employed in the manufacturing process are nitrogen obtained from the air, limestone, and coal, which is used in the form of coke," says Major Crain. "The first step is to burn the limestone to lime, which is an oxide of calcium (CaO). This is then mixed with coke (carbon) and the mixture is heated to a very high temperature in electric furnaces. The product thus formed is a combination of calcium and carbon, the familiar 'calcium carbide' (CaC<sub>2</sub>) which generates acetylene when placed in water. The carbide is run out of the furnaces in a liquid state, and after cooling and solidifying, is ground to a fine powder.

"The next step is to add nitrogen to the carbide. For this purpose practically pure nitrogen is needed. There are several different methods of separating nitrogen from the oxygen of the air, but the one used at Muscle Shoals, because of its simplicity and cheapness, is first to liquify air and then to separate the two gases by taking advantage of the fact that the boiling points of the two liquid gases are slightly different. (Oxygen boils at -182.5 degrees Centigrade and nitrogen at -195.5 degrees Centigrade.) The process is very similar to that used in separating mixtures of alcohol and water.

"The actual fixation of the nitrogen is now accomplished by passing it over the finely ground carbide heated to a temperature of about 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit. A reaction takes place under these conditions and a complex compound of calcium, carbon, and nitrogen, called cyanamide (CaCN<sub>2</sub>) is the result.

"The next step in the production of both explosives and fertilizer is to heat the cyanamide in large steel tanks with steam and water, which results in the formation of ordinary ammonia.

"Ammonia can be readily changed into nitric acid (HNO<sub>3</sub>), and from this acid any desired nitrogen compound for either agricultural or military purposes can be made. For fertilizers, ammonium phosphate and ammonium sulphate are the preferred forms; while for explosives, there is a host of nitrogen products, dynamite, T. N. T., and many others."

QUIT HAVING BILIOUS COLIC

Texas Lady Says Her Suffering Was Terrible Until She Began Using Black-Draught.

Naples, Tex.—Mrs. G. W. Carlisle, who resides on Route 3, near here, says: "I used to have very severe spells of bilious colic. My suffering was terrible. I took different remedies; still I would have these spells."

"I heard of Thedford's Black-Draught and began to use it. After taking it for some time I quit having colic and haven't had a spell in years. It is about the only medicine I ever take. We certainly can recommend it to anyone. I take the dry powder and it keeps my liver in good shape. I have excellent health."

Colic is often due to a torpid condition of the liver. Other disagreeable symptoms of inactive liver are bilious headache, dizziness, indigestion, coated tongue, bitter taste, offensive breath, and constipation. Black-Draught acts in a natural way upon the liver, and helps to put it in working order again.

Black-Draught has been in successful use for more than eighty years, and thousands of people have written of the benefit they have derived from the use of Black-Draught in the treatment of torpid liver. Black-Draught is free from calomel and harmful drugs, as it is prepared only from powdered medicinal roots and herbs.

Remember—If it's got Thedford's in it, it's not Black-Draught liver medicine. Insist upon the genuine.

Seek Fossils in Africa

East Africa, which has already yielded up some most important fossils of dinosaurs, is now regarded with much expectancy as a field of research in natural history, and for several years the trustees of the British museum have been hoping to send out an expedition to this territory. The difficulty, however, had been lack of funds; and the hopes of securing cooperation with museums overseas also failed to be realized. It has at last been possible to arrange for Mr. W. E. Carter of the University of Manitoba to sail for West Africa to explore a number of the promising sites of former discoveries.

Editor of Clifton County News: Please spare me space in your paper to say something about cattle dipping.

If I were to say I was dipping cows I would go wrong, for the people are dipping their own cattle. All I have to do in my territory is to keep account of the cattle and whose they are for the people are certainly bringing them out from the dark corners. They are doing the very best I ever saw. Messed up in this dipping business like they have been in the past.

In beat eleven, one and twelve I believe I can truthfully say that ninety eight percent have already been dipped. Especially let me say that beat eleven and one, except some stock law cattle, is ninety nine and one half per cent. Let me appeal to the good people of stock law one more time who have cattle in these territories to come on look after their cattle, have them dipped and help get rid of this worrisome thing, and thereby stop the expense to the county. For if you will think one minute, the money to keep things going comes out of the fellows pocket that is having to worry with dipping his cows. So come in and see after your cattle, get them dipped and let's all get done with the thing and get in the same boat together and ride.

Yours for getting over with this thing this time if possible and yours for the betterment of our county in every way, I am,

Yours very truly,

From Marbury to Roy Bridge

Information is given out by the Highway Commission, that on July 15 they will let the contract for repaving the old highway from Marbury to the Roy bridge.

This is to be a gravel project with cement bridges, culverts and drains. The road is to be properly graded and put up in first class shape and Autauga and Elmore counties have agreed to keep it in good repair at all times.

When this work is done it will give us a fairly good road from Clanton to the capital city and some of our older guys may live to see the day when we can motor to Montgomery in reasonable comfort yet.

The Federal aid project that is building in the northern part of our country is moving along in good shape. Information in regard to the South end of this project, as to when it will be advertised and let, is scarcer than hen teeth around at the poultry depot of Jones and Ruffin.

The Child Labor Amendment.

We have before us another fight for an unnecessary amendment to invade the right of the States. It bears the plausible name of the Child Labor Amendment, but it proposes to surrender another right of the State and to make this a more centralized government than it is.

Are we going to load the Constitution down with amendments that will make the Federal government more centralized than any monarchical government of Europe, and cause a still further disregard and disrespect for the Constitution. The Senate on June 2nd approved of the child labor amendment and submitted it to the States. The minority which agitates for an amendment, which will weaken the Constitution, believes that their fight is half won when they disguise an inroad on the powers of the State by giving it an appealing title.

Its second section seeks to allay the fears of those States that resent further encroachments of the Federal power; but the menace is there. There has been a powerful lobby back of this move for the last ten years. An even more powerful lobby will be needed to win the approval for the necessary thirty-six States. The South will be against it, because it is a further invasion of the cherished but vanishing doctrine of State's rights, and because so many sections of the South are opposed to restrictions on child labor.—Advertiser

Congress Adjourns and the Country's Eyes Turn to G. O. P. Convention.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONGRESS adjourned on Saturday, and the country heaved one great sigh of relief. Business, which had been depressed, began to perk up; and stocks, which had been in something of a slump, regained some of their lost values. The people of the United States turned with interest, unmixing with excitement, toward Cleveland, where the Republican party was gathering for the purpose of nominating Calvin Coolidge for President.

In the closing days of the session, several pieces of projected legislation went by the boards. The McNary-Haugen bill designed for the relief of the farmers was defeated in the house by a vote of 224 to 154, and modifications of it were also rejected. The farm bloc did not wish any of the other farm relief bills passed, and then President Coolidge told the congressional leaders that he would not approve of any measure that included price fixing. That settled it for the present.

As for Muscle Shoals, that also went over until next session. The senate agriculture committee, reporting favorably the Norris bill providing government control of power from the site, denounced unapologetically the bill which would give the project to Henry Ford and exposed the financial fallacies of the Detroit offer. The report was written by Senator Norris, who took full advantage of the chance to say what he thought of the administration. Pointing to Ford's denunciations of Secretary of War Weeks and indirectly of the administration at the time the Gorgas plant was sold, the report said:

"To appease his anger a vacillating administration publicly announced that the amount received for the plant would be credited on the $5,000,000 Ford offered for Muscle Shoals if his bid was accepted by congress. This kindly favor, perhaps superinduced by other considerations, so pleased Mr. Ford that his anger at the administration was not only turned into love and admiration, but he became so violently friendly that he himself withdrew as a candidate for President and announced his support of the executive who made such liberal concessions."

Senators Heflin, Ladd, Smith, Harrison and Caraway submitted a minority report favoring the Ford bid, but the best they could do was to obtain unanimous consent to make Muscle Shoals the first order of business after the next session on December 3.

Senator McCormick's resolution proposing the twentieth amendment to the Constitution by which congress is empowered to control the labor of persons under eighteen years of age was passed by the senate, the vote being 61 to 23. The house approved of the proposed amendment last April, so it now goes to the states for ratification.

Sixty bills for the modification of the Volstead act were left reposing in the room of the house judiciary committee, despite the efforts of their sixty authors and of others who declare that 2.75 per cent beer should not be called intoxicating.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE took the tax reduction bill and the treasury department's analysis thereof on a week-end trip down the Potomac, and when he returned to the White House Monday he signed the measure. At the same time he issued a statement severely criticizing many features of the bill and pledging himself to do all he can in the next session of congress toward the passage of a tax bill "less political and more truly economic."

The President said that in its administrative features the bill represents generally an improvement over existing law; that it will provide sufficient revenue for the fiscal year 1925, and probably thereafter if unforeseen expenses do not arise; that the retroactive tax cut of 25 per cent is expected by the people, and should be promptly given, and that it is desirable to have a definite determination of the taxes as applying to 1924 incomes while the income is still being received. For these reasons he gave it his approval.

SO FAR as the Republican national committee could do so, everything was fixed up for the Cleveland convention. Frank W. Mondell, former congressman from Wyoming, was selected as permanent chairman and Charles B. Warren, ambassador to Mexico, was chosen to be chairman of the resolutions committee which builds the platform. Mr. Coolidge picked on Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, to present his name to the convention, and Doctor Burton accepted the grateful task. He told the press that he would speak not as a partisan but as a citizen and a friend and admirer of Mr. Coolidge.

Fred Upham of Chicago announced that he would resign from the post of treasurer of the party, and his election as national committeeman from Illinois was assured. Chairman Adams and Secretary Lockwood of the national committee also will retire. Roy O. West of Chicago will succeed the latter. He has been long prominent in politics and is even more silent than the President.

Naturally most of the pre-convention discussion was concerning the vice presidential nomination. There developed a strong demand that Frank O. Lowden be given the honor, and Mr. Coolidge let it be known that the Illinoisan would be "very acceptable" as his running mate.

No arrangements were announced for placing Senator Elihu Johnson in nomination for the Presidency, and the LaFollette headquarters in Washington said the Wisconsin senator's name would not be presented to the convention. His little block of delegates probably will vote for him to the end.

TURNING now to the Democrats, one reads with interest the statement by Franklin D. Roosevelt, manager for Gov. Al Smith, that the New York delegation as a whole will make no effort to have a dry plank inserted in the platform, nor will the New York Democratic organization sanction such an attempt.

Senator Ralston seemingly put himself out of the running by requesting the Indiana state convention to send an un instructed delegation to New York.

It is probable that Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana will be permanent chairman of the Democratic convention. George Brennan of Illinois is for him, asserting that "aside from geographical reasons, the distinguished record made by Senator Walsh in disclosing to the country scandals with-out parallel in the history of the nation, should make his selection inevitable." Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi has been selected as temporary chairman and the keynote speaker.

IN SOME respects the report of the senate oil committee, prepared by Senator Walsh and submitted Thursday, was surprisingly mild. It charged flagrant disregard of the law in the Sinclair and Doheny leases, which were declared to be "indefensibly wasteful" and based on a policy which congress alone had authority to determine. Former Secretary Fall's secret negotiation of the leases was described in disregard of the statutes, and his acceptance of $100,000 from Doheny was called "in the last degree reprehensible." The executive order by which President Harding transferred the oil reserves from the Navy to the Interior department was held in the report to have been illegal.

On the other hand, the report exonerated former Secretary of the Navy Denby and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of any part whatever in the negotiations leading to the leases, and declared that the committee found no facts of importance in support of the rumor that public officials had specu-lated in Doheny and Sinclair oil stocks. Furthermore, it said "the evidence failed to establish the existence" of any conspiracy between oil operators and others at the Republican national convention in 1920 for exploitation of public resources.

The sending of marines to drive claimants from Teapot Dome after the Sinclair lease had been signed was denounced "as a perfectly outrageous use of the armed forces of the United States," resorted to "to avoid a judicial inquiry into the validity of the Sinclair lease."

HARRY DAUGHERTY refused last week to testify before the senate committee that has been investigating him, so Chairman Brookhart—who has just been renominated by the Republicans of Iowa—drew up a partial report, and the future course of the inquiry will depend on the Supreme court decision as to the committee's powers. In a letter read by his attorney, Mr. Daugherty expressed his resentment against what he considered the unfair actions of the committee, and added: "At this point I take occasion to contradict and deny any inference, surmise or suspicion that I profited in any illegal, corrupt or unethical way, directly or indirectly, by reason of any activities of political associates or friends at any time; or that my conduct, either official or personal, was directly or indirectly influenced at any time, in any way, by venal and corrupt motives."

PREMIER POINCARÉ of France has resigned, and President Millerand has invited Edouard Herriot, leader of the radicals, to form a new ministry. But Millerand himself has up to the time of writing, refused stubbornly to comply with the demands of his opponents and get out of office, and the members of the left are not willing to form a government under Millerand's presidency. Paul Painlevé is the man the left bloc wants for president, and as a step toward that he was elected president of the chamber of deputies.

Opposition parties in Germany having been unable to get together for the formation of a government, President Ebert reappointed Chancellor Marx and his cabinet, despite the howls of the Communists and Nationalists. Marx told the reichstag that the Dawes report was "Germany's last chance of salvation" and that the government was prepared to receive the report as an unalterable and indivisible whole.

WHAT was at first reported to be a serious attempt at a revolution in Rumania turned out to be a peaceful demonstration by 10,000 peasants, led by General Averesco, who marched into Bucharest and presented a protest against the government of Premier Bratiano, and then quietly dispersed. The opposition to Bratiano is growing so strong that his resignation is predicted.

Albania, however, really has a revolution, led by Rexed Schajla. The rebels are reported to have captured Scutari and Skodra, and there was a rumor that they had taken Tirana, the capital. The fighting is fierce. In response to the request of the American minister, Vice Admiral Andrews, commanding American naval forces in European waters, was instructed to hold a warship in readiness to proceed to Durazzo.

CHANCELLOR SEIPEL of Austria was seriously wounded by a young Communist, and thereupon the Hungarian police announced that this attack was part of a vast plot for the assassination of King George of England, President Millerand of France, Chancellor Marx of Germany and other national leaders. The plot was discovered when the Hungarian police arrested a man named Zetaron, member of a secret anarchist death society with headquarters in Lobben, Austria, for an attempt to kill Regent Horthy.

OUR world encircling army aviators, after a pleasant stop in Japan, flew last week 500 miles over the China sea to Shanghai, where they were given a great welcome. They planned to start for Amoy on Saturday.

Bulletin Issued on Watermelons

Handling of Product Is Precarious on Account of Many Factors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Watermelons." That is the name of a new bulletin just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The subject of watermelons is a big one, but the author of this bulletin has covered the ground thoroughly. The handling of watermelons is extremely precarious, he says, on account of the many factors that govern their sale on the market. Overproduction is one of the chief causes of loss, but weather conditions at the market are perhaps a more important factor. Cool, rainy weather will cause breaks of the market, while clear, hot weather will invariably stimulate the demand. Considerable losses are also caused by diseases which have their origin on the farm, but develop during transit.

Increase Yield and Quality.

Under existing conditions any decided increase in the acreage planted to watermelons for shipment, for the present at least, would be unwise, but there is great opportunity for improving cultural methods and for increasing both the yield and the quality of the melons. Watermelon as a rule should not be grown on the same land oftener than once in ten years, in order to avoid losses from disease. Plant on new land wherever possible and avoid the use of barn or feed-lot manure where either refuse melons or hay cut from melon fields have been fed during the previous season.

They respond to the use of commercial fertilizer, the amount being governed by the character of the soil and the cost of the fertilizer. Melons grown for the market should be thinned to approximately two on each vine or hill, in order to get marketable size, the pruning being done when the vines are dry. The vines themselves should be cut back or pruned.

Watermelons should not be gathered until reasonably ripe, but not over-ripe. They should be clipped from the vines by means of a sharp knife, leaving the stems as long as possible, and hauled to the shipping point without injury to the skin or bruising. Melons should always be hauled and loaded into the cars the same day that they are clipped from the vines.

Ship in Clean Cars.

Watermelons should be shipped only in clean cars provided with at least three inches of dry bedding, and in case of box cars or ventilated cars a lining of paper around the walls is desirable, although not absolutely essential. In sections where stem-end rot is prevalent, watermelons should be handled with extreme care to avoid injury. Only melons with fresh green stems should be loaded, and the stems should be recut and treated to prevent the development of stem-end rot in transit. Melons should be handled carefully throughout, snugly packed in the cars, and should reach the market without unnecessary delay.

The profits accruing from watermelons growing are not large; therefore all items of expense in their production should be kept as low as possible consistent with good cultural and handling methods. Sudden expansion of the acreage planted is undesirable, and usually results in extremely low prices.

A copy of this bulletin, Farmers' Bulletin No. 1394, Watermelons, may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Night Pastures Favored for Cattle and Horses

A night pasture for dairy cattle and horses saves some time every morning and good effects can be noticed on the stock. The cows will do much better if they can spend the night on pasture from the time the ground has warmed up until early fall. If isn't possible to have a night pasture on every farm. In such a case, it is better to spend a little time rounding the stock up in the morning than to not get started at all.

Some object to letting their work horses out nights on pasture. A horse may sweat a little more, but seem to keep in better health the year round and takes much less care when given the run of a pasture. This does not mean to not give them an evening feed. We give our horses the regular feed in the barn when at work. On idle days they are turned on pasture and given a feed at night if they come up. When a horse can roll on the pasture and he requires very little currying.

Carbonic Acid Vapor Is Very Poisonous in Silo

Carbonic acid gas is formed through the fermentation of corn in a silo. This gas is very poisonous. Being heavier than air, it will settle at the bottom of the silo and, unless some provision is made to let this flow out of the silo, it is dangerous for persons to enter. In the case of an above ground silo, leaving the door open at the silage level permits this gas to escape, and there is no danger. With a pit silo this escape is impossible, and the proper method to pursue is to start up the silage cutter and blower so as to agitate the air and mix good air with the carbonic acid. Another method has been to take a branch of a tree and stir up this carbonic acid gas so that it will disappear into the air.

Softening Waters for Use by Orchardists

Where Liquid Is Too Hard Oil Will Separate Out.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On account of the low cost of the 2 per cent lubricating oil emulsion developed by the United States Department of Agriculture for the control of the San Jose scale, this spray is coming into extended use by orchardists. Inquiries received at the department indicate that many of the waters used in preparing the diluted spray are more or less hard and cause the oil to separate from the water.

Fruit growers contemplating the use of the 2 per cent homemade emulsion or commercial products made according to the government formula should ascertain whether the water to be used for spraying purposes is sufficiently hard to cause the separation of the oil and water when diluted in the spray tank. This can be readily determined by mixing three teaspoonsful of the homemade stock solution, or of the commercial article, in a pint of the water to be used in a glass jar and placing it aside for a few hours. If no oil rises to the top, the water does not require softening. If, however, the oil separates out, the hardness of the water must be corrected if effective results are to be secured in the control of the scale. The water can be softened in different ways, but a convenient and inexpensive method is to make some weak bordeaux mixture for use in the spray. The bordeaux should be made according to the following formula:

|-----------------|------------|
| Bluestone ..... | 1 pound    |
| Lime .....      | 1 "        |
| Water .....     | 50 gallons |

Add the bordeaux mixture to the spray tank while filling with water, adding just before the tank is full six gallons of the stock oil emulsion required to give the two per cent of oil in 200 gallons of spray. The spray should be kept well agitated during application. The bordeaux mixture made from one pound of bluestone and one pound of lime is the proper amount for 200 gallons of spray. When less quantities of the spray are required, as 50 gallons,  $\frac{3}{4}$  pound of bluestone and  $\frac{3}{4}$  pound of lime will make sufficient bordeaux.

Make Quality Hay When Alfalfa Blooms Appear

Alfalfa should be cut for hay about the time the blooms appear or at the time the young shoots start out from the crown. The mower should be equipped with a shoe so as not to cut too low as this will damage the crop. The hay should remain in the swath only long enough to wilt good, then it should be raked with a tedder, or side delivery rake, and allowed to cure in the windrow, rather than in the swath. If exposed to the sun too long in the swath, the leaves will cure and become brittle before the stems are cured. This will stop the leaves from performing the duty of drawing the moisture from the stems, and that will result in dangerous hay if it is baled before properly curing. When properly cured in the windrow the leaves, which constitute about 60 per cent of the feeding value of the hay, are saved. Of course alfalfa can be cured in the swath, the same as any other hay, but it is important that it be thoroughly cured, or it may cause death from feeding, or possibly, spontaneous combustion—which will likely burn the place where it is stored. However, there is no excuse for this if care is taken in curing.

FARM NOTES

Weeds are robbers of both plant food and moisture.

Plant corn every ten days for a succession of roasting ears.

Low-analysis fertilizers cost just as much to mix, bag and deliver as the high-analysis grades.

A homelike home and a homely home are not the same. Sometimes a little shabby makes the second into the first.

The typewriter is also a valuable farm implement, for it gives the farmer a carbon copy of each business communication.

After all, the secret of success in farming lies in the proper cultivation of only the acres that can be made to produce large yields.

With things so high, the farmer who puts out a good garden for next summer is likely to be well repaid, even if not a thing is sold out of it.

Take all the time that is necessary to get the farm machinery properly adjusted. It will save horse power and time and will enable you to do better work.

Of 2,690 grain marketing associations reporting to the United States Department of Agriculture, 78 per cent buy feed for members; 73 per cent buy fuel, and 24 per cent buy containers.

Reports from 753 associations handling fruits and vegetables indicate that 55 per cent buy containers for their members; 40 per cent fertilizers, and 25 per cent buy spraying materials.

HARKEN YE, AMBITIOUS WIVES!

A husband's advice to his wife how to succeed is often startling to the wife. Sometimes it betrays a tonishing ignorance. In which case may it be that husband is blind in the near eye? Or that wife's method, like those of high-powered machines, are unusually quick in action? Judge for yourself in the case of Helen S. Wright of Pittsfield, Mass.

Charles Wright, Republican district attorney, was up for re-election last November. Democratic sentiment was running, to the mind of the Republican fathers, dangerously strong. Many conservative women, nominally Republican, had never voted. An invitation came—never mind how—Mrs. Wright to speak to, and perhaps organize these women.

"You'd better write out your talk, let me criticize it, and then help you learn to deliver it," the husband volunteered. "You know even a few women's votes may count this time!" "I'll speak better extemporaneously," was the reply which sent a worried gentleman to this meeting and a less worried but much puzzled one to many others.

The 5,000 majority given Mr. Wright was conceded to be the woman's vote. A scant 500 in this district saved Senator Lodge, whom Mrs. Wright did not campaign for. Years ago when her son was well started in school, civic movement needing money, Mrs. Wright, who was well educated, accurate and a successful housekeeper. Out of just those moderate gifts, one is to believe her, grew her attempt at a cookbook of the best recipes of the best housewives of Pittsfield. The book was published. It was well made. It made money. She could—after fashion, at least—write.

Next came a collection of old, quality and accurately dressed costumes of past ages. The collection, presented to women's clubs, taught her to meet audiences of this sort without fuss or feathers. She has told me, that her busy husband never missed her. At present her women's organizations seek at Wright for lectures. "The great fishing house of MacMillan asks the manuscripts of her books, 'Who Who' lists her among the famous and politicians high in office seek advice on party plans.

THE PICK OF 70,000 JOBS

When the engineer corps was mobilized with thousands of young engineers and engineering jobs had to be brought together, they devised unique employment service. Jobs men were asked whether they were willing to investigate positions, others while they waited for the own to turn up. They went back, shoulders squared, to interview leading contractors, personnel directors and bosses. Near-hungry though they might be, they were representatives of the service on legitimate business, not beggars hunting meal tickets for themselves. They seldom went less long. Some man was sure to say "Engineer yourself? Thought I couldn't tackle this job just now, Brown."

Out in Fargo there is a young man who knows all the jobs in North Dakota—and sticks to her own. In 1919 she went to Washington, D. C. a government training school for public employment office technique, that time it was easy to get something like this: "Oh, Miss Jones has technique, but you know woman is ever trusted with the operation of an office handling women." Mistle Bowe of Fargo has no part in these "sore-head" sessions. She was remembered to have gone back home chiefly because she seemed to possess the old-fashioned faculty of attending to her business and doing it well.

A year or so ago a visitor to North Dakota came home praising a clubhouse outside of Fargo which Business Women's club had opened. "There was a quiet little woman called Mrs. Bowe who seemed largely responsible for its success," the visitor remembered.

A recent letter from Fargo brought fresh news of Mrs. Bowe. Most of the public employment offices were closed soon after the war. Mrs. Bowe's managed to keep on her feet, serving. Now, the only state open the year round, it is a supervision over the others. Interviews personally most of the 600 people who pass through the office annually. Ninety per cent of them are men—and outdoor men at that. "Find work in your home," Grow with it. If you can outgrow blizzard opportunity in a big city, will always find you," she says. "Women who come to her for help."

ALBERTA AND RAY

SYNOPSIS.—In a low drinking place in the Japanese town of Atsugiri, Kiyama, disolute son of the wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Thunder Gate, boasts of a girl he is to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following a night, in the place, a drunken white man, speaking perfect Japanese, is left unconscious. Kiyama, dreading his father's anger, sees a way of escape. He changes clothes with the unconscious white man (to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance), leaving a note of explanation. Leaving, Kiyama is robbed and slain. The white man, as Kiyama, is taken, unconscious, to the house of Aochi. His name is Robert Wells. Wells awakes bewildered, but to familiar scenes, in Aochi's house. Aochi, almost sightless from age, does not perceive the deception. He had determined his unworthy son should be put to death, but Wells' deportment leads him to think a reformation is possible. Aochi dies that day. Wells finds Kiyama's note, and understands. Friends remind him of a bargain he has made, to buy a girl. He goes to the temple and purchases the girl, to all appearances white, though the priests assure him she is Chinese blood. She tells him she is white—all white—and begs him to spare her. The narrative goes back to Wells' youth, motherless son of a missionary in a Japanese village. His father sends the boy to America to be educated. James Sanderson, wealthy San Francisco contractor, welcomes the boy, his sister's son.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

"There was, now—I remember it as it were yesterday—my class in . . . oh, well, that's not important . . . the professor's name was . . . at all events, 'twas this way. There were benches in my day, none of your comfortable armchairs to doze in—and don't you ever let me hear of your sleeping in lecture, young man!—and three-four of us sat on a bench at the rear of the room. Some sentiment was afoot. We were warned, were cautioned again and again. At last the poor man dropped his notes on the desk and shouted, 'That bench is out!'"

"And what did we do?"

"Dutifully, Bob asked.

"Blissfully! 'We picked up that bench and carried it out of the room, and returned every man of us. I was . . . yes, I was a scamp. Never let me hear of your plugging the poor men's heads, you, Bob!"

"Did he would wag his head, thinking of the sad rogue that he had been. There were many such tales. One day another, increasing in force. And I took them in, one by one, and learned them, although the tag was passed upon each, 'Don't let me catch you in such a trick!' Sanderson, when he thought of these at all, considered them in the light of a moral lesson. He was warning the boy.

Sanderson found time for long walks with his nephew. He treated him as an equal in age as a man, thus, in his Uncle Jim Bob found comradeship, expressed affection; all of which which his embittered father had withheld. The weeks before Bob entered college were as full as the days' trunks. Not until he was ready to take his entrance examinations did Sanderson grow serious.

"Young Bob," he told him, "don't just pass. Pass with honors. I expect you to—well, fling about a bit, habit of work—in working hours. He topped his class. His solutions of engineering problems were clear and lucid. His mathematics gave the professor a sensible paper to correct." But before the first half of his freshman year was over, it was noted that Wells could go to bed at three and get up as fresh as a buttercup. Not that this was derided. Envious, rather, Sanderson's tales of the good old days bore fruit. Was there an all-night session at "I'll take two cards!" Robert was there. The swimming coach discovered him as a find; since he broke the hundred-yard record for the Coast after not having been in bed the night before, who could say anything?

Then, too, there was Alberta Hayward. Say, but she wanted a fellow who could eat.

Miss Hayward was a class above Wells. She had heard rumors of the intrusion of her "Japanese cousin," and liked them not at all. The big house had, for years, been "her very own." Uncle Sandy, likewise, was her special property, to be considered in terms of checks over and above the simple allowance he sent her. Which was right. Hadn't her own father been Uncle Sandy's partner (in unproductive years, before the Sanderson company occupied the top floor of the Sanderson building) and hadn't Uncle Sandy promised her father that Alberta would be as his own daughter? Well!

Just as Wells was an integral portion of the men's affairs, so he fought shy of the girls. Before he went to his first "informal," he must rehearse his procedure, carefully in his own room.

"Look here," one of his mates warned him. "What are you afraid of them for? I'll bet you'd edge off from a petting party. Don't be so stand-offish, kid."

"I am? Bob said, nonplussed. Then, grinning: "Well, you watch me go after your little Margie. She won't have cause to complain." He patted the other's arm. "Arms around and . . . see. Is that what you mean?"

Beyond a doubt that was what he meant. "You attend to your affairs," was the answer. "You know good and well that the girls are cuckoo about you. Leave my Marg alone!" And he swept away angrily.

Bob, dumfounded, cocked his feet upon another chair for meditation. The fellow was jealous, just because he'd mentioned his precious Margie. What difference did she make? Just a . . . girl. Suppose that they were all in Japan, where girls were sold in bunches, two for a quarter, like asparagus? And mad about it, too!

"Well, I will be shot!" he muttered aloud. "I will—I certainly will be shot!" And he began to laugh. "Lord 'mighty!"

But presently, at the thought of impending affair, his grininess returned, and he wished himself well out of it. He resolved upon a line of conduct for the evening. For one thing, he would not carelessly to Margie when he first saw her, and it would be a good idea to do the same to the girls of all his friends, unless he were to accumulate a series of personal combats. He would not dance with them. He would not go near them. No, sir!

Bob carried out his rehearsed projects with precision. He avoided each known girl. He gave Miss Marjorie a cool nod studied to perfection during his lengthy rehearsal. Thereafter, all cognizance of the girls evaporated, nevertheless, many a demure eye was flashed in his direction, to all of which he was superlatively indifferent.

With Alberta it was different. Before he approached her, he was aware, with a feeling of warm consciousness, of her flirtatious habit of never looking up at her partner, but keeping her eyes concealed beneath downcast lashes.

Rather solemnly—and in accordance with his outlined intention—he danced with her. He found that as she danced she talked, in a richly husky voice that was . . . he had no adjective to describe it.

It was with bated breath that he offered a whole-hearted platitude as an inspiration. It was—he had never used it before, nor heard it used—"I . . . I . . . could dance with you . . ."

He got no further.

Alberta's huskiness increased. "Well, do you mean—you want to dance with me all the time—all evening?"

He had not meant that. Said so.

She looked up gently, touched by his earnestness. Bob met her eyes, and found in them something that caught at his throat. She looked instantly away and, turning, drew him out of the room.

"Come!" she said. "Let's talk!"

It came easily, naturally. He found himself, under her able questionings, explaining, taking her for a journey to the East; he was ridiculously pleased, and not at all in confusion. He went so far as to forget all of his Oriental cant and tell of his hopes for the future.

Be sure that Alberta missed nothing. She was used to dealing with men. Here were no imaginings. Here was truth. She thought to herself, "If what he says is so—and it must be—here is Uncle Sandy's"—she balked at the word, substituting "favorite"—"and, when the time comes, it will be Mr. Robert Wells."

The few scattered allusions to her Uncle Sandy, and Bob's place in the great business, that had been dropped, all unconscious of effect, brought up vividly that she must arrange her scales, place contents in each tray, and speedily discern which weighed the heavier. If she might . . . temporize. Why not? Wasn't it done every day?

She must be careful. Cautious. Give Bob nothing to repeat, jubilantly, to Uncle Sandy until she was certain. In the meantime . . .

She smiled at Wells.

"They'll think we've eloped—and that's passé now, Bob. Come . . . doesn't that rag-time set you a-swaying?"

Bob danced, a happy dance.

We now inject Raymond Williams into the piece. Of his personality it is needless—or fruitless—to remark: visibly, description may be used to great length, for he was (and knew it) undeniably attractive. As for the rest:

Behind a clump of scrub oak, high above the campus, the question of Robert Wells was being discussed, with extreme dissatisfaction on one side, and possibly both.

"What if you want to run with that Indian for, 'Berta?"

Alberta looked her fingers round Raymond Williams' more comfortably. "He isn't an Indian, Ray. You know that. He's . . . of course, he isn't really, but he looks a little like one, being so dark . . . A Jap, if you must be foreign."

"I meant that he's a wild Indian. Into everything. Called to the dean's office yesterday."

"Ray's jealous." She gave him a fleeting glimpse of provocative eyes.

"Of him?"

"Him. There are a good many girls that envy me, Ray."

"I suppose that none of them ever envied you?" He looked crossly at his disengaged hand.

"Fishing, Ray?" Alberta moved a bit closer. "Is it so very, very terrible?"

"I'm Not Afraid of Him—but—You Ought to Be."

He for a girl to . . . I do believe, Ray, that you're afraid of him!"

Virtue overspread his face, plous virtue, causing him to open his eyes even wider.

"I'm not afraid of him . . . but . . . you ought to be."

"Hm. I've always taken care of myself."

There was no one near; they were out of hearing of any chance passer-by, but he bent his head and whispered solemnly: "You don't know what I know, 'Berta . . . I'll tell you a secret."

"Well—gave a party up in his room. He'd promised a . . . lot of the fellows to give a regular Jap party some night. Dressed himself all up in kimono like a Jap. Had little cups of wine. Two of 'em made you forget your name. The party was so noisy that even a cop knocked on the door downstairs and told 'em to ease up, or he'd have to report 'em."

"Then, when it was late, and all the fellows were feeling pretty good, what do you think happened?"

"What, Ray?" encouragingly.

"He . . . there came into the room. out of the big closet, I guess, a Jap girl, and she danced and sang and didn't know where she came from, but Wells insisted that he had to take her back to the station, and put her on the last train for the city! Pretty toxy old bird, that Wells! Just suppose the news leaked out! There never was a stunt like that pulled on this campus."

"You've been listening," Alberta accused. "Stories always grow, you know."

He gave her an injured look. "No such thing!" he blurted. "I was there myself!"

When she had controlled her laughter: "It couldn't have been so awful, Ray, or you wouldn't have been there . . . that wasn't any crime."

"But what could a nice girl expect from such a fellow?"

"He has always been lovely to me, dear."

"I'll bet he has," Williams said glumly. "Too darn nice. Just what you girls see in him—"

"It isn't you to run a fellow down. But, Ray, can't you see? Are you blind? He and Uncle Sandy are as thick . . . as thick . . . as . . ."

"Say it, 'Berta."

"He will be a thief K—"

"If 'Berta has to be the wife of a poor man. Don't you love me at all?"

"Berta isn't going to be the wife of a poor man," she said, gravely. "I do love you, Ray. But . . . you've provoked me. You haven't been good company . . ."

Does Bob fall in love with Alberta? And Alberta with Bob?

The DAIRY

BETTER COWS QUITE ESSENTIAL IN DAIRY

Dr. David Friday, formerly president of the Michigan State Agricultural college, recently pointed out a fact that is well known, but, like lots of well-known facts, seldom appreciated. The scrub dairyman gets 120,000 pounds of milk a year from 40 cows averaging 3,000 pounds each. He would be better off with 30 averaging 4,000 pounds each because he would get the same milk check with one-fourth less work and overhead. The better dairyman uses 15 cows producing 8,000 pounds each to get his milk check, while the really successful dairyman gets 120,000 pounds of milk from 12 cows averaging 10,000 pounds a year.

While the successful dairyman gets his 120,000 pounds from 12 cows in 40, thus cutting his overhead, labor and feed cost by nearly three-fourths, he has an added advantage which has recently been proved by the United States dairy division. The dairy division finds that cows producing 100 pounds of fat in a year made an average return above feed cost of $10 each. Cows producing 400 pounds of fat in a year made an average return above feed cost of $108. Thus it seems that it only took four times as great a production to make the cow ten times more profitable.

With these figures in mind it is very easy to see why there are failures in the dairy business and why, also, there are such marked successes.

The way to get and keep a profitable herd is to everlastingly weed out the culls, employ better methods by keeping up to date on the new feeds and methods that make greater profit and, lastly but by no means least, to use good, straight pure bred dairy bulls with production records back of them.

H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman for the Colorado Dairy Commission.

Test Cream Separators, Is Advice of Expert

Cream separators that have not been tested for some time may be cheating their owners out of a considerable sum every week. That can be avoided, for skim milk testing will reveal the honesty of the most delectful separator, according to Q. A. Iverson of the Iowa state college.

"Surprising results have been obtained wherever fairly large numbers of hand separators have been tested," Mr. Iverson says. "In Worth county, five separators in one cow-testing association were found to be losing excessive amount of butterfat. We feel certain that there are many separators in every community that are losing butterfat for their owners. An annual loss of several dollars can easily result if the machine is not regulated or run properly."

Skim milk testing can be done by the Babcock method with a special double-necked test bottle. In place of the 17.5 cubic centimeters of acid required for whole milk, 20 are used for skim milk. Otherwise, practically the same procedure is followed as in testing whole milk. The test can be made by the farmers themselves, or, if this is not convenient, by the local creamery.

Making Better Butter

Whether the product is made at home or at the creamery, matters little, cream should be clean flavored to make good butter. To obtain practically all of the cream from the milk and have it in the best shape for butter making requires the use of a good cream separator. Further, the thorough cleaning and sterilizing of all dairy utensils is essential to the production of a product having a good flavor.

Aid Dairy Community

There are two means by which the dairy cow population of a community may be increased, by breeding through the use of pure bred bulls from proved ancestry, and by importing from other sections mature cows ready for service at the pail. In the latter case of purchase of cows, we have two alternatives—importing animals from other sections, and finding the animals within the state.

Creamery Activities

Buying activities of 308 creameries indicate that 29 per cent of the organization buy feeds, 25 per cent buy containers, and 22 per cent buy fuel. The complete list of commodities purchased by the various organizations include building material, fencing, hardware, implements, general merchandise, and miscellaneous products in addition to the commodities specifically enumerated.

Cream Needs Good Care

As hot weather approaches the cream must receive better care on the average farm. As soon after separating as possible, cool the cream by setting the can in cold water. Never mix the fresh cream with the cream from previous separation until cooled as low as possible. Do not keep cream too long at the farm. Poor stale cream will not make good butter. If the creamery cannot make good butter the average price of cream will be lower than if good butter can be made.

THE YERKES OBSERVATORY

To avoid the fine and numerous particles of dust and smoke which naturally hover in the air over a big city and cut down the effectiveness of the observations, the jarring—even though minute—which upsets the calculations of the observers, and the disturbing reflections from the night illumination, powerful telescopes are usually stationed at points where these conditions do not have to be reckoned with.

Accordingly, the great Yerkes observatory (connected with the University of Chicago)—one of the greatest of all the astronomical laboratories on earth, is perched upon the crest of a bluff above beautiful Lake Geneva, near the town of Williams Bay, Wis.—about seventy miles northwest of Chicago.

In the largest of the three domes which surround the observatory is mounted the world's largest refracting telescope. It is also the busiest telescope, being in use both day and night the year round, weather conditions permitting.

In the center of this dome, which is 75-feet in diameter on the inside, balanced across the great pier which rests upon a solid foundation of concrete and supports the weight, is the barrel of this tremendous instrument. It is 62 feet long and weighs about 12,000 pounds. Each of the two great lenses which fit inside of this barrel are forty inches across.

The barrel of this instrument can be swung around in any direction and raised or lowered to any angle; the floor of the dome is movable and the entire roof of the dome revolves—all to the end that the observer can observe in any direction and at any angle necessary in order to properly perform the particular job in hand. After the barrel has been focused it can be adjusted to follow and keep in view the object under observation, relieving the observer of having to stop occasionally and focus his telescope. Adjustment as small as one-one-hundredth of an inch can be made.

With this telescope observers have been enabled to determine, with great exactness, the positions of stars in clusters and the distances between them. Stellar photographs taken, using the telescope as a camera, are among the best yet secured. The brightness of stars also is measurable with this instrument.

THE CHICAGO STOCK YARDS

The Union Stock yards in Chicago handle so much stock that when one hunters about the yards, it seems as though all the farmers in the country had decided to ship all their stock to Chicago at the same time, and that it all arrived on the day you were there.

Established in 1865, these yards have grown to be the largest in America, if not in the world. The great bulk of our live stock, especially hogs, is raised in the states between the Allegheny and the Rocky mountains. Railroad construction was converging toward and expanding from the city at the southern end of Lake Michigan. Chicago, therefore, was the logical location for America's greatest live stock mart.

Naturally, the production of live stock has increased many fold during the last 57 years. This fact, plus the scope of the territory from which these yards draw patronage, accounts for the condition mentioned in the first paragraph, and the staggering figures which follow.

These yards today contain about 10,000 pens and cover an area of about 320 acres.

In 1885, 613 cattle, 17,764 hogs, and 1,433 sheep were received. The average number of head of stock handled daily during a recent five-year period was: Cattle, 10,936; calves, 2,338; hogs, 26,753; sheep, 14,805; horses, 212; a total of 55,044 head or 936 cars every 24 hours—an average of 39 cars per hour, day and night.

The receipts of stock vary widely between seasons and because of market fluctuations. The largest receipts recorded on any one day, according to recently compiled statistics, were: Cattle, 49,128, on November 16, 1908; calves, 9,528, on March 25, 1920; hogs, 96,904, on November 29, 1918; sheep, 17,792, on October 16, 1911; horses, 3,228, on January 11, 1904.

The greatest aggregate value of all stock received during any one year was in 1918 when this total reached the astounding figure of $904,715,857, an average of $2,478,672 week days and Sunday, too, throughout the year. During that year, 3,789,922 cattle, 657,707 calves, 8,614,190 hogs, 4,639,736 sheep, and 87,820 horses were received—an average of 3,273 head of live stock every hour, day and night, for the entire year.

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, JUNE 19, 1924.

NUMBER 41

OUR LAST APPEAL

The most important time for the successful poisoning of the boll weevil is right now on hand. Kill the first comers and control the situation. That is the logical thing to do.

Let us say right here that we are in no manner shape nor form connected with the sale of any weevil exterminator and it would not benefit us one nickel if ten million pounds was disposed of in Chilton county, but we watched the fertilizer sale this year very closely and we know, that if our farmers fail to make a good cotton crop this year that fearfully hard times are going to await them, as well as all the rest of us, this fall when these excessive fertilizer bills fall due and all of the cotton money has to go away from us to meet these obligations.

It is a proven fact, by ten years of boll weevil experience in the cotton belt, that the weevil can, and does eliminate, to a large extent, the ravages of the weevil and makes it possible to produce a fair crop of cotton in spite of him.

These being the facts of the case, it looks like blind folly for a farmer to sit by and allow the boll weevil to destroy the fruits of his hard labor without an effort to stand him off.

A comparatively small outlay of money and labor is all that is required to poison the weevil and it does look like the practice of poisoning would be universal instead of being so rarely the fact.

This is, perhaps, the last appeal we shall make to the farmer of this subject. We feel like we have discharged our duty to them, as well as to the public at large on this subject.

The whole situation resolves itself in our minds to just this: Poison the weevil and make a fair cotton crop. Do not poison and come out in debt next fall after having put in a hard year of work.

We may be wrong but we are from Missouri.

MR. J. D. FULMER DEAD

Mr. Jeff Davis Fulmer, aged 62, years who resided two and one half miles west of Clanton, died from acute indigestion last Saturday and was buried Sunday at Poplar Springs cemetery, Rev. W. W. Robinson officiating at the grave.

Undertaker Martin was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

CLANTON VS. ALL STARS

The Base Ball Game Last Thursday Was the Real Thing

Our honest opinion is that on last Thursday afternoon, on the local diamond, we witnessed the best game of base ball that was pulled off in Alabama that day—and very probably, any other day this season.

Not even the big leagues can put on any better or more thrilling ball playing than was handed out to the large bunch of fans who witnessed the game last Thursday. It was simply a perfect exhibition of the great national sport.

Both teams not only demonstrated the fact that they were thorough masters of the game, but that they were also clean sportsmen and real gentlemen. It is a delightful and refreshing experience to watch such high class, clean ball playing as that given us last Thursday. The Chilton County News extends its most sincere congratulations to each individual member of each team for their superb playing and genteel conduct.

The game finally went to Clanton, but up until the winning score was made, no one could even guess who the winner would be.

Clanton scored the first run of the game in the sixth inning and no other run was made until the first half of the ninth, when the All Stars made one run and tied the score. The game then was continued until the last half of the eleventh, when Clanton scored again and won the game, by a 2 to 1 victory.

The strain on the fans as the game progressed and the tension grew, was frightful and when Clanton finally broke the tie with the run that won, pandemonium broke loose and hats, caps, umbrellas and all imaginable detached apparel almost darkened the air.

Following is the score by innings:
All Stars, 000 000 001 00—1
Clanton, 000 001 000 01—2

CLANTON VS. TALLASSEE

The Clanton base ball team went over to Tallassee last Monday and crossed bats with that hifty bunch over there.

The goddess of good luck that has been smiling on our boys during the entire season, deserted them Monday and a real full grown jink took her place.

The result was a score of 5 to 3 in favor of Tallassee, although our team had defeated them without trouble a couple of weeks ago.

Every ball team in the world has its days when the breaks fall against them and they have to lose.

REMEMBER THE FOURTH

Arrangements are Being Perfected to Guarantee a Big Day. Noted Speakers Already Secured

Everything, even the weather man's working favorably for the big celebration here on the fourth.

Hon. Bibb Graves, of Montgomery, who is to be our next governor, has agreed to give us an address that day and it is a no-brainer fact that when ever he talks you always hear some thing. He is the coming man of V.

Then the justly famous F. Willis Barnett, now a big cog wheel in the mental machinery that gets out the Birmingham News, the "S. G. N.," has consented to be with us also on that day and deliver one of his able and inimitable talks that always interest, instruct and entertain his hearers.

You can not afford to miss either of these addresses, so come early and be prepared to take in the whole works.

A SPLENDID TRIBUTE

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

I wonder if the people of Clanton realize the fact there has grown up in their midst a lovely woman endowed with a voice which in its melodious flow might be deemed the very echo of the spirit of song.

It was my privilege on Monday afternoon, to listen to a short recital by Miss Roberta Curry, as in the home of her parents she sang with sweetest notes and with rare skill the highest order to Classical music as well as some of the old songs so dear to our hearts. It was an hour of enchantment and rarest pleasure and I could but thank God that he had given to the world one by the use of her talent which has been cultivated, could so move upon the heart as to make all things fairer and sweeter, modestly, unaffectedly and graciously she sang to give pleasure to a veteran, and with an audience of but three hearers rendered a program that was worthy of the plaudits of a multitude.

Years ago the writer listened to Patti, the famous song bird, as she stirred the hearts of hundreds as for as an encore, she sang the same song. This is one time when I am convinced that "Comparisons are not odious."

In the zenith of her fame Patti, as she melted the hearts of her hearers with the old song, were never more soul stirring nor more perfectly rendered than were those of Miss Roberta.

I pray that she may live long to glorify the world with her voice, and bring sun shine into the lives of those who have the privilege of listening to sweetest song as it issues from her lips.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Last Friday Mr. A. L. Taylor and wife were attempting to climb that awful hill, that makes Knights Ferry famous, in their Ford, when the gears stripped and the car began to run backwards, down the hill with Mr. Taylor entirely helpless, so as checking it was concerned.

He realized the imminent danger at once and told his wife to jump. She did so and saved herself, but before he could follow her, the car cut across the road and turned turtle, catching Mr. Taylor under it.

His wife ran for help and luckily obtained the services of the ferryman, who chanced to be on this side. During the time required to secure help, Mr. Taylor held the weight of the car mainly upon his right shoulder and must have suffered fearfully.

When help arrived, the car was pryed up and Mr. Taylor rescued from his perilous position. The car was just about demolished.

Mr. Taylor is up and about but is still very stiff and sore from the effects of his very narrow escape from death.

HOME BURNED

We regret to learn that the nice and well equipped home of Mr. J. L. Messer, Verbena route 1, was burned last Thursday. This is quite a loss to our worthy citizen, Mr. Messer. He is a nephew of Reverend C. D. Messer of Clanton.

HORRIBLE DEATHS

On the front page of a daily paper last week we noticed an account of three automobile accidents that point a painful moral and reflect horribly on the possibilities of the social conditions that exist now.

Three wives died in these accidents and each one of them was away from home and husband "spending the summer" while hubby remained at his post in the heated city and footed the bills in the heated city and footed the bills in the heated city and footed the bills in the heated city.

Worse than that was the fact that each of the accidents occurred out on lonely roads, in the small hours of the night and their companions, in each case, were men whose names, indicated no relationship to these wives.

Besides, in each case the rescuers found bottles of wine and other liquors mingled in with the remains.

What do you suppose were the last fleeting thought that flashed through the minds of these unfaithful wives, as grim death made the count that terminated their joy rides here and their chance for repentance hereafter?

Do you suppose their souls were ready to meet God at the judgement bar? Did they feel satisfied that "society" would throw a mantle of "perfectly good" excuses over their memory and the shocking manner of their death?

Thousands of women play this game and get by with it but, now and then, inexorable death steps in and strips the flimsy curtain of indecency and turns the light of truth upon such episodes as these. Justice does not always sleep and, now and then we imagine, that even the devil enjoys a ghastly joke like these.

A Resume of the More Important Events of Interest Condensed To An Epitomized Form.

Mrs. J. F. Halliburton of Sheffield, is suffering from a broken arm as the result of an automobile accident as she was traveling from Birmingham in a car in company with Mr. Halliburton, their son and John Samples of Florence. Young Samples was driving the car when near Cullman the car plunged down a 30-foot embankment in the water a depth of five feet. Mr. and Mrs. Halliburton were pinned beneath the car. Samples and Frank Halliburton, the son, rescued the couple.

The city water department of Gadsden has just completed the laying of 10,000 feet of six-inch mains in the western part of the city, making water connections for a number of homes and establishing 12 fire hydrants in a section heretofore without protection. About 2,000 feet of 10-inch pipe is to be laid into Alabama City to connect with its large distributing system, thus giving that city a water service equal to that enjoyed by Gadsden, according to officials.

A thorough test of Alabama's ancient blue laws is to be made in the high courts by some of the business men of Gadsden who were convicted on the charge of keeping their store open on Sunday. It is said that counsel for the defendants will set up the plea that the law is discriminatory and that it is also unjust. Demurrers filed and overruled also indicate that the drawing of the indictments will be attacked. Most of the 40 odd defendants pleaded guilty and accepted fines of $10 each.

The attempt of the state highway commission to divert the Montgomery-Birmingham highway through the town of Prattville, adding about a mile and a half to the distance, has been disapproved by United States District Engineer R. E. Toms. The state highway body first located the road to pass a short distance east of Prattville with a spur to the town. Later, upon Prattville citizens agreeing to pay the extra cost, the commission voted to route the road through the town.

A large quantity of war trophies, estimated at between 15 and 30 carloads, will be available for shipment into Alabama at this state's share of World War trophies, according to announcement by Adj. Gen. Hartley A. Moon. The trophies include a wide variety of articles, cannon, including big howitzers; caissons, machine guns, rifles, helmets, Ulan lances and other articles.

The Alabama officers reserve association will probably hold its annual convention in Tuscaloosa at the same time as the state legion convention meet there July 3, 4, and 5. About 200 are members of the organization and are composed of officers commissioned in the United States army, but not in active service. Col. John S. Sewell, of Birmingham is head of the association.

Ed Kinney, negro, exchanged a probable penitentiary sentence of from one to twenty years for a $50 fine when a Jefferson county jury changed his mind and convicted him of petit larceny after it had previously announced a conviction for grand larceny involving the theft of 307 yards of silk.

Alabama is building roads equal to those being built in North Carolina, according to W. S. Keller, state highway engineer, who with members of the highway commission recently returned from North Carolina, where they attended a convention of the American Road Builders' association at Greensboro, N. C.

Organization of a federal intermediate credit association to have headquarters in Montgomery and serve farmers throughout the state by providing credit for production purposes was authorized by the executive committee of the Alabama Farm Bureau federation.

T. P. Littlejohn is arranging for the Dallas county fair, which will be held from October 14 to 18 under the auspices of the Selma Chamber of Commerce and Farm Bureau. Three thousand dollars will be given in prizes for agriculture, live stock, cooking home demonstration work and the woman's department, etc.

Several calls have been made on the Farm Bureau for poison for the boll weevil, of which there is a heavy infestation in Dallas county for this time of the year.

Serving a sentence at Kilby prison, working at the same job there that he filled in civilian capacity at the prison until recently, is the experience of Clayton Peoples of Capitol Heights, a suburb of Montgomery. Peoples was employed at the state penitentiary as an automobile mechanic. A month or so ago county officers raided his attractive new bungalow in Capitol Heights and secured a still. Mrs. Peoples was arrested in connection with the raid. Her husband came into court some ten days ago and told the judge that the still was his and received a sentence of a year and a day in the penitentiary. He is now at Kilby prison, working as a state prisoner at his old job of automobile mechanic, which a week ago he filled as a free citizen.

J. W. Green, locomotive engineer and legislator, of Selma, has won his fight for a judgment against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for its act of ousting him from membership during the World War. Information arrived from Washington that the supreme court of the United States had refused to consider the appeal, holding the federal court to be without jurisdiction. As a result the labor organization must pay Mr. Green $12,500 plus the interest and penalties assessed by state law.

A third audit of the books of the public improvement department of Comptroller C. E. Armstrong's office growing out of the shortage for which William L. Lehman, young clerk, was sent to Kilby prison, was authorized by a unanimous vote of the Birmingham city commission. The auditor would not reveal details of the prisoner's statement or the name of the person said to be involved; but intimated the grand jury would make startling disclosures on the strength of it when it resumes its investigation June 23.

The city of Jasper is now planning another large paving project, according to Mayor J. H. Cranford. The plan as announced by Mayor Cranford, is to pave First avenue from Nineteenth street to Twenty-second street and Second avenue from Ninth street to Twenty-second street; Twentieth street between Third avenue and First avenue; Twenty-first street to Third avenue and Twenty-second street between Third avenue and First avenue.

The incorporation of the Gadsden Coal and Clay Products company disclosed the fact that near the city a vein of fire clay underlying a workable seam of coal is to be developed for the operation of one of the largest brick plants in the city. The coal and clay will be taken out of the same opening, the coal to be used in burning the brick and furnishing steam for the machinery.

Two negroes, Collier Powell and William Price, were killed in a shooting affray, which took place on the Johnny Gray place about nine miles south of Eutaw. It seems that Collier Powell, William Price and Willie Williams got into a fuss over a blind tiger still which resulted in William Price shooting Collier Powell, and in Willie Williams shooting William Price. Both died immediately.

Approximately 1,000 members of the reserve army training corps arrived in Anniston Saturday to begin their six weeks' summer training course at Camp McClellan. These are the first civilians to arrive at the local army post this year. Col. Raymond Sheldon, commander of the Eighth United States Infantry, will be in charge of the R. O. T. C. camp.

W. R. Crew has been elected by the Goodwater council as town clerk, succeeding J. S. Flemming, who recently died. Only two names were placed before the body for the place. W. R. Crew and Robert Wilson, and the vote stood three for Crew and one for Wilson. Z. D. Sprayberry has resigned as chief of police of Goodwater.

The Etowah county commissioners designated one of the Bellevue Highlands streets on Lookout mountain as a public road and ordered it rebuilt from the main Fairview road to the county tuberculosis camp. This was done on the petition of a number of officers and members of the county tuberculosis association.

Denial that he was guilty of the many charges preferred against him in a grand jury indictment, was made in a public statement issued by Sheriff Guy O'Rear of Walker county. Although admitting that he may be guilty of technical violations, he declared, "I have not unjustly taken one cent from anyone."

Summer examinations of graduates of medicine seeking licenses to practice in Alabama will be held at the capital beginning Tuesday, July 8. The number of applicants at the summer examinations will be greater than at any other period of the year.

In an effort to clear up the general freight rate readjustment being advocated in Alabama for fruits and vegetables, the Birmingham Traffic association has prepared to file two formal complaints before the state public service commission touching on rates for apples, oranges and lemons.

Hattie McClendon, negroess, was given a sentence of life imprisonment in Tuscaloosa County circuit court on a charge of the murder of her infant child by administering carbolic acid to it.

Produce Earlier Maturing Cattle

There Is Point at Which More Feed Does Not Yield Profitable Return.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every farmer knows an animal does not keep on gaining weight profitably just because it eats the feed offered it. There is a point beyond which more feed will not yield a profitable return. The appetite may not lag, but the ability to put on rapid or profitable gain does slow up as the finishing period is approached. Farmers have known this general truth for a long time, and it has been demonstrated at various experiment stations and by animal husbandry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. In experiment station records and in books on animal feeding there is overwhelming evidence that hogs and cattle as they grow older require increasing quantities of feed to put on a hundred pounds of gain and that the cost of gains, consequently, prices of feed remaining the same, increases steadily.

Produce Early Cattle.

That farmers have followed these results by marketing animals at an earlier age during recent years has been indicated in department reports and comments on the trend of the beef supply. The tendency is to produce earlier maturing cattle and to market them at an earlier age. That sheep feeders have recognized the same economic truth as cattle and hog raisers is evidenced by the almost complete disappearance of the fat wether from the market, the lamb being the market sheep relied upon generally for greatest returns.

Having in mind these general facts regarding the decreasing efficiency of animals as meat producers and the changed practices of farmers and feeders, Dr. W. J. Spillman of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, has shown the possibility of applying the law of diminishing returns to meat production with much more accuracy. By the use of experimental permanent stations through actual feeding trials, he has found that the rate of gain of an animal from a certain unit of feed, provided the feed is not changed, decreases with surprising regularity. His analysis was based on the results of 500 hog-feeding experiments and the results of feeding 150 steers. He found that the hogs, after reaching a weight of 100 pounds, on each 200 pounds of grain fed them made an average gain of 95.7 per cent of the gain made on the preceding 200 pounds; and that cattle, after reaching a weight of 800 pounds, made a gain on each successive unit of feed equivalent to 200 pounds of grain of 98.2 per cent of the gain made on the preceding 200 pounds.

Basis for Computation.

These results give the feeder a definite basis for computations on what may be expected from the animals he is feeding. He has known, to be sure, that a given quantity of feed produced steadily less meat as the finishing period approached, but he did not know that a definite percentage for the decreasing rate of gain could be obtained early in the feeding period and used to predict future gains if there is no change in the ration, as is frequently done by successful feeders, another percentage would have to be established to apply to the new ration.

In the experiments referred to, the hogs, starting with a weight of 100 pounds, made a gain of 45.37 pounds on the first 200 pounds of grain fed to them. The steers, after reaching a weight of 800 pounds, on their first unit of feed (equivalent to 200 pounds of grain), gained 25.28 pounds. Thus, the hogs started off much more rapidly than the steers, but the rate of gain dropped less rapidly in the case of the steers as they take longer to reach the finishing period.

It is the belief of the department that feeding results on the farm will be found to follow the same law of diminishing returns, although the rates of gain of farm animals generally may not be so rapid as the gains of similar animals fed definite rations under experimental conditions. Of course the law as stated will apply only to animals on a full ration. This fact, however, does not in any way conflict with the principle that equal quantities of feed will show progressively smaller results in gain as the animal reaches the finishing period.

While many feeders understand in a general way from experience the working of the law of diminishing returns as applied to live-stock feeding, it is believed that this more definite knowledge regarding the decrease in rate of gain will enable them to apply it more closely to their business. It is another means for aiding them in determining more accurately when feeding will cease to be a source of profit and when it may be continued longer with probability of profit.

Alfalfa Needs Lime

Alfalfa will not do well unless there is lime in the soil within reach of the young alfalfa roots, and if the soil is sour on the surface foot or so, it may be impossible to get a good stand and growth. This crop will grow to some extent on the food it gets from the decaying humus of a soil, but during the summer it may become so hot and dry that the humus stops its processes of decay and then the alfalfa is without food and will die out.

Wheat Harvest Help Is Serious Problem

Study Made of Conditions Affecting Labor Demand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Conditions affecting the demand for wheat harvest labor have been intensively studied by specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture in a survey of nearly 1,300 wheat farms from Oklahoma to the Canadian border. Factors affecting the labor demand in given districts were found to include the number of farm family workers and month hands on farms at the beginning of harvest; the average size of the farms; the extent of small grain farming compared to other types; the kind of harvesting machinery used; the time at which other districts of the wheat belt are harvesting; weather conditions both before and during harvest; conditions of the crop; harvest wages, and working hours. These factors were found to vary from one district to another and from year to year.

In making forecasts of labor needs the department urges careful consideration of the numerous factors mentioned. The result should aid in effecting a more intelligent distribution of the thousands of harvest hands who go to the wheat belt every season. This will mean to farmers greater certainty of getting needed harvest help, and be a guide to harvest hands in locating the places where work is quickly obtainable, thus shortening the periods of employment, the department points out.

A comprehensive discussion of the various labor requirement factors is contained in Department Bulletin No. 1230, entitled "Conditions Affecting the Demand for Harvest Labor in the Wheat Belt," copies of which may be obtained free on request to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. The bulletin also contains a modification of the formula worked out by the Kansas Agricultural college to forecast the harvest labor demand in header territory to make the formula applicable to other wheat areas. Labor officials and agricultural authorities dealing with the distribution of harvest labor in the wheat belt of the Middle West will find the bulletin of especial interest, the department says.

Advantages of Concrete

Concrete is well adapted for the construction of a variety of equipment on live stock farms. When used for feeding floors, manure pits, and foundations, it improves sanitary conditions. Structures made from it are rat proof and aid in controlling such pests. Concrete has the additional advantages of being durable, fireproof, and easily disinfected.

FARM NOTES

Yellow corn has more vitamins than white corn they say.

One cannot make bricks from straw, nor can one produce good crops from poor soil.

Trapping is perhaps the most effective method of destroying moles, but they may also be poisoned.

Rye is a better pasture crop than wheat because of its more resistant qualities and in its being apparently better adapted to thin land.

Sweet clover, five years ago considered a troublesome weed by most farmers, now stands ahead of alfalfa in acreage in Ohio.

Farmers should prepare to fight the destructive watermelon diseases which seem sure to be with us this season. Where farmers fail to make the right kind of a start, there is no hope for their crop.

Sudan grass can be grown on a sandy loam if it is well drained and fairly fertile. It is used as a summer pasture crop. It should not be sown with sweet clover because they do not belong together.

Dog Kills Wildcat

An Airedale terrier and a young wildcat were pitted against each other recently at the fair grounds in Florence, S. C., in a "fight to death," the dog proving himself superior to its supposedly less tame opponent. Several hundred persons witnessed the fight. The Airedale was brought there to settle an argument as to whether the dog or the cat would prove the superior in battle.

The fight was staged in a caged-in arena in front of the grand stand. The dog had finished his adversary in less than ten minutes and was barely scratched in the encounter.

On the day of the fight much opposition arose, especially among the women, to the fight, but it was held according to schedule. It was said that there is no law in South Carolina that would prohibit the staging of such fights.—Our Dumb Animals.

Ceylon's Tea Exports

Total exports from Ceylon of both black and green tea during 1923 were 183,501,223 pounds, as against 171,392,349 pounds in 1922. The exports were, however, approximately 6,000,000 pounds below the average for the last ten years. The United Kingdom was by far the leading importer of Ceylon tea, taking 121,010,033 pounds in 1923, against 117,281,922 pounds in the previous year. The United States was the second largest purchaser of tea, taking 14,856,508 pounds during 1923, an increase of 750,000 pounds over 1922 imports of Ceylon tea.

Way of a Woman.

Femininity has its own way of posting a simple, everyday letter, according to one keen observer. For instance, out of 30 women who were watched at a street letter box in the residential section of a large city, 21 withdrew the letter before quite letting go of it, to scan both sides of the envelope, to be certain the letter was securely sealed, properly addressed, stamped, and to make sure nobody could look through the envelope to read the contents.

One of the Alert

Lord Beaverbrook, the multilingual, told a story at a dinner in New York.

"You American business men are so alert," he said, "that it's easy to believe the anecdote about young Higginson."

"Young Higginson called on Banker Bonus and said:

"Mr. Bonus, I will take up only two minutes of your time. I have come to ask you for your daughter's hand, sir."

"Young man," said the wealthy banker, "do you—"

"Yes, sir," said young Higginson, "I do realize that Annette has been reared in the lap of luxury, but this luxury the dear girl is ready to forego."

"Can you—"

"Yes, sir, I can. Not as you have done, of course, but comfortably and respectfully. My salary, sir, is a good one, and my prospects excellent."

"Will you—"

"Yes, sir, I will carry a life policy large enough to provide for Annette adequately in case I should be taken away."

"Would you—"

"No, sir; I would not expect to live with you in this palatial home. My savings have enabled me to purchase in the suburbs a modest ten-room bungalow with two baths, and I have actually had the good fortune to secure from a cook the promise to come to us at the very modest figure of $30 a month."

"The banker held out his hand cordially."

"Young man," he said, "I like your style. You can have her. Good—"

"Morning, sir!" — Detroit Free Press.

Rustily engaged in trying to harness a mule to a cart, Pat was using forcible language.

A clergyman appeared on the scene.

"Can I help you?" he asked Pat.

"Yes," was the reply. "Tell me how Noah got two of these beauties into the ark."

COOLIDGE AND DAWES NAMED

Standard Bearers Chosen by the National Republican Convention at Cleveland.

IT IS ALL COOLIDGE

President's Wishes Are Followed to the Letter—Wisconsin Along Is Disappointing Voice.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

For President,
CALVIN COOLIDGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.
For Vice President,
CHARLES G. DAWES OF ILLINOIS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
Cleveland, Ohio.—Calvin Coolidge's national convention has been held, and it will go down in political history as the quietest, smoothest, most peaceful affair of the kind ever pulled off in this country, unless one excepts Woodrow Wilson's convention in St. Louis eight years ago. And this gathering of the Republican party really was Mr. Coolidge's convention, here to do just what he wanted done and not to do the things he did not want done.

Mr. Coolidge wished to be nominated for President to succeed himself. He was nominated. He wished to have for a running mate a man who could be relied on to hold for the ticket the support of certain elements of the party whose allegiance it was feared was weakening. The name below Coolidge's at the head of this column shows that this wish was complied with so far as the possibilities permitted.

Mr. Coolidge selected for temporary chairman of the convention Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio and told that gentleman what his views were on all the mooted public questions of the day—if he did not already know them—and Mr. Burton in his keynote speech faithfully reproduced those views. Mr. Coolidge chose permanent chairman Frank W. Hall of Wyoming, because as vice chairman of the War Finance Corporation which has loaned much money to agricultural interests Mr. Mendell might be considered acceptable to the disgruntled farmers. So Mr. Mendell presided over the convention after the opening of the second session.

Mr. Coolidge had positive opinions concerning the platform on which he would have to stand during the campaign, so out of all the planks fished by the numerous interests that sought to have a hand in the building of that platform, were carefully picked the ones that conformed strictly with those opinions, and all the rest were thrown into the discard by the resolutions committee headed by Ambassador Warren, who was Mr. Coolidge's selection for the place of chairman.

No reflection on President Coolidge for on the Republican party is intended in recording this seeming dictation by the Chief Executive. The conditions not only justified it but made it inevitable. The rank and file of the party had, in the selection of instructed delegates, made known their intention to nominate Mr. Coolidge, and the political and legislative events of recent months made it evident that his preferences and opinions must be put above all else. Temporary Chairman Burton gave expression to this when he said in his address: "With some disappointment, as one whose public service has been in a legislative position, turn compels me to say that by far the greater share of our citizenship looks to President Coolidge rather than to congress for leadership." The outburst of cheering that greeted this, the first spontaneous applause of the convention, proved that the great mass of the delegates agreed with it.

Significant Changes

Outside the convention hall, in the rooms where the various state delegations met to organize and name their representatives on the committees, another mandate of the mass of the party was carried out. The old line leaders were relegated to the rear and the management put into new hands. Thus the Massachusetts delegation took its chairmanship away from Senator Lodge and gave it to Governor Cox, and the man who had for so long ruled in the Bay state Republicans was not even put on the platform committee. The efforts of Harry Daugherty's friends in the Ohio delegation to rehabilitate him came to naught when Maurice Maehke was chosen as national committeeman, Senator Willis B. Fess was put on the committee on resolutions. So it went, not all the delegations, but in enough to show that a revolution in party management was under way. Senator Lodge was as suave and smiling as ever, and as tired looking, but his smile had a touch of bitterness, and many another former leader was in the wings as he saw his power fading away.

There was but one discordant element in the convention—the LaFollette delegation from Wisconsin. All but one of its members were selected to vote for the Barker senator and to present to the platform committee the planks representing his views. Their action of course was known far in advance and so was discounted, but to some of the members of the party it was no less ominous. They got into action early with a set of resolutions of which the following is a synopsis:

Housecleaning pledged.
Monopoly—crush, not foster.
Recover oil preserves.
Vigorous prosecution of grafters.
Revise public domain legislation.
Public ownership of water power.
Super water power systems.
Public control and conservation of natural resources.
Repeal Esch-Cummins law.
Make rates on prudent investment and cost of service.
Railroads—public ownership, final solution.
Reduce federal taxes.
Curtail the 800 millions now spent annually for the army and navy.
Recover war stealings.
Collect foreign loan interest.
Oppose Mellon tax plan.
Amend Constitution to permit a re-nomination to supersede a judicial veto.
Reduce tariff.
Promote co-operation between producers and consumers.
Reduce freight rates for farmers.
Abolish injunctions in labor disputes.
Grant cash bonus to ex-soldiers.
Provide Great Lakes waterway.
Amend Constitution to provide for direct nomination and election of President, federal initiative and referendum and referendum on war.

Revises Versailles treaty to comply with terms of armistice, promote treaties to outlaw war, abolish conscription, reduce armaments and guarantee referendums on peace and war.
There were some other planks, but these are enough to indicate the kind of a platform Senator LaFollette demanded. He and everyone else knew they would be turned down by the committee and rejected by the convention, so no one was surprised or shocked when that was done. But upon such a platform, it was assumed, LaFollette would stand as an independent candidate for the Presidency. What would be the effect of his candidacy was naturally a fruitful topic of discussion among the delegates and other visitors.

Many Women Delegates

Women were prepared to play a conspicuous part in the convention. There were more than 600 delegates and alternates of the gentler sex, nearly every state giving them place in its delegation. Even far away Hawaii sent one—Princess Kaiulani Kawannakoa—and she was made an associate member of the national committee. In social usage she retains her title, but she is said to be thoroughly one of the people and a power among the Republican voters of the Islands.

Temporary Chairman Burton overlooked the women when he wrote his address and had the advance copies printed, but he noticed the omission and interpolated a graceful paragraph warmly welcoming them to the party's councils. They were ready to do their share of the work, but really there was nothing much for them to do. It had all been arranged beforehand, and some of them were a bit peeved. They had a lot of pet ideas, but only a few of them, notably Mrs. A. T. Bert of Kentucky, were seriously consulted by the men who formulated the program. Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the senator from Chicago, said: "They have steam rolled the whole thing nicely. Those who are going to be elected have everything to say about the convention and the appointments and activities, and those who are elected and hold party office have nothing to say and can only go back home and work for the campaign."

It was largely true at the time. It was said, but a few hours later the men gave their sense of fair play a chance and accorded to the women equal participation in party management by giving them full membership on the national committee. Five of the most prominent of the ladies went before the committee on rules and order of business and pleaded that the example set by the Democrats four years ago should be followed. Two or three of the men were obstinate, but the majority of the committee yielded and their report on this matter was adopted by the convention with nearly every man in the hall standing and shouting as loud as she could. Another thing this committee did, which was also approved by the convention, was to reduce the delegate representation of the southern states which always go Democratic. The convention of 1920 directed the national committee to work this reform, but it had refused to obey. In this convention there was no outspoken opposition to the change. To make it more binding, an additional member of the national committee was given to each state that exceeds a given Republican vote in the last preceding national election.

Genuine Enthusiasm

To tell in detail the story of the convention would be superfluous; to read it would be tedious. But it had its high lights and interesting phases. Regular attendants on such gatherings always are on the lookout for "outrages" and outbursts of enthusiasm frequently are suspicious of the genuineness of such demonstrations. The first session, however, witnessed several that were undoubtedly genuine. The first came toward the close of Temporary Chairman Burton's speech when he first mentioned President Coolidge by name. And it really wasn't so much the mention of the name that evoked loud and long cheering as what Mr. Burton said. This was it:

"With some disappointment, as one whose public service has been in a legislative position, truth compels me to say that by far the greater share of our citizenship looks to President Coolidge rather than to congress for leadership."

All over the great public hall delegates and spectators rose to their feet to applaud this statement, and even many of the senators and representatives who have set themselves in opposition to the President over and over again joined in the hand-clapping.

Another demonstration that seemed real was the ovation given Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon. During the formalities of completing the temporary organization he rose from the midst of the Pennsylvania delegation to make a trifling motion. At once the convention burst into almost wild cheering and the secretary was compelled to mount to the platform and acknowledge it. The man who runs the country's finances might well feel flattered by the reception given him. Just after this incident a bit of real sentiment was injected into the proceedings. The chair announced that there was present the sole surviving member of the Republican convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency—Addison G. Proctor of St. Joseph, Mich. The venerable gentleman was led to the front and the cheering host arose to greet him, and listened with respect to his brief response.

That Congressman Burton in his keynote speech accomplished with great skill a difficult task was admitted by all. He could not entirely overlook the breach that has existed between the administration and congress, nor could he be too emphatic in placing the blame for it. But he recognized the change that was coming over the party management and gave the President full measure of praise. At the same time he said little that could offend the most sensitive of those Republican members of congress who have been in opposition to the administration's policies.

Nominating Coolidge

An easier task and no less admirably-performed was that which fell to the lot of the other Burton—Marion Leroy, president of the University of Michigan. As his friends of many years' standing he was chosen by Mr. Coolidge to make the nominating speech on Thursday, and no more eloquent or sincere speech has been heard in a national convention. It was not flowery nor was it political. It was a sympathetic setting forth of the qualities of Mr. Coolidge as the speaker conceived them, a heartfelt tribute to his character, his stern uprightness and honesty, his unflinching courage and his capacity for the leadership of his party and his country. "My function is to present the man," said Dr. Burton. "The emphasis must be just there. My primary task does not concern politics nor platforms as such. Anyone will tell you he is 'one of us' and he is. In keeping with his real qualities, I shall make no effort to exalt him for he does not need it. He is not a superman and would be the last to think so. There is not a trace of show or ostentation about him for he does nothing merely for appearance. He may be an example but he would never set one."

A little later Dr. Burton said: "He has moral fibre. To me it is his distinguishing characteristic. There is a moral grandeur about him which does credit to American life. You simply cannot think of him as soft or flabby. He aims actually to do what he knows he ought to do." And again: "In the largest sense of the term he is a patient man. He knows that time will do its perfect work. He instinctively takes the long look. He makes a calm, unhurried, steady approach to the tasks of life. No one can throw him into a panic, for he sees steadily and sees it as a whole. He cannot please every one. Therefore some, for the time, become hostile and critical. This man, in a very remarkable way, takes his punishment quietly and silently."

Guards the Future

Continuing, Doctor Burton said, in part:

"At times he must oppose what appears to some as an unqualified good, because he recognizes its temporary benefits and sees in the distant future that it must work an evil to society. Through all such experiences he walks with the spirit of human understanding. He knows that time will heal the hurt. His sense of time explains the thoroughness of his work and his intolerance for superficiality. He must have the facts as first hand and will not base decisions on a partial knowledge of the situation. He will not be hurried. He avoids extremes and loves proportion. Life does not consist of detached unrelated events. It is a unity welded together by the alchemy of time. He knows how to wait and not be tired by waiting. When he acts you know he will not be impetuous, because he takes time to think to the soul of things. Democracy, in her careless blundering confidence, is in dire need of such leadership."

"Has he a sense of humor? Emphatically yes. It is not the type that wastes time in recounting incidents of ever increasing trifleness. There is an alertness about his mind and a nimbleness of his spirit which are very attractive. These qualities do not express themselves in just the ordinary forms. At times you might imagine he had not even heard what was being said. Then he drops a remark which makes you realize that he has taken several steps in advance and has put his finger on the real point. He is not given to hilarity. His humor is dry and delightful and his expression as a rule is just as sententious as his more serious utterances."

"Beneath the characteristics we have mentioned lies something which one naturally hesitates to drag out into the light. There are some things too sacred for public parade, even though a man belongs to the people. When you find a man, however, with qualities such as we have sketched, you inevitably ask for the secret. What is the dynamic back of this moral fiber, this bitter self control, this sense of the value of things, this instructive understanding of work, this quiet patience with the ages?"

"It is his sense of the spiritual. No one can read his speeches without realizing that to him religion is essential to life. I am speaking in the broadest and most comprehensive terms. I am not discussing theology but religion. There are at least a few fundamental spiritual realities which are the common possession of men. He firmly believes religion to be necessary to the ideals of America."

"He asserts that 'most of all there is need of religion. From that source alone come freedom. Nothing else touches the soul of man. Nothing else justifies faith in the people.' Tolerance in religion is among our most notable achievements in this country. The vital realities of religion alone can satisfy the deepest needs of the human spirit. It is reassuring to know that this man believes in a personal power greater than man; in emergencies, with Washington and Lincoln, he will know that the issue lies in another hand."

"Here, then, is the man. He follows 'right and truth to their logical conclusions.' He gathered it all up in an address he delivered a year ago at a college commencement. He said, 'We do not need more national development, we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power. We do not need more knowledge, we need more character. We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen.'" mark of a public servant is not solely the desire to know what the people want, but the purpose to help the people want what they ought to have."

"It is not too much to affirm that the people of the United States have intense longings which they do not entirely understand and which by the very terms of the problem they cannot focus and express. I believe this man does comprehend these intense yearnings of the people and that quietly and persistently he is putting them forth in sharp, incisive utterances."

Rated as "Conservative"

"In America we have the curious practice of classifying men. We attempt to put labels on them and imagine that thereby we have settled something. We have unusual facility in this method because we rarely pause to agree on any definition of the terms. "As a matter of fact it is not the meaning of the term that gives us concern. It is the implication it carries, its flavor or its color. We say a man is a conservative, a liberal or a radical and for us the term carries praise or approbrium, depending entirely upon our own point of view. Now, this man's Americanism comes to lofty expression in what some have praised and others have criticized as his 'conservatism.' Let us examine the actual facts. "He uses the past for the future. He is no mere worshiper of the past as the past. It has meaning chiefly as a guide for the future. He recognizes clearly the evils of dead, congested, conservatism. His emphasis is on the days to come. He is concerned chiefly about our tendencies. Therefore, he says, 'We review the past, not in order that we may return to it, but that we may find in what direction, straight and clear, it points in the future. His is a sane forward-looking conservatism. "He does not concede that the present clamor for change proves that our national principles are false or that our governmental organization is weak. Changes must come. Every sane person recognizes that. The real question concerns the causes of our discontent and the sources of our evil. Immediately to destroy existing institutions, because human frailties continue to exist and human nature is not speedily reformed, is scarcely to be called wise leadership. To destroy is easy, but to achieve freedom is hard. "In fact, he holds that there are genuine grounds for optimism. It is easy to complain and to overlook the great blessings of life. After all is said and done, America, more than any other country in the world today, offers real privileges and opportunities. "He knows that progress will require hard unrelenting toil. To him a better future means continuous struggle and presents a constant challenge. He is no day dreamer, for he knows the stern realities of a work-a-day world. We cannot legislate mankind into a state of perfection. "Here is Dr. Burton's closing paragraph, which was the signal for a mighty outburst of cheering that lasted for many minutes: "As self-respecting individuals, we can trust this man. As lovers of America we can follow one who is supremely American. As citizens with interests as broad as humanity we can accept his guidance into a new and larger world leadership because he is at heart a human being. To the national convention of the greatest party in American history, I have the distinction to present as candidate to succeed himself as President of the United States of America, the virile man—the staunch American—the real human being—Calvin Coolidge."

The first ballot for vice president showed Lowden in the lead, with Burton, Dawes, Hoover and Kenyon following closely. On the second ballot the convention turned to Lowden and he was unanimously nominated. In a telegram to the convention the former governor of Illinois absolutely refused to accept the nomination.

After a three-hour recess another ballot was taken and before it was finished Dawes was so far in the lead over Hoover that the nomination was made unanimous amid the wildest enthusiasm.

So, with the swift nomination of Coolidge on the first ballot and the naming of his running mate after a few remaining formalities the national Republican convention of 1924 passed into history.

The Convention City

Too much cannot be said in praise of the way in which the city of Cleveland did its part in making the convention pleasant and successful. First and most important, it provided Public Hall, the finest place in which a national convention has ever been privileged to meet excepting that in which the Democrats gathered in San Francisco in 1910. Public hall cost the people of Cleveland $3,800,000 and is located in the heart of the downtown district, convenient to the hotels. Its architecture is beautiful and it seats 10,000 persons. Within its walls are all the conveniences that the builders could think of, and its stage is the largest in the country.

Then there are the hotels, ample in number and well conducted. Their managers looked after the comfort of the city's guests in every possible way and, what is more to the point, rates were kept well within reason. Cleveland seems to have more automobiles than any other city in the world in comparison with the population, but the able and well-trained traffic police protected the life and limb of the convention visitor in a way that elicited the admiration of all. No one was permitted to get himself run over, whether or not he wished to do so.

Local committees, social organizations and individuals arranged programs of entertainment to fill up the hours when the convention was not in session, and many of the men and women visitors were accommodated by the various golf clubs. There were theater parties, boat rides, band concerts, fireworks and other things galore. Special teas and receptions were given for the women, and a program for colored visitors was provided.

The matter of providing excitement was up to the representatives of the party, who had none to provide. The crowds in the hotel lobbies, when they were not occupied in the discussion of that elusive subject, the vice presidential candidate, gossiped with old and new acquaintances and amused themselves by picking out from the passing through the notables. They had no trouble in recognizing the dome-like head of Secretary of War Weeks, nor the bronze face of Bascom Slomp, secretary to President Coolidge; the gentle homeliness of Joseph B. Keating of Indiana and the Lincoln-like physiognomy of Lawrence Y. Sherman of Indiana could not be mistaken. Young Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, aroused mild interest as he wriggled through the crowds, but eyes did not follow him as they did his father.

Always in a national convention the music is an attractive feature, and this Cleveland gathering was no exception. The big brass band in the hall was led by John Philip Sousa himself, and every American knows what that means. In the hall is a magnificent pipe organ, which was magnificently played at frequent intervals. The flood lights of the hall, "plain and colored," were used with discretion and art during the playing of the National Anthem and other patriotic airs. From Columbus came a large Republican club, which sang not only in the convention hall but at the Coolidge headquarters of the women and elsewhere.

Humorous writers of wide reputation have become an established part of these national party meetings, and they were more numerous in Cleveland than ever before, and perhaps less humorous. Will Rogers, Heywood Brown, Ring Lardner and a score more were here looking for material for jokes.

The farmer who will not attempt to poison hell weevils "because God sends them" for the same reason should decline to destroy the grass, too. He sends that too.

The average politician is never reelected until he is kicked out. He is always prominently on hand when the "smoking" is good, but he is conspicuous by his absence when his party needs him.

Red bugs, seed ticks and berries are all ripe now and the sun is sizzling hot. Now is the time to hit hard. Pick berries all day and scratch red bugs and seed ticks all night. Don't be a slacker.

Professional politicians have at last about worn out the old party whip and party lines are rapidly fading away. Service and not party is the slogan of the people now.

It is hard to understand what the idea of Oscar Underwood is in trying to antagonize over 8,000,000 male citizens against the democratic party right on the eve of a presidential election.

The platform of the G. O. P. this time is an honest document at least. The farmer and the laboring man are rightly ignored—hide everything endorsed by the money power is carefully incorporated.

One traitor on the inside of a political party, or any other organization can do more harm to the cause than five hundred enemies on the outside. This statement can be verified on short notice almost anywhere.

Public opinion is one of the strongest forces that exists in the world. Absolute social ostracism of those guilty of violating the rules of common decency by society would go a long way towards improving the horrible social conditions of the day.

Eleven eminent doctors have already been employed to testify that those young Jew murderers, of Chicago were mentally unbalanced when they committed that crime. They also claim that proper sanitarium treatment for a year would be sufficient to restore them, safe and sane to society.

The statement was made the other day by the chief of police of Chicago that more liquor was consumed in that town by women than by men. The male species is done for at last. Women have taken his cigarette, his shirts and trousers, his probity and now his liquor. Mere man is only a mollicoddle now.

The automobile is said to be claiming more victims now, month by month, than did the great war. With a rigid adherence to birth control, as at present, by the high brows, and the indiscriminate use of wine, women and autos, there is not much danger of increasing the census figures any too fast.

A NEW POLITICAL ERA

In both of the old line political parties things have been recently taking place that are puzzling to the old political bosses, as well as to the close observer of events from year to year.

For many years now, owing to the fratricidal differences brought about by the civil war, lines of political affiliation have been most rigidly drawn, and it was an easy matter for the shrewd office seeker to line up his support by a campaign of party vituperation and abuse of the opposite party.

For all of these years this has been the policy that successfully prevailed on both sides. People would knowingly vote against the better man and against issues that they really favored, because of the binding obligations they felt like they were due a party.

During the national campaign that is now pending many of the prognostications of the leaders, who felt perfectly assured of certain strength, for certain purposes, from certain localities, have gone up in thin air and exactly the reverse of their plans has occurred.

The "Solid South" has proven a surprise and a sad disappointment to some. While it is still the "Solid South," as solid as ever for democracy, it has presumed this time to select its own democracy and not have it manufactured for them by Wall Street and other selfish interests. In this manifestation of independence it became a real asset for Democracy and not 186 electoral votes that could be bought and sold to the highest bidder.

The west and northwest have also thrown off the shackles, to a certain extent, and have failed to fall in to line and do the bidding of the bosses as of yore.

The fact of the business is that the people are reading more and studying closer the signs of the times than formerly. They are beginning to do a good deal of their own thinking, and the more they think the more surely they realize the fact that they have merely been used as pawns in the game by a lot of political sharpers and have been skinned out of their rights and liberties that these same shrewd schemers might grow fat on the spoils of office.

The result seems to be a determination, on the part of the real people, to open their eyes and vote their convictions for better and cleaner government rather than uphold a party system that has grown putrid with rottenness and rascality.

The old parties will have to resort to a strenuous house cleaning if they expect to hold their party lines intact much longer.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

As was forecast from the first Calvin Coolidge was nominated by the Republican convention last week almost by a unanimous vote.

"Hell Maria" Daws was tied on the ticket as the running mate for Mr. Coolidge, after Lowden, Hoover and Borah had side stepped the honor.

The platform is a repetition of the same old song they always sing, except they added one plank for the negro to stand on, namely, they incorporate the demand for the passage of the Federal anti-lynching law.

The most ignorant person who is entitled to vote, knows that this most dastardly and infamous bill is aimed directly at the south and, in effect offers $10,000 premium to the black brute who assaults your wife, mother or sister.

The southern man or woman who casts a ballot for this party in the next election is endorsing this feature, as much as any of the others, and his or her vote will mean that they care more for republican politics than they do for the honor and safety of their own womanhood.

As we have so often said before, it exceeds the widest and broadest possibilities of our understanding to realize how it is possible for a Southern man or woman to ever vote with a party that never allows an opportunity to pass without throwing a vicious and malicious insult and a negro in their face.

THORSBY ALA.

Editor of Chilton County News: Please allow me a small space in the "News" to express my thanks to my friends for the attention, and many acts of kindness shown me while in the Central Alabama Hospital at Clanton, Alabama.

And first of all I want to say that the Hospital itself is a great institution. I spent eight weeks in one of the best Hospitals in Birmingham in 1908, and the attention there was no better and hardly as good as I received in the Central Alabama Hospital. The nurses in the Central Alabama Hospital can not be excelled. They were attentive and faultless, and the cook was also faultless. Everything she sent me to eat was good, and she is faithful to be on hand and on time.

The new Superintendent, Miss Willbanks, seems perfectly at home in handling her duties.

Now as to the physicians who operated on me, Doctors Gragg and Marcus. I just can not see how it could have been more successful than it was. I have not felt any pains yet and it has been almost four weeks, and I was not put to sleep only a local anesthetic was used.

Now as to other friends outside of the Hospital, they were many and the little table in my room was full of flowers, with freshness of odor every day I was in the Hospital.

Dr. Gragg used the knife on me, and since it sometimes has to be done, God grant that he may live long to do much work, as I believe few can do it better.

May the Lord bless all those other kind friends that remembered me in a material way. I received what they did with a grateful heart, and I am hoping to live to repay them in kindness if in no other way.

I can not close and not mention Dr. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist church, in Clanton. He came to see me every day, and when I was able to be carried home he took me in his car and we had a thanks giving service in my home. Brother Ezell read the 103 Psalm. God bless him and his work for the Lord.

ABOUT BASE BALL AND THINGS

Did you witness the game of base ball played, on Thursday, the 4th, between the Clanton and Tallassee clubs? If so you know the meaning of thrills.

To see nine young men line up and opposed by a like number, all striving for the victory, and every man putting forth his best efforts in order that his team may be victorious is a sight that stirs the blood and causes one to feel that life is worth living. Especially is this true when without an error, (as was the case with the Clanton Club) the decision is in their favor.

In all ages, even from remote antiquity, it has been customary for men to engage in sports demanding both skill and strength. The Isthmian games in old Greece were trained to the point where he who won the crown of laurels had to put forth every energy in order to win. I doubt if one surpassed the two double plays that were pulled off in the ball game, that day.

On Thursday, the young men had no cause for complaint on the score of a lack of appreciation; for the crowd cheered them on to a well earned victory—and yet, strange to say, there are some folks who if you mention base ball in their presence, have an acute attack of "Mully Grubs." Billiousness is sometimes taken for religion.—The Psalmist prayed that young men might be strong. And they ought to be strong in mind and in body. The means for physical development are found in the smithy, in the foundry, in the coal mines, and in all the fields of labor. And then common sense has provided the gymnasium and athletics. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." When the young men meet their obligations in any honest toil, when they are standing up in manly strength and bearing on their own shoulders their part of the world's burden, instead of acting as if we considered them to be on the way to the "demonition Bow-Wows." Let us go out and play with them. If we're too timid to catch behind the bat, or to catch a hot liner, we secure a seat in the grand stand where the woven wire gives us ample protection.

It takes men to play base ball. If we are weaklings, it is better to get behind the screen wire than to let the folks see that we are ready to condemn that of which we are ignorant. If billious, take a pill, "But play ball." G. A. HORNADY

COMMON SENSE

You must live first and accomplish afterwards. To do that which you want to do, whatever is your aim for success, requires time, and time demands of you money or its equivalent.

A youngster gets a job and expects his pay to be raised the second week with no thought why it should be raised excepting that he needs the money. He envies the man with a comfortable fortune but never considers the lifetime that it took to get it if he obeyed the same laws.

We Americans have a strong money sense but a weak time sense. Impatience of delay we want everything today. From the way most of us act, one gets the impression that we all want to retire with a full competency this afternoon and spend the rest of our lives in ease and luxury.

That spirit causes crime of sundry kinds and results in moral and physical degeneracy. It is reacting not only in individuals, but in social and industrial groups. It is the sole sealer of all the unrest that prevail the world at this moment.—Ward's Words.

From Pig Iron to Pompano

FROM PIG IRON to pompano, from shoes to satsumas—the Louisville & Nashville Railroad transports practically every known commodity and luxury from the places where they are plentiful to the places where they are scarce; thus adding to the comfort, as well as to the profit, of both the shipping and the receiving communities.

These figures showing the freight tonnage handled by the L. & N. in 1923, are interesting and instructive: 1,600,000 cars of freight—4,380 cars a day; 57,460,190 tons of freight—157,425 a day.

The reader may form some idea of the practical service being rendered to the American people by considering the articles and commodities of everyday use from the viewpoints of where the raw materials come from and where the finished products are made ready for the consumer.

Look about your home or your office; turn the subject over in your mind when you sit down to dinner today. How many of the necessities and luxuries of life would be yours without the modern transportation systems of America—the finest and most efficient in any country on the face of the globe?

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.
However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

BARLEYCORN AND BUSINESS

A great honor descended on Ypsan-tanti, Mich., not long ago. President Harding was choosing ten delegates to represent the United States government at the International Congress Against Alcoholism held in Denmark in August. One of the ten was Mrs.
E. L. Calkins of "the town with the queer name."

And thereby hangs a tale. Once upon a time—to begin in the approved fashion—a mutual acquaintance told me of Mrs. Calkins. "Left a widow without income or apparent means of making one," the story commenced, as I recall it. "Nothing to go on except that strenuous determination to meet fate, that Roosevelt standardized among American characteristics."

The immediate way out that she took, escapes my memory. But she did not run off to Detroit or Chicago or New York on the plea that all the money to be made was piled up in the money centers. She stuck to the people she knew. Somehow she got into real estate.

The strenuous determination grew.
So did the money. At the time I heard the story the unencumbered capital was, as I recall it, $20,000 or $30,000.

Here comes in the sequel of the tale.
I wrote Mrs. Calkins for the story of her real estate venture.

"I was much amused when I read your letter," she answered. "Bless you, all I've done in real estate is just a sideline. My real job has been fighting John Barleycorn. But I'll see what I can make of it as soon as I dare. And time—if you're sure you want a story on a 'Main Street' scale."

Not unnaturally, she never found time for the story when passports and such more important affairs claimed her time. So here it is with the "sideline" overshadowed by the President's recognition of her value on the main job.

She did not get the appointment through any "pull." She got it because the folks near home, the same folks that she had years before declined were good enough to live with and work with, wanted her recognized.
More distant neighbors took up the idea. The state grants the state women's organizations, the governor and each of his staff, all requested the President to appoint Mrs. Calkins. She had, one might say, the backing of Main Street on the Main Street scale.
And it won!

GIRTH-CONTROL LADY

Long Beach, Cal., despite its millions made in oil, has always been rather proud of being a "Main Street" community. Thousands upon thousands of its citizens are retired farmers and merchants from the Mississippi valley. They still keep the neigh-borly point of view and the neighborly interests that they developed through years of hard work "back home." But they have leisure, and whenever a woman has time, we're told, she thinks about her looks.

This background was the incentive in starting a business in Long Beach conducted by two well-bred, much-traveled women. The business is more or less than a beauty shop.
But it is owned and managed by a B. S. and an A. M., who substitute for the often shoddy atmosphere of such a shop common sense and culture.

The Master of Arts is Mrs. Robert Lee Hatcher, wife of a big lumber dealer of Alaska, who found the winters in the Far North too trying and wanted something to keep her busy.
Years of newspaper and publicity training—she was once president of the Illinois Women's Press association—and of work with big women's organizations preceded this latest business. The women of Alaska sent her two years ago on a personal mission to Washington to ask the President to appoint the man whom they could trust as prohibition enforcement director. Her shop is a service station for the national women's foundation for health, which through women's organizations campaigns for such common-sense things as an annual health examination and properly fitting shoes.

Mrs. Hatcher's pet beauty cure is—exercise! To prove the value of a simple before-breakfast setting-up, she acknowledges her sixty years, lets an occasional woman pull her curly white hair to be sure it isn't a wig, and demonstrates to selected audiences the value of what has recently been named "girth control." "The old masters knew all the secrets of color," she quotes her guide in an European art gallery, "but they did not seem to know much about Anna Tommy. Now-days, to judge by the women on our streets, we've learned something about anatomy, but we sadly lack both judgment and art in application of color.
We daub it from the outside instead of from within!"

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning From God's Word.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-
IC—The Value of Bible Study.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-
IC—The Bible in the Life of a Nation.

The lesson committee has designated this as reforms, but it was more than reform. It was a revival. It requires the quickening of God's spirit to induce men, especially a whole nation, to turn to God from their sins.
This is a fine illustration of the rightful place of God's word in the life of a nation.

I. The Word of God Being Read
(Neh. 8:1-3).

1. The Eager Assembly (v. 1). The people gathered themselves together and spake unto Ezra to bring the book of the law. The people with yearning hearts requested the reading of God's Word.

2. A Representative Assembly (v.
2). It was made up of men, women and children. The men did not leave the spiritual affairs to the women, neither were the children left at home.

3. An Appreciative Assembly (v. 3).
So eager were they to know God's Word that they did not get tired, although the lessons lasted for five or six hours. Their ears were attentive from morning until midday.

II. The People's Attitude Toward
God's Word (Neh. 8:4-6).

1. Reverence Shown God's Word
(vv. 4, 5). When Ezra opened the Law, all the people stood up out of respect for God's Word.

2. They Joined Heartily in the Prayer. As Ezra led them in prayer they joined heartily in saying, "Amen, Amen," bowing their faces to the ground.

III. God's Word Being Interpreted
(Neh. 8:7, 8).

The attitude of the people toward God's Word largely depends upon the minister.

1. He Stood Up Where the People
Could See Him (v. 5).

2. He Read Directly (v. 8). Much
Bible reading is greatly to the discredit of the Word and the reader.

3. Caused the People to Understand the Reading (v. 8). The supreme business of the minister and teacher is to make the Word of God so plain that all—old and young—can understand.

IV. The Effect of Applying God's Word to National Life (Neh. 8:9-18).

1. Conviction of Sin (v. 9). The Word of God is quick and powerful Heb. 4:12. It brings conviction of sin (Acts 2:37). God's method of convicting men of sin is to have His Word applied by the Holy Ghost.

2. Weeping Turned Into Joy (vv.
10-12). When sins have been perceived and confessed God would not have His children to be sad. Continued mourning will not atone for the sins that are past. It unites one for present tasks and dishonors a pardoning God.

3. They Shared Their Blessings
With Others (vv. 10-12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others.

4. The People Obeyed (vv. 12-18).
In their acquaintance with the Scriptures they found that the Feast of the Tabernacles had been long neglected.
They went to work and kept this sacred feast in a way that it had not been kept since the days of Joshua (v. 17).

5. Separation From the Ungodly
(Neh. 13:1-3). As soon as they had heard the Word of God, they separated themselves from the mixed multitude.

6. The House of Worship Was Cleaned and Restored (Neh.
13:4-14). No nation can be strong which neglects its worship of the true God.

7. Restoration of the Sabbath (Neh.
13:15-22). Israel had long violated the Sabbath. Unnumbered evils follow in the wake of Sabbath desecration. To ignore the essential law of the Sabbath is national suicide.

8. Restoration of God's Law of Marriage (Neh. 13:23-31). When those who had intermarried with the heathen were brought face to face with their sin, they separated themselves from their ungodly companions, because they could not have God's favor while living in disobedience to His Word.

DAIRY

HEALTH IS MENACED BY DIRT IN MILK

The cook is as clean as the kitchen towel, and the dairyman is as clean as the dirtiest thing his milk touches, is the opinion of Ben F. Eldredge, dairy specialist of the extension service of the Utah Agricultural college. Unless everything, from the barn, cow and milkster to the brush used on the pails, is perfectly clean, the milk is likely to become contaminated with harmful bacteria of filth. One sour rag used in washing a bucket will make an entire milking dangerous. There is no higher art than the production of wholesome human food, Mr. Eldredge believes, and he declares that if dealers who supply even a few families with milk fully realized the responsibility they bear toward the health of their patrons, they would redouble even their greatest care.

The best way to produce clean milk is to keep dirt out of it, Mr. Eldredge says. No amount of straining or clarifying can ever purify milk once infected with dirt or germs. This fact is particularly in evidence in the milk obtained from the single cow who supplies a few neighborhood families. The milk cannot be pasteurized, and too often a tell-tale residue is a common thing in the bottom of the bottle or bucket.

For preventing milk from ever becoming dirty, sunlight and steam are the best possible cleansers. Germs and harmful bacteria can live only a little time, and cannot multiply in the dry sunshine. Vessels properly scalded with steam can never infect milk.
A clean dairy barn, dry bedding, a clean, healthy cow, a clean, healthy milkster and sterilized utensils are what every producer of milk owes to his family and the community.

Iowa College Outlines

Dairying Fundamentals

Following an analysis of the work of cow testing associations in Iowa, dairy experts at Iowa state college emphasize the following points as deserving of consideration as a guide to increased profits from the dairy cow:

1. The production of feeds best suited to dairying, especially alfalfa hay.
2. The elimination of the scrub or grade sire.
3. The use of pure bred dairy sires from good producing ancestry.
4. The weeding out of unprofitable cows through cow testing associations.
5. Rational feeding.
6. Giving the cows the attention that their importance demands.
7. Regularity of milking and feeding.
8. Providing a succulent feed throughout the year.
9. Breeding cows to freshen in the fall of the year except when one is retaining milk.
10. Supplementing poor pastures in late summer with either summer sil-lage or soiling crops.

Phosphorus Is Required in Ration of Dairy Cow

When the forage fed to cattle, sheep and horses consists of crops grown on acid soils or is of the non-legume type, the lime-carrying materials should be fed at the rate of three to four pounds to 100 pounds of grain. Even when legumes like alfalfa, clover and soybeans are fed the addition of lime-containing minerals will do no harm and may be a great deal of good.
The feeding of wheat bran and midlings provides phosphorus which is very necessary in the ration of a dairy cow. While it is true that sodium phosphate added to the ration of a dairy cow while she was dry increased the milk flow in the following period, further experiments are deemed advisable to prove that phosphate feeding can be generally practiced under diverse feeding systems with profit.

Dairy Notes

For the dairy herd soy bean hay is the best annual hay crop that can be grown and it makes a very acceptable substitute for clover or alfalfa when these hays are not at hand.

Oat and pea hay well cured makes very desirable food for dairy cows or for sheep. It is also satisfactory as horse feed, though rather soft for horses that are required to do hard work.

Cows receiving all the alfalfa they care to consume are getting enough protein to permit them to do good work. On good quality alfalfa hay, cows have produced more than 300 pounds of fat in a year.

Every cow owner is indebted to those enterprising men who have worked hard to broaden the market for dairy products.

Corn silage and alfalfa hay are the best roughages for dairy cattle, while corn fodder and timothy hay have proved the poorest.

For the dairyman who has little or no permanent pasture, Sudan grass may well be used as a pasture crop immediately following the oat pasture.

"I Can't Praise Self-Rising Flour Too Highly"

AFTER I used my first sack of self-rising flour (20 years ago) I ordered more for I knew right then it was never going to do without it.
... I have never had a failure with anything I ever tried to cook with it. ... I can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

It's hard to realize how much satisfaction there is in using self-rising flour until you try it. One thing is certain: when you learn what delicious biscuits and quick bread it makes, when you see how the ready mixing reduces your housework and when you realize what a saving it affords, like the South Carolina housewife quoted above, you "can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

Self-rising flour is made from choice sun-ripened soft wheat. Pure phosphate baking powder has been added in the proportion to make the dough properly. As in plain flour it comes in various grades. Ask your grocer for the same grade of self-rising you have been using in plain flour. Be sure it carries the Blue Shield, which is a guarantee of satisfaction.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour. (1) See that your oven is hot! (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water! (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt! (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter! (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly. SOFT WHEAT MILLERS' ASS'N., Inc.

AN APPRECIATED REMEMBRANCE

Early Tuesday morning the serious and momentous question of what the editor and his hungry tribe would have for dinner was most happily solved for us by Mr. J. Hance Alred, who presented us with a very adequate mess of pole beans and tender squash, fresh from the vine, with glittering dew drops sparkling upon them.

We thank him for the splendid gift and especially for the evidence of his kind remembrance.

Hance is not only a most popular druggist, he is also one of the very best citizens of this section and a home gardener who does not know how to fail.

GOT HOME SUNDAY

Mr. Jno. T. Ellis, the man who has made Woco-Pep famous in this section, and his good lady, motored down in South Alabama for the last week end on a visit to relatives and friends. They returned Sunday afternoon and report a wonderfully enjoyable trip. Mr. Ellis says the roads are all good except the few miles across Autauga county between here and Montgomery. He says the crops are reasonably good but rather behind the schedule and grass, in some sections is pretty plentiful.

STORE ROBBED

One night last week some miscreant, or miscreants, removed the lock from the door of the store of Mr. J. V. Best, out two miles west of town, entered and appropriated a box of tobacco, a carton of cigarettes, a few other minor articles and a small amount of cash left in the money drawer.

So far as we have heard no arrests have been made and Mr. Best is the only sufferer. It is to be hoped that later developments will land the guilty parties in jail with evidence to convict.

SENATOR ADAMS SICK

The many friends of Senator Sam Adams will be sorry to learn that he is again in bad health, so much so that he is confined to his home.

Not long since he was operated on and recovered so nicely and was soon in such splendid shape, that we all were sure he was on his feet again for a long term of service and everyone especially regrets that he has been stricken down again so soon after his recent trouble.

ON THE FORCE

We are pleased to learn that Mr. J. M. Curlee has been appointed as night marshal. He has years of experience and law background and is a fine fellow to look upon.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Just at this critical stage of the political situation there are a few things that all good true democrats should pause and consider. We need to take stock of conditions and find out definitely what we have on hand.

The democratic party was not founded on a mythical basis of political expediency, but it was founded upon real economical principles of self government, with the distinct and basic understanding that it stood for a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

It was never intended to become the tool of any particular class or sentiment, nor can its cardinal foundation principles be abortively converted into such channels without destroying the very principles that it was born to uphold.

Too many people forget the principles involved, when a hot campaign is on hand, and a hard of hungry politicians are ranting over the country with any kind of a story they think will catch the unsuspicious voter. They will preach any kind of a doctrine to win, knowing full well that 95 per cent of their platform is meaningless and none of it democratic.

We are facing a condition now at the convention in New York that is the legitimate offspring of playing politics and not principles. The slogans of pure democracy have been utterly forgotten, and disgraceful scrambling of factions of greedy and grasping politicians has developed, and not even a hint has been made about trying to make this convention the organ of the people to put out a platform and a ticket that will please and serve the rank and file of the American voter.

The trading between the different groups of would-be "statesmen" that is fought with gusto on the front pages of our big dailies, sounds more like the dealings in a gambling den, than it does like the reports from an assembly of honest, democratic gentlemen who had assembled, at the behest of the people, to honestly and conscientiously transact the very important business of naming the next president of this great country.

In this particular case there is one very prominent fact trying to be made by the money sharks of the country that if successfully brought over, relegates the democratic party to a back seat for at least 25 years, if not forever.

The principles upon which the democratic party is founded will never die, if its control passes in to the hands of the people who are trying so hard at this time to debauch it, nothing would be more reasonable than for all real democrats to repudiate this money made bastard and form them another party, along the lines of a pure democracy, that would guarantee to the real people of this great country a representative form of government, in which justice could again be enthroned and freedom liberty and equal rights for all be the corner stones.

With an avowed whiskey man and Catholic at the head of any ticket, we have confidence enough in the South and West to feel like no party

THAT LAST THURSDAY BALL GAME

We have not recovered sufficiently yet from our charrin and disappointment to really know how to write up that ball game last Thursday between Clanton and the Quarry team.

That game had one distinctive feature. It was totally without pep from start to finish on both sides. Both teams were listless and seemed like they had their minds centered on everything else more than base ball.

The spirit of jinxdom that Clanton successfully hypnotized from the first. The boys never even got started at all. Our pitcher walked three men to open up with and the opposing team scored four runs without effort.

With a start like this the prospect looked bad, but we loyal fans continued to caress our rabbits feet and hope for a rally, but "hope deferred maketh the heart sick" and before the last man died in the ninth inning, many of us were almost total base ball wrecks.

We are still loyal to the boys for the wonderful games they have been playing. We know they can beat any amateur team in the state, and we are looking for them to shake this jinx and kick him off the lot right now, get back into form and make our hearts again overflow with pride and exultation by scoring a few more of those wonderful victories.

There are two men, at least, that deserve credit for high class service in that game last Thursday and strange to say, they were the umpires. We have never witnessed a game more fairly umpired than that was. Our hat is off to umpires Thomas and Smith for dealing out the real clean article that day.

The score by innings follows:
Gants Quarry, 400 000 004-8
Clanton, 100 000 000-1
Today they play the odd game with West Point Route team of Montgomery on the local diamond.

MRS. DEADWILDER DIES

On last Monday night, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Thompson, of Selma, Mrs. Deadwilder, mother of Mrs. Joe Gore, of our town, passed away.

The deceased lived in Clanton for a number of years and leaves many friends here who are grieved that this good lady is no more.

The remains were shipped Tuesday to Maplesville, met there by the hearse of undertaker Martin, and transported to the family burying ground at the old homestead out in the Mulberry community.

Mrs. Deadwilder was an aged lady and survived her husband for about four years. The Deadwilder farm, on Mulberry was their home for many years and both of these good old people were known and loved by a large circle of friends.

lash can whip them in to line nor keep them from spurning in righteous indignation, such a flagrant disregard of all the principles to which the people are unalterably attached.

A man of that stripe does not represent democracy and all loyal democrats will refuse to swallow the dose.

A MOST DISASTROUS FIRE

The Worst Blaze Clanton Has Had in Years. Lost Close to $50,000. Partly Insured

At 11:30 last Saturday night the fire alarm was sounded and throngs of late shoppers were shocked to see dense volumes of black smoke darkening the elements over the city Bakery Building.

In a few moments the hose reels were on hand and great streams of water were playing upon the doomed structure, but, as the conflagration seemed to be confined between the roofing and the ceiling, it was a most difficult proposition to play the water where it would extinguish the flames.

The Bakery was soon a total loss and the fire broke across to the building occupied by the Chilton Hardware Co. This was where the greatest havoc was wrought.

The building, and warehouse adjoining in the rear, were literally packed with goods. Over $15,000 worth of high class and expensive hardware were included in this immense stock, all of which is a total loss.

In addition to the stock, Mr. Oscar Jones, the hustling manager, had stored his place with lot of conveniences for the proper display and handling of his goods and these, in connection with his office and fixtures represented an additional outlay of $2,000. The fire made a clean sweep of goods, fixtures and all.

The Sanitary Barber Shop also suffered a small loss of $50 or $75 in the removal of their fixtures when it looked like this building would also go.

The loss to the Chilton Hardware people, at a very conservative estimate is a total of $16,000 on the stock and $2,000 on the fixtures.

Mr. Jones tells us that he carried $10,000 in insurance. This leaves an $8,000 loss to be born by him. This is a very heavy blow to this worthy and progressive young business man, but we trust he will see his way to a speedy reopening of his place.

The City Bakery, with fixtures, was valued at around $2,000. We learn that $250 in insurance was all they carried. Here is another serious blow to the people who conducted it.

Both of the destroyed buildings were the property of Dr. Arthur Johnson. They are of brick and much of the old walls can be saved in rebuilding, though he is a very heavy loser by the fire. His losses will foot up in the neighborhood of $8,000 or $10,000 and we learn that he carried only about $2,000 of that in insurance.

We did not get to see Dr. Johnson in person, though we learned, on good authority, that he will rebuild right away.

At one time the fire looked so serious, that help was asked from the Montgomery fire department. They responded at once, but before they got out a special train to bring them up, the local department managed to get the flames under control so they did not come.

This is the most serious fire Clanton has experienced in a long time and, at one time, it looked like one entire block, right in the midst of the busiest down town district was gone up.

Let us all learn a lesson from this and let every person remember, at all times, to be absolutely sure that he is taking no chances in guarding against fire.

This fire caught out from the Bakery and had probably been smouldering for several hours before it was discovered.

OUR HEARTIEST COMMENDATION

Both the Methodist and Baptist of our local churches took occasion last Sunday to dwell earnestly, but most kindly, in condemnation of some of the social vices that are assuming such flagrant shape these days.

The Chilton County News begs to be permitted to strongly endorse this position of our esteemed pastors. All decent people are being shocked daily by new fads and follies that are indecent and wicked and public sentiment should line up solidly behind these good men and assist them in every possible way, to curb these fearful desecrations of decency.

BETTER THAN MONEY

In our day money is usually considered the one all important essential in achieving a life of happiness, and we admit that a little cash, now and then, is a most convenient thing to have around, but we have learned by experience, since our connection with the Chilton County News, that good, thoughtful friends are truly worth more than money.

Weekly newspaper editors have never been noted for wealth and, so far as our office is concerned, for the past month or so, if a dollar had succeeded in getting on the inside it would have created a greater sensation than the discovery of an honest politician, so we can speak with authority on a subject like this.

For instance, last Saturday in plenty time for dinner, our good and appreciated friend, Mr. C. O. Bell, of Route 1, come in and brought us a large donation of vegetables, embracing pole beans and squashes and so on. So the wolf had to decamp from our door on that good day.

Then later on that same day, Mrs. Marion Core came by our office in her car and left us another wonderfully fine lot of vegetables fresh from her home garden.

Here was another donation that was extremely timely, for it took care of our Sunday dinner in advance.

To these splendid and thoughtful friends we wish to extend our most sincere thanks, hoping that their produce may yield them an hundred fold and that all sorrow and sadness may forget how to find their homes.

FIRST WE HAD SEEN

The editor and family were the fortunate recipients, last Saturday of a luscious donation of roasting ears. They were simply fine and were immensely enjoyed because they were the first we had seen this season.

Mrs. H. F. Downs was the generous lady who provided this delicious addition to our Sunday dinner, and we all wish to express to her, not only our appreciation for the splendid treat, but also, for her kindly remembrance.

MOVING AWAY

Mr. L. D. Petrey, who has only been with us a short time in the jewelry business has moved this week to the "Land of Flowers."

TO STAY WITH US

Quite a number of other churches have been trying to get Dr. Ezell, our pastor, to come and preach for them awhile.

The Southside Baptist church of Montgomery, sent up a delegation to see him, and made some very flattering propositions, but to the delight of his church and congregation, he told us last Sunday that he had decided to decline all of these offers and remain with us.

Dr. Ezell is an able preacher, a hard worker, a good mixer and an exceptional pastor and the Clanton Baptist church is proud to have him as their leader and adviser.

HOME BURNED

Last week Mr. R. C. Huston, who resides near Verbena had the misfortune to lose his home by fire together with all of the household goods it contained.

Cary has many warm friends who will be saddened by this news. We learn that he carried no insurance, so the entire heavy loss falls on him alone.

ON THE BILLS

Three or four new business enterprises are on foot, we learn. The McDonald store building is slated to open up right away again as an up to date family and fancy grocery.

A cigar factory is also an almost assured fact for Clanton.

QUITE SICK

Mrs. Jodie Middleton, daughter of Mrs. Jno. T. Ellis, is quite seriously ill at the home of her mother this week. It is feared that she has typhoid fever.

SERIOUSLY HURT

The friends of Mr. Sam Cowart, who is employed by the railroad in its signal department, will be sorry to learn that he was quite seriously injured in a wreck of his motor car, down on the Montgomery yard a few days ago.

Sam is well known here road. The latest report from the infirmary at Montgomery was that they hope to have him out again in a few weeks.

HOME BURNED

The home of Mr. Wash Heflin, who lives in the northern part of the county, was entirely consumed by fire last Saturday together with all of its contents.

We failed to get any definite particulars further than the fact that Mr. Heflin lost his home and contents and that he carried no insurance. This is a severe blow and Mr. Heflin deserves the sympathy of every one.

BACK HOME

Prof. Stephens, principal of the High School here, returned Monday from his vacation.

He was brown as a berry from sun burn, looked the very picture of health and the speedometer on his car told us that he had driven a little over 1,200 miles during his outing.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democratic Convention May Last Many Days—Boom for Houston Started.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DEMOCRATS' hosts—meaning the representatives of the Democratic party—asssembled in Madison Square garden, New York, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Presidency and vice presidency, and the indications at this writing are that they will be there for some time before they make a choice. However, William C. McAdoo, who admittedly will have the largest vote on the first ballot, predicted as he arrived in New York that he not only would win the nomination, but would win it before many ballots had been cast. Leaders of the opposition to McAdoo scoffed at his claims.

This is intended to be a review of the events of the past week, not a forecast, but it can be said that the fight was centering on the proposition to abandon the time-honored rule of the Democrats which requires a two-thirds majority for a nomination. McAdoo's generals naturally were for this change. Brennan of Illinois, who is determined to defeat the California, declared if the two-thirds rule were abolished, so, too, must be the unit rule—in which case the change would do McAdoo little good. One other thing the new boss of the party said: "I want to see an anti-Ku-Klux-Klan plank in the platform, and they won't be able to make it too strong to suit me."

Next to the suggestion that the platform include a moist plank, that matter of the Klan is perhaps the most annoying that the committee on resolutions has to handle. A good guess is that the Democrats, like the Republicans, will evade both issues.

Toward the end of the week there developed a sudden and rather strong boom for David F. Houston for President. He will be remembered as secretary of agriculture and then of the treasury under Woodrow Wilson, and his boosters asserted that, shortly before his death, Mr. Houston advised the nomination of Mr. Houston in 1924. Mr. Houston, who now resides in New York, is president of the Bell Securities company and director in various financial concerns.

HAVING established their headquarters in Chicago, the Republicans are merely waiting for the Democrats to put up a ticket to open the battle. Congressman Everett Sanders of Indiana has been made director of the speakers' bureau, and it is the intention to start the campaign in the Middle West, probably in Nebraska. Charles G. Dawes, vice presidential nominee, is likely to be sent there to make his first speeches. Mr. Dawes, addressing his fellow townsmen of Evanston, Ill., last week, said a number of things that should be pleasing to the American public regardless of party affiliations. In language characteristically vigorous he denounced "the curse of demagoguery in political discussions" by which, he said, the real facts and the economic principles involved in questions of national policy are continually obscured. He pledged himself to adhere, in the coming campaign, to the truth and to the common sense conclusions to be drawn therefrom, and concluded: "As to the demagogue on the stump, whatever may be his party, I want it distinctly understood that in the coming campaign I ask no quarter and will give none. I know that I will have the sympathy of all good citizens irrespective of party and I hope our political opponents will follow the same course. Let common sense reign."

UP IN St. Paul, Minn., assembled the so-called Farmer-Labor progressive national convention which had been denounced in advance by Senator LaFollette and Samuel Gompers because it was known that the Communists who take orders from the Moscow Internationale would try to dominate it. These Reds, led by William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, though seemingly in the minority, actually did get control of the convention, but when the Minnesota delegation threatened to bolt they toned down the platform until it was only pink and then decided to nominate Duncan McDonald, head of the Illinois Workers' party, for President. This, however, was only tentative pending the meeting of the Cleveland convention of the committee for progressive political action on July 4. It was understood that if the Cleveland meeting put up some other candidate, McDonald might be withdrawn and that man endorsed. Many of the delegates in St. Paul wanted to nominate LaFollette, despite his scathing denunciation of the convention, but were persuaded this would be worse than useless.

William Bouck of the state of Washington was nominated for vice president.

W. J. Taylor of Nebraska made a very speech denouncing the Russian policy of the convention and then led a bolt of 40 farmer delegates who refused to submit to the dictation of the Communists.

In the St. Paul platform are several interesting planks. One declares against "Jim Crowism" and calls for full equality, economic and political, for the negro. Another urges a system of land tenure to abolish landlordism and tenantry and designed to secure the land to the user. Of course the platform contains a resolution demanding the recognition of the soviet Russian government.

The Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota, which last week renominated Senator Magnus Johnson, took no part in the convention.

WHILE the Japanese government was doing its best to put a stop to the boycott on American products, Secretary of State Hughes formulated and sent to Ambassador Hanhara his reply to Japan's note of protest against the exclusion clause of the immigration law and compared them with the old "gentlemen's agreement," showing that there is no material difference, congress having only exercised its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international arrangements. The secretary concluded his note by expressing the conviction "that the recognition of the right of each government to legislate in control of immigration should not derogate in any degree from the mutual good will and cordial friendship which have always characterized the relations of the two countries."

BECAUSE of the insistence of the Oregon government that H. C. Cummins, British agent, get out of Mexico at once, Great Britain has severed all relations with Mexico, and there is no telling now when it will grant recognition to the present regime there. British interests in Mexico have been entrusted to the United States and Chile. Prime Minister MacDonald and his cabinet decided that the Mexican attitude was impossible for any self-respecting government to endure. Sir T. B. Hooley was getting ready to sail for Mexico to investigate the question of recognition, but his mission has been called off. Mr. Cummins, who had entrenched himself in the British legation, was ordered home immediately. All the British had asked of Mexico was that Cummins be permitted to remain until the arrival of Hooley. This was refused in a note that was considered impertinent. Expulsion of Cummins was ordered because he sent "rude messages" to the Mexican government in trying to protect the interests of British subjects. He did everything he could in behalf of Mrs. Rosalie Evans, a widow, who has been fighting pluckily to prevent the expropriation of her estate.

FOR a time last week it seemed the rule of the Fascist in Italy was about to come to an end, because of the great scandal arising from the kidnapping and brutal murder of Matteotti, a Socialist deputy who is said to have had in his possession full details of a huge bank failure in which certain Fascist chiefs were involved. So threatening was the situation that Mussolini's ministers tendered their resignations and the king called on the members of the Order of Annunciation—mostly former premiership and members of the royal family—to help form a general cabinet. Mussolini, however, arose to the emergency, displaced and replaced various high officials, directed the arrest of the guilty men and began a general housecleaning of the Fascist government. One of the accused is said to have confessed. By the end of the week the excitement over the affair was waning, but it was admitted that the scandal had dealt Fascism a severe blow. The truth is that the Fascist movement had begun to degenerate from a high moral crusade into a mere political party, many of the members of which were concerned mainly in obtaining and retaining public office. Mussolini's dictatorial methods had begun to irk the people, and while he may continue in power, his rule is likely to be less autocratic.

EDOUARD HERRIOT, France's new premier, went to England Saturday to spend the week-end with Prime Minister MacDonald in conference over the application of the Dawes plan. Before he started he conferred with Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium, and then said France and Belgium were in complete accord concerning the matter. Herriot also received Herr Brietscheid, German Social Democrat deputy, who told him the majority of the reichstag favored carrying out the Dawes plan and that France could count on Germany's solidarity in executing it. The necessary bills for carrying out the Dawes plan will not be introduced in the reichstag before the middle of July, being complicated and extensive.

Herriot disappointed the extreme radicals and many Germans in several matters. First, he declared his policy was to retain control of the Ruhr until Germany had given the requisite guarantees. Then he selected for his minister of war General Nollet, head of the allied control commission in Germany. This caused a great protest from German Nationalists and Monarchists, especially as Herriot said he chose Nollet because he knew more about the military situation in Germany than any other man and that while France's policy would be to take action against the growing militarism in Germany, France would nevertheless help the young German democracy.

Premier Herriot told the French parliament that he was preparing to recognize Russia, and that the French embassy at the Vatican would be suppressed. He said complete amnesty would be granted all war prisoners except those condemned for treason.

PARLIAMENTARY elections in South Africa resulted in victory for the Nationalist-Labor coalition and gave momentum to the movement for an independent republic. Gen. Jan Smuts, former premier, was defeated by a labor candidate, and General Hertzog, advocate of secession from the British empire, was elected. He may be the new premier.

FOR the fourth time Lieut. Ernest de Myster of Belgium won the James Gordon Bennett balloon race with the balloon Belgica, and thus gained permanent possession of the trophy. He traveled about 500 miles and landed in Scotland.

America's globe encircling aviators made good progress last week, flying from Touraine, French Indo-China, to Saigon and then 500 miles to Bangkok, Siam. They expected to reach Rangoon before the week ended.

POST OFFICE employees of Canada struck and tied up the postal service across the Dominion from coast to coast. Business was seriously hampered and its demoralization was feared unless an early settlement was arranged. The workers have been asking an increase of salary, but instead are facing a decrease. Their union has proposed that the government shall place the postal service employees under the industrial disputes act immediately for a settlement of the salary schedule. In the meantime the men will accept the present salary and all benefits antedate April 1, 1924.

"Well, if that is your attitude you will be out till h—l freezes over," was the declaration of James Murdoch, Dominion minister of labor.

Principal Crops Used for Forage

Domestic Animals Consume Three-Fourths of Product of Improved Land.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Seven-tenths of the 365,000,000 acres of land occupied by crops harvested in the census year 1919 were used to produce forage, that is, concentrates and roughage for live stock, says the Department of Agriculture in a review of forage resources based on census data and other material. The area used to produce forage in 1919 was approximately 257,000,000 acres. This compares with 78,000,000 acres, or about two-tenths of the total crop area, used for producing food for human consumption, and 32,000,000 acres, or about one-tenth of the crop area, used for other purposes, principally to grow cotton, tobacco and flax.

As used by the department, the term forage means all vegetable nutrient, fresh or cured, which is consumed by domestic animals. It includes pasture, green feed, hay, straw, silage and cereal. Besides the forage harvested from these 257,000,000 acres, live stock consumed the product of about 80,000,000 acres of humid improved pasture, of probably 171,000,000 acres of humid unimproved grassland pasture over half of which was in farms, and of about 287,000 acres of forest and cut-over pasture land in farms or under other private ownership and in national forests. Live stock also grazed over perhaps 587,000,000 acres of arid or semiarid grass land in the West.

Hay and Forage.

These facts are held to warrant the conclusion that live stock consumed about three-fourths of the product of the improved land in the country and practically all the product of unimproved pastures and grazing land. In this connection it is pointed out that the census classification "Hay and Forage" does not include many crops usually used for forage. It does not include corn (except fodder), and corn is the most important of all crops used for forage. Thus the census report presents a very incomplete picture of our forage resources, when the word forage is used in its broadest sense.

The 257,000,000 acres producing crops for feed yielded slightly more sustenance than the 1,055,000 acres used for pasture. More than one-fourth of the pasture land is in the arid western range, and nearly one-fourth more is forest and cut-over land, having low capacity for carrying live stock.

In the cotton belt in 1919 about 53 per cent of the crop land was devoted to the production of feed for live stock, mostly corn, cowpeas, velvet beans and peanuts. About 37 per cent of the land in this region was devoted to cotton, and other crops not used as feed for live stock or as food for man, except incidentally. Less than 10 per cent was devoted to the production of food consumed directly by man.

In the corn and winter wheat region nearly three-fourths of the crop land in 1919 produced forage for live stock. The remaining fourth produced food except on 2 per cent of the area, which was devoted to tobacco. In the corn belt, where all the hay and nearly all the corn and oats are fed to live stock, about 84 per cent of the crop land produced forage for farm animals, and only 15 per cent produced food for man. Only one-fifth of 1 per cent of the crop area in the corn belt was used for other than feed or food crops.

Hay Is Dominant Crop.

Hay is the dominant crop in the hay and dairying regions to the North and East. It occupies about 33 per cent of the crop land, and corn for fodder and silage occupies nearly 6 per cent more. More than 30 per cent of the crop land in this area is used to grow oats, barley, corn and other crops for feed. About 30 per cent is devoted to crop used for human food.

In the humid eastern half of the United States, considered as a whole, one-fourth of the crop land is used to grow corn for grain, another fourth for hay, fodder and silage, and a fifth for oats and other feed crops. The remaining 30 per cent produces most of the food used directly for human consumption in the United States and over half of the cotton fiber of the world. More than three-fifths of the crop area in the western half of the United States is used for the production of forage. This territory, of course, is largely semiarid or arid, and is mostly in pasture or range land. Wheat occupies the proportion of western crop land devoted to producing feed for live stock is smaller than it is in the East, owing largely to the fact that wheat is one of the best crops that can be grown on semiarid land. Wheat occupied nearly one-third of the harvested crop land in the western half of the United States in 1919. Fruit is also relatively more important in the West than in the East.

Forage crops, however, do not bulk so large in value as in area occupied. Although it took about seven-tenths of the total crop area to produce our harvested forage in 1919, the value of this forage was only a little over half of the farm value of all crops. The average value of crops used for forage in that year was $30.87 an acre, compared with $60.33 for food crops (wheat, fruits, vegetables, etc.), and $83.82 for the fiber and other crops.

Saving Home-Grown Seed Advantageous

Big Help to Gardener and Also His Neighbors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That there are advantages to the home gardener in saving seed where it is grown, both for marketing to his neighbors and for his own use is generally recognized. These advantages, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1890, "Vegetable Seeds for the Home and Market Garden," just published by the United States Department of Agriculture, are twofold: The selection which the gardener gives his seed plants, while not greater than that which the seed grower gives his seed stock, is often better than can be given to seed that is placed on the market, and the plants selected will be the ones which succeed best under local environment. The suggestions in this bulletin are directed to methods of seed saving rather than of seed selection, as few persons engaged in any branch of gardening have the insight, patience, perseverance and enthusiasm required for the development of valuable new varieties of vegetables.

Copies of the bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Young Cockleburbs Most Dangerous to Porkers

Fields infested with cockleburbs should not be used for grazing pigs in the spring when cockleburbs are sprouting, advises A. L. Ward, swine husbandman extension service, A. & M. college of Texas.

The most dangerous time is just as the cocklebur plant pushes up through the surface of the soil. The pigs like these young sprouts, which contain a poisonous substance which results fatally if eaten in sufficient quantities. Experiments have proved that 12 ounces of these sprouts contain sufficient poison to kill a 50-pound shoat. Death usually results quickly, somewhat like sorghum poisoning of cattle.

When pigs are first affected the fire bunch should be removed to a dry lot for a short time, where they should be given whole milk, grease or lard. The surest preventive is to keep pigs from fields infested with burrs until the plants reach a height of four to six inches. The plants at this stage lose the poisonous properties.

Determine Profit From Sow by Size of Litter

The profit from the sow is determined by the number of pigs she raises. If it costs $30 to feed a sow and litter of ten pigs from breeding to weaning time, the cost per pig is only $3, and if there are only six pigs, the cost will be $5 per pig. Of course there are many things that may cause the loss of pigs before weaning, but ordinarily the sow that farrows the good litter is the sow that raises the most pigs and makes the most profit. The number of pigs a sow farrows is determined by the number of ova, or eggs, she deposits at breeding time. It is generally admitted that sows that are gaining in weight and are in fair condition deposit more ova and farrow larger, stronger litters. However, it is not necessary or desirable to have the sow fat, because excessive fat hinders the proper functioning of the sow's regenerative organs.

Soy Beans Superior as Substitute for Tankage

At the Purdue (Ind.) experiment station soy beans have been substituted for tankage with very good results. However, when soy beans are fed, a mineral mixture should be fed. Several may be used. The one which was used at Purdue was 10 parts wood ashes, 10 parts acid phosphate, one part salt.

Other good mineral mixtures are equal parts of wood ashes and salt, equal parts of limestone, salt and bone meal or rock phosphate.

Soy beans contain about one-half the amount of protein which tankage does, so should be fed in about twice the amount of tankage, perhaps three-fourths to a pound per head per day. The wheat does not need to be ground so finely provided it is soaked for a few hours. Soy beans are worth about two-thirds per ton as much as tankage.

FARM FACTS

Plan to sow what you think you can sell.

The best crop of all is one of healthy and sound hogs and girls.

There is no point in giving the farm a name if it is not worth one.

Alfalfa produces a valuable crop and at the same time adds nitrogen to the soil.

Grafting isn't a mister word when it's used in the orchard. Bridge grafting may save many a good tree.

That neglected woodlot, if cleared of crooked, defective and weedy trees may sometime return a good profit.

Ten pure bred cows averaging 8,000 pounds of milk each, return as great a profit as will 60 scrubs averaging 4,000 pounds. Connecticut investigators found.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

MOTHER OF MIGRANTS

One woman cannot mother all the million and a half migrant workers who manded yearly by American industry. The particular fact that Laura Parker helps consists of families who work and drift through the canneries and truck farms in New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Outbuildings, temporarily turned into human habitations for the few weeks of the camp, are usual. Men, women and other children of the Polish and Italian families employed carry the meager amount of equipment that will enable them to exist while they work from daylight until dark in a field or cannery. Babies are uncared for. Children run wild. Thievery, gambling, drinking and bullying are commonplaces. The annual cycle is from city slum to berry patch, to vegetable garden, to oyster bed, and back again.

Is it possible for one woman to do anything? It is for Miss Parker, because the Council of Women for Home Missions is back of her. She is the supervisor of stations established by the council, staffed by undergraduate college and normal school girls who work frequently without pay.

The actual work nearly always means a fight with unspeakable filth. Always it means making friends with the mothers and babies. Sometimes it means hundreds of dollars in equipment given by the employer; sometimes only his allotment of a building and $10 a week for running expenses, without which the council would not attempt its work.

Imagine a nursery where 20 or 30 babies can be cared for. Perhaps one bambino has been brought from "a chicken house, where the only furnishings consist of two beds in which eight people sleep, and a packing box which does service for both table and chairs." Perhaps the slightly older children announce that "baths give children measles, mumps and whooping cough." After the babies, cleanliness for the next in size is regarded by a piece of candy for each bath. Gradually boy volunteers make packing-box furniture; girls like to put on the clean ginghams dresses of nursery assistants; a basketry class; a dress-making class; for the older girls and women when cannery work lets up for a day; proud cooks and dishwashers for the daily hot luncheon; occasional parties for parents at noontime or holiday periods; Bible stories and songs; an occasional day spent in distributing to the men helpful pamphlets in their own tongue, "Registering Your Child's Birth" or "Courts of Law and Their Use."

Out of all this comes to the migrants the meaning of Miss Parker's slogan: "A good American keeps his body, clothes and mind clean."

THE WOMAN WHO CANS

It took the war to teach many of us the money value, the food value, and the pleasure to be got out of canning fruits and vegetables. Melba Crawley of Edgewood Farm, Mount Vernon, N. H., cans permanently and profitably. What was originally a summer home has grown into a successful business plant.

And in these days when news stories frequently play up the departure of industry from the great cities in search of handy raw material, it is interesting to compare Mrs. Crawley's wisdom in staying at the source of fresh supplies, five miles from the railroad though she is.

For those who are interested in the business details Mrs. Crawley says:

"Peas are one of my chief crops and best sellers. Blanching is considered essential to the canning of all vegetables. Corn is fully as good a seller as peas. This is also a vegetable which is difficult to can successfully unless the same precautions are exercised as with peas, in the way of quick handling and using corn of the right age. I try to keep all vegetables in a good healthy condition by frequent cultivation and top dressing with fertilizers, as vegetables grown quickly are more tender and of a far better flavor."

"I raise strawberries, raspberries, black raspberries and blackberries which are used for preserves and jam. "I find as each year goes by I am tempted to cut down the variety of products I put up and try to handle larger quantities of the best sellers. But when one first starts out in such a business she is obliged to put up a larger variety in order to tell what will be the most profitable as well as sell the best."

"I would not advise any woman to take up this business unless she has a natural liking for out-of-door life and is physically able to do this sort of work. She will need stick-to-it-iveness, and patience, and must not be afraid to work. Such a business never becomes as monotonous as most other work. One should have enough to live and run the business on for at least two years before much return can be expected."

THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS

SYNOPSIS.—In a low drinking place, in the Japanese town of Mitagiri, Kiyama, dissolute son of the wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Thunder Gate, boasts of a girl he is to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following a fight in the place, a drunken white man, speaking perfect Japanese, is left unconscious. Kiyama, dreading his father's anger, sees a way of escape. He changes clothes with the unconscious white man (to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance), leaving a note of explanation. Leaving Kiyama is robbed and slain. The white man, as Kiyama, is taken, unconscious, to the house of Aochi. His name is Robert Wells. Wells awakens bewildered, but to familiar scenes, in Aochi's house. Aochi, almost speechless from age, does not perceive the deception. He had determined his unworthy son should be put to death, but Wells' deportment leads him to think a reformation is possible. Aochi dies that day. Wells finds Kiyama's note, and understands. Priests remind him of a bargain he has made, to buy a girl. He goes to the temple and purchases the girl, to all appearances white, though the priests assure him she has Chinese blood. She tells him she is white—"all white"—and begs him to spare her. The narrative goes back to Wells' youth, motherless son of a missionary in a Japanese village. His father sends the boy to America to be educated. James Sanderson, wealthy San Francisco contractor, welcomes the boy, his sister's son. In college Bob does well, but is considered "wild." Wells meets Alberta Howard, orphan daughter of his uncle's former business partner, and is impressed. She is really in love with Raymond Williams, but seeing Wells as his uncle's heir, she flirts with him, while scheming with Williams to encompass the downfall of Bob's father. Sanderson plans to put Williams and Bob in charge of a bridge-building job at Fushiki, Japan.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

"Was that what you wanted to say?" "Not exactly. You know—well—after what you just said, I thought—" "Like to work on it, Bob? It might, grudgingly, be a good thing." Then, "There isn't any danger, is there?"

Bob laughed. "I'm one tough guy. As far as that goes, it wouldn't surprise me if I could handle a knife in the proscribed seventeen ways with the best of them."

"It might be a good thing," Sanderson repeated. "You know Williams, too. That'd help the work along. And you know the outlandish language. Yes, it might be excellent for the firm," and for you, too, he was thinking. "You could get a good day's work out of the labor there, Bob? You know how to work them?"

"You knowedg reeking of a pig-litter! Up with that keg of nails. Up, I said, told! Would you return in your next incarnation in the form of a scavenger-crab with but half a claw? Could I, Uncle Jim? I'll say I could!"

Sanderson smiled, and so it was settled.

Wells took with him several things. There was the undying love of Alberta (given after coming from Williams, with many kisses, having assured him that she'd wait until he found "a way"). Small wonder that she professed such ardent affection, of a kind best described by the "affectionately yours." She had seen Sanderson with his arm about his nephew. She had heard him call Wells "my son."

And there was Sanderson's words of warning, which concealed deep affection.

"Remember, young Bob," a hand on the shoulder. "No monkey business. On the job twenty-four hours a day—not a week, you scamp. No wine. No cards. You have no voice for singing. I needn't worry about the women when there is—hm—hm—a dear girl waiting for you to show your stuff. Remember, and take care of yourself. There will be plenty more jobs. Don't kill yourself on this one. Not that work'll hurt you."

His voice grew husky as the "all off" gone clanged. "Be a good lad, Bob. Make us all proud of you, son." Clearing his throat, he added, playfully—so Wells thought, then—"This is your last chance. Williams is steady, Bob. He's boss. Do what he says."

As the stern of the boat churned he bay water to brackish foam, Alberta waved gayly to the two hats until waved back. She felt secure. With the two men so close, in the company, it had been almost an impossibility to keep each from knowing of the other. Now, she felt safe, able to relax. To plan ahead, if she could have the desired, the truly desired, Ray's hot words, his attention to her every whim, his arms about her (and how she fantasied them already) together with money, position. If she could. Otherwise . . . She had been care-

CHAPTER VII

Rokugozaki had long been a barren port, until harsh words had overridden the Imperialists' opposition. Situate near the Russian shores, was a landlocked harbor, it was stretching out an impotent hand for trade. No railway connected Rokugozaki with Fushiki. The sand was shifting.

Not until Gordon of Sanderson's company presented a report did the Liberals feel confident enough to start action. In the preliminary stage the Imperialists did little more than clamor. Fushiki would not receive an excellent interest for lending their money to some Japanese concern. It was a thing unheard of. Objection after objection was overruled. Only one sop was tossed to them: the work must be done at a definite, stated time that was none too long, as Gordon reminded Williams and Wells before they departed.

The "sop" was more than the Liberals imagined. If, as old Marakito, the Imperialist spokesman, pointed to his friends, the seign-jin and nobles up to the letter of the agreement, it would be exceedingly difficult for the Liberals to give foreign capital more work. For his part—and Marakito winked slyly—he would surely do anything to expedite matters.

Sanderson had waved aside any suggestion of Gordon's that an internal strife existed. If there were any, it meant nothing to him. Nor should it to Williams. They were engineers, not politicians.

The first night that Williams and Wells slept in the little house in Fushiki which they used until a shack could be built for them, they were awakened many times. A score of men were outside—never to be seen. For the night was dark—and finally Williams came into the other's room. "What's it they say, Bob?" he asked nervously.

"Oni wato soto! Translated, it is a gentle little phrase which means 'Out, devils!'"

"Tell them to get away from the windows and let us sleep."

"Wouldn't do a darn bit of good. This is a holiday for them. All they'd do would be to climb up on a roof and pitch rocks at the panels. And paper doesn't stop the sort of granite I notice around here. Go to sleep and forget it. They'll tire before morning."

Marakito found many little ways to hamper the Sanderson job. Sacks of concrete disappeared, to filter away in the water, when most needed. The donkey engine missed, as Wells remarked, either a leg or an ear every night, and the wires were kept hot with orders for more parts, until Gordon wanted to know if the boys were opening a machine shop or building a bridge.

Williams busied himself with the inside work. When the laborers quit between two days, not even asking for pay, Wells hired more. When they announced that they, also, would labor no more, he cursed them, their ancestors, their family gods, and then brought in new coolies from Osaka.

Long fingers of trestles crept along the brown sand. The first bridge of the series already spanned the inlet of Fushiki. Reading the reports, Sanderson grinned. Three days ahead of schedule.

It was on the night that Wells left for Osaka to superintend and personally conduct material to Fushiki that Marakito honored Williams with a ceremonial visit.

After being welcomed, the old Imperialist made great show of spreading ribbon-tied currency and wrapped rolls of gold. Then he placidly settled back, licking the slender glass of shaved vanilla-flavored ice-which Williams had offered him.

Williams was sick of Fushiki. Why hadn't he heard from Alberta? Why hadn't he gone to Osaka himself, instead of sending Wells? Perhaps Wells received his letters there. What did this old bird want? He, Williams, wanted a cold bath. And sleep. But this money!

Marakito saw the other's eyes lose their lackluster appearance at the sight of the gold. He broke open a second roll, and set down the empty glass with a polite hiss.

"There are three thousand dollars upon the table," he told the glass. Williams had none of Wells' Oriental restraint.

"What for?" he asked abruptly. Marakito closed his eyes. "A day's pay. Pay? Reward, rather. I would be displeased if the bridges were complete—too soon. Your company is fined a thousand dollars for each day's delay. On the table is triple that amount. Refund a third to your employer. Keep a third for yourself. The remainder for that other," speaking of Wells.

"Any?"

"A reason you would not understand. Your employer loses nothing. It must be secret. Tell none but the other engineer." He kept a hand on his short knife, none knew what these queer foreigners would do. "That is—for up to twenty days. No more."

A hurried picture passed through Williams' mind. It was possible. There had been trouble already. There might be more. Spans lost. Pieces gone. Quicksand, Gordon was not infallible. Why—why not keep it all?

The engineer moved in his chair and the eyes of Marakito opened with a snap. "He would not take it," Williams said briefly.

"He need not see . . . what might happen," Marakito understood of what Williams was thinking.

"In the old days," the Jap's eyes slitted a trifle, "there would be a knife—zzz—but now: questions would be asked."

Williams shivered at the grim tone. Excitedly, with nervous fingers, he lit a cigarette. Before he could speak, Marakito asked softly: "If it is permitted to ask, perhaps the other engineer has . . . does he like women? He might be enticed away? No! Wine, then? He does? Yoh! It is a simple matter. We will entertain him. You say—do not look amazed, I have lived in America, or how should I speak thus?—you say 'Ho! There are influential men here. There has been trouble. You visit them. Be friendly. Drink wine with them.' You slap him on the back. Be a sport. Tickle him gently in the ribs. 'Be a devil in this homey town.' That is how. We will do the rest."

"He will not go. Not in working hours."

Marakito looked at him sadly. "How? Are you not the chief? Is he not under your orders?" He caressed the golden pile with his eyes. "We will not hurt him."

Williams claved his shirt pocket for another cigarette. What had Sanderson said? No horse. The last chance. Wasn't this the way?

"It is true," he agreed. "I am the chief."

Wells grinned when he was told of his new duties.

"Sort of glad-hand boy, huh? How are you, Marakito-San? Accept of this excellent cigar, which cost a yen. We hope it blows up, and you with it, you old hypocrite. Don't you know we realize that you are gumming up the works?"

He laughed. "That the stuff, Ray? As easy as easy. Be sure to write Uncle Jim that I'm entertaining for the Fushiki end of the firm. I'd hate to have him hear that I'm setting out into the bean-oil district on my own." He yawned. "Gosh, but I'm all in. I ought to write home myself, but I'm going to hit the rice-straw. You send 'em all my love, Ray." He paused. "This'll give me a chance to brush up my bushido; that's the code of honorable conduct, Ray, and it's some long-winded affair."

The little shell-curved roofed tea-house of Fushiki was gay with lanterns. All of the panels had been removed, and Wells took his place without speech or welcome upon the zabuton of silk. Marakito was about to do honor to the foreign engineer.

The room was brightly lighted, which, Wells knew, was unusual, but probably intended to give him the "white lights" which the Yankee is supposed to hold dear.

Finally Marakito, as the host, broke the silence with the consecrated formula: "O-somatsu degozaimasu ga!" done, please!" and all bowed slightly, plucked up their choicest and began to eat the preliminary rice and vinegared fish. The maids poured warmed sake into the cups; not until several of these had been drunk were tongues loosened.

It is clear that Ray intends to ruin Bob. Do you suspect his method?

DAIRY TALK

IMPROVING CATTLE IS NEW IN AMERICA

The United States has received its dairy breeds from Europe, as well as most of its methods in dairying, knowledge of the use of milk, and methods of manufacturing. In many instances the American dairyman has greatly improved upon European methods, but he is indebted to Europe for his primary lessons. Perhaps it is another case of the pupil excelling the master.

The first cattle were brought to America by Columbus at the time of his second voyage. These cattle were never improved and received little or no care. At least they are not important in the history of the development of cattle in this country. Interest in the dairy business only dates back to the early part of the Eighteenth century. The early settlers of our New England and Southern seaboard states brought cattle with them from their native homes. Scientific breeding was not practiced, so these cattle were crossed indiscriminately and formed that class of cattle that is now generally spoken of as "natives."

Interest in better cattle was evidenced about 1820, when several importations of improved cattle were made from Europe to America. No one of these importations was large, but they formed a nucleus of good cattle that the American dairyman has so well improved. From 1860 to 1890 the dairy breed associations were organized and through their efforts the various breeds have been promoted and the breeds kept pure through their systems of registration. Improvement of dairy cattle is a new enterprise in America and the dairyman may feel proud of his accomplishments and be encouraged to greater things in dairy development.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Garget Often Is Cause of Great Loss in Herd

Garget often causes considerable loss in the herd. When an animal is found to be suffering from this trouble she should not be milked till the last as the disease may be carried on the hands. After milking the animal should be washed with a good disinfectant. Milk from the diseased quarters should not be milked on the floor but milked into a pail and disposed of. Cows suffering from it may be treated with the following mixture: Mix eight ounces of a good lubricant, eight ounces of wool fat, two fluid ounces belladonna, two fluid ounces extract pokeroor. Warm and mix. Massage udder thoroughly. Feed one tablespoonful of powdered pokeroor and one tablespoonful of saltpeper three times a day three feeds and continue again if necessary. Diseased cows should be isolated from the rest of the herd.

Feed at Regular Periods

The usual practice in feeding milk cows is to give the concentrates before milking and the roughage after milking, both morning and evening. In addition many dairymen feed a little roughage at noon. Because of the large capacity of the cow's paunch it is not necessary to give the noon feed. Two feeds daily provided at regular periods make a good rule to follow. The frequency of feeding has little or no effect upon the test.

Cooling Milk in Summer

The coming of warm days has made it necessary for the dairyman who is supplying whole milk to the trade to go over his equipment for cooling the product before it is delivered to the transportation companies. It is important that the milk be reduced in temperature before it starts on its journey to market. If it is warm, there is a tendency to churn the milk and make it lumpy as a result of the action in transit.

Box Stalls Are Best

Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butter fat than those kept in stanchions, but the slight increase in product does not balance the added expense for space, bedding and labor. Box stalls are to be recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing cows for records.

Feed Value of Hays

Sudan grass, timothy and millet all have much the same kind of feeding value for milk cows, all being decidedly inferior to alfalfa or clover because of their lack in bone and muscle-building material. With hays of this sort, it is necessary to feed much more of expensive purchased feed such as bran and oil meal.

Feed of Record Cow

Alfalfa and mixed hay, corn silage, and a grain ration consisting of the usual concentrates mixed on the farm with an analysis of about twenty per cent of digestible protein, fifty per cent of carbohydrates and five per cent of fat, was the main ration fed to Onyx Luth, the world's new junior three-year-old record cow for ten months. In that time this young Holstein cow gave 21,387.2 pounds of milk, which yielded 727.61 pounds of fat—equal to 900.3 pounds of butter.

Lesson for June 29

REVIEW—REHOBOAM TO NEHEMIAH

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Psalm 144.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—Selected Stories of the Quarter.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—Main Events of the Quarter.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Chief Persons of the Quarter.
READING PROBLEMS AND ADULT TOPIC.—From Rehoboam to Nehemiah.

Three methods of review are suggested:

I. Modern Application of the Outstanding Teachings of the Quarter's Lessons.

For adult classes qualified members may be asked a week ahead to present the teachings of the quarter along the following lines:

1. Patriotism. It should be pointed out how the nation suffered and was utterly ruined because of the lack of patriotism.
2. The need of real education. Because the people were not taught about God they went into idolatry. The real need of the nations of the world today is to be taught about God.
3. Evil which afflict society, such as luxurious indulgence, tampering with the occult, necromancy, etc.

II. Biographical.

This method is always interesting and can be adapted to all grades. The most outstanding men in the history of Israel and Judah appeared in this quarter's lessons, namely, Rehoboam, Jeroboam, Ahab, Elijah, Elisha, Amos, Hosea, Athaliah, Hezekiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Nehemiah, etc. These can be assigned to different members of the class the previous week to present the outstanding lessons associated with each character.

III. The Summary Method.

This means pointing out the central teaching of each lesson. The following suggestions to that end are offered:

Lesson 1. The kingdom so gloriously administered in David's time reached its climax under Solomon, but because his heart was turned from God through the influence of his heathen wives God determined that the kingdom would be rent from him. Rehoboam's wicked stupidity in refusing the counsel of experienced men caused the work of two generations to be undone in a moment.
Lesson 2. Elijah's struggle with Baal proves that the Lord is the true God and that because He does respond when called upon in sincerity He alone is entitled to be worshipped.
Lesson 3. The proof that Elisha was chosen by God to succeed Elijah was that his anointing of the Spirit was discernible by the sons of the prophets and that he did similar and even greater works than Elijah.
Lesson 4. Those who give themselves up to the practice of sin will ultimately come to ruin. The wages of sin is death.
Lesson 5. Israel went into exile because of her sins, according to God's announcement through Amos. God's word cannot fail.
Lesson 6. In spite of Athaliah's wicked purpose to destroy the seed royal, Joash of Messiah's line was preserved and elevated to the throne. No purpose of God can eventually fail.
Lesson 7. Hezekiah, when threatened by the Assyrians, resorted to God's house and sought the prophet of God. God's house is the sure resort of His people when in distress and his ministers are best qualified to give help.
Lesson 8. Because Jeremiah faithfully declared God's word, God delivered him from his enemies.
Lesson 9. Judah, like Israel, went into captivity because of her sins. God never forgets the faithful ones nor fails to punish the wicked.
Lesson 10. Though Israel's leaders failed, and their faith involved the nation in ruin, the Good Shepherd will eventually come and deliver them and exalt them to their proper place among the nations.
Lesson 11. When the period of the captivity was fulfilled God caused a remnant to return. God never forgets. He can even move the heart of a heathen king to fulfill His purpose.
Lesson 12. Through the reading of God's Word the people were revived and they put away their sins. The only way to bring a revival in righteousness living is to bring the people to know God.

Rejecting the Truth

Has God predestinated some to be lost? Certainly not. There is no such thought in Scripture. The reason why some perish is their own deliberate rejection of the truth. "Because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved."

Will Not Accept

God will not accept the evil words of new thought for the sacrifice and atonement of Christ.—The Living Word.

The Controversy

A controversy with one who preaches the word of God, is with God—not the preacher.—The Living Word.

Christian Life

The Christian life is not knowing or hearing, but doing.—F. W. Robertson

Not Well Since Three Years Old

The experience of Mrs. J. C. Dacus, 1621 Booker St., Little Rock, Ark., was in fact a repetition of what has happened in thousands upon thousands of instances. She had a running condition of the ear from the time she was three years old.

In spite of treatment it persisted and became very offensive. One day a neighbor recommended Pe-ru-na and La-cu-pia which had relieved his wife of the same trouble.

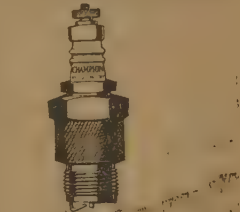

Mrs. Dacus used three bottle of each of these quick acting remedies and reported that they were effective and offensive odor are both gone.

Her disease was one of the very many forms taken by Catarrh and is known as chronic Otitis.

Wherever the catarrh condition is located Pe-ru-na reaches it. May be purchased any place in tablet or liquid form.

Take notice girls! Violet lip stick is said to be the most popular with the boys who do the most esthetic kissing now.

The weather has given ample time for every farmer to dispose of the grass. If it still has your crop it will pay you to go into the hay business.

If "familiarity really breeds contempt" what kind of feelings do the average boys and girls have for each other these days.

Cotton blooms are plentiful now which goes to show that the boll weevil is leaving a farm, now and then, that he fails to puncture.

When girls cease to appreciate the respectful attentions of a young gentleman, its time for their mothers to watch their step.

Some dogs around town are almost as foolish about an auto ride as 99 per cent of the young men and boys are.

Did you ever notice how easy it is to offend a person when their own conscience is backing up what you say?

The amount of lying being done in New York every day now, if charged up to us nationally, would be sufficient to damn the entire United States.

Political conventions always develop a great deal of bull shooting and bombast in building a platform, but it don't mean anything. No man living has ever heard of one after the election is over.

Many a professional delegate will return home from the New York convention with a pocket full of whiskey and Catholic cash. Money will be no object in the eyes of the people who intend to buy that nomination.

No old saw carries more truth than the one that says: "A rolling stone gathers no moss." The fellow who is always looking for a "better place" is more than apt to find it after a while—in the poor house.

The papers poke fun at William Jennings, but he has a mysterious way of handling democratic national conventions about to his notion. He has many years of that kind of experience and has never had the steam roller put over him yet.

About 95 per cent of the delegates to the New York convention are secretly grooming themselves as "Dark Horses." After a few days now, when the fight gets hot and the lightning begins to flash it is liable to hit almost anywhere.

We promised, when it was so cold last winter, not to say a word no matter how hot it got this summer. Well we are game, all right. The last few days have been real warm and comfortable when you remember how you almost froze last winter.

Protestant ministers all over the country are beginning to train their batteries in earnest on the horrible social conditions that are so widely prevalent for the last year or two. They are doing right. Agitation will get results even if some high brows kick over the traces.

The line is going to be drawn between the syndicated wealth of this country and the farmer and other middle class citizens. The party that clearly stands for equal rights to the poor as well as the rich and lives up to it, is going to be a winner. If neither of the old parties care to qualify for this arrangement their future days will be few and full of trouble.

It is beginning to dawn on the minds of the people that we old fellows who have been contending for cleaner social conditions are not so much out of date after all. Years can add age to an individual but they can not change the immutable laws that govern the social relations of the sex.

A PERIOD OF UNLIMITED GALL

There are more people engaged in trying to get something for nothing now than at any other time we have any knowledge of.

The weekly newspaper man is, perhaps, in a better position to realize this fact than almost anyone else. His mail, at times, becomes a burden to him from the number of high sounding and meaningless appeals that reach him to help put over this drive or this wonderful educational campaign or other great scheme for making the world better, wealthier and wiser. The idea seems to prevail that the weekly editor is a soft snap.

They will send in enough propaganda every week to more than fill up the paper, but they never remember that the editor has to live too and enclose a check to sorter help him out.

All sorts of schemes are devised. Sometimes it will be a heart reducing appeal to help out some great imaginary educational institution. Again it will be a sobbing document asking for help for millions of babies that may be born in want. Sometimes they sound real reasonable, then again they are so palpably fraudulent that a single glance will show you how monumental the gall mania can develop in some crooks.

There is one invariable rule that applies to all of these important appeals and that is, if you will take the time to figure it out, there is always a soft job, or so awaiting the fellow that puts it over. He gets the job of counting the cash—and spending it too.

These things are disgusting beyond expression and still, many of them get by and fleece the people out of thousands of dollars without even promising anything in return. They get the money and you are supposed to take yours out in glory.

Miss Myrtle McDavid, of Monticello, is visiting Miss Martha Peyton this week.

According to the Alabama Court of Appeals, we can all have a still now just so its home made. They say it is no violation of law to have any kind of a machine for making whiskey except a complete, bona fide bought still. A petit jury ain't got a thing on our Supreme Court.

THE CROPS

From personal observation and the best data we can gather from among our farmer friends, the general condition of crops is fairly normal now. During the rainy period that lasted through May and over in to June, there was a good start and became a dangerous factor on many farms.

So far as our immediate section is concerned, this danger has been averted now and all crops are fairly clean. The general estimate is that the cotton crop especially is from 15 to 30 days late, though it is forging to the front now and looks promising.

The boll weevil has arrived in several localities and is laying his plans for a sweeping campaign a little later. To our surprise, very few farmers seem inclined to make any effort to offset the ravages of this pest, and most of them feel certain that the excessively hot weather we have been having has about eliminated the danger from the boll weevil.

The fall out crop was practically killed by the cold weather last winter, but a fairly good yield of spring oats is being harvested now.

All in all, right at the present time there is nothing to indicate a crop failure this year and the general feeling among the farmers is optimistic.

A fairly good fruit crop is being made and the black berry crop promises plenty of jam and preserves for the thrifty housewife.

In some sections rains are still coming with a little too much frequency, while in other sections the cry of dry weather is already being heard.

WHEN DID IT HAPPEN?

There was, a few years ago, a law that prohibited indecent exposure of the person in public.

There was also another law that made it a crime for males or females to masquerade in the apparel of the opposite sex.

We would appreciate it if some legal luminary would tell us when these laws were repealed, or by what "technicality" they were made inoperative and when.

We have glaring and shameful daily evidence that they are not being observed any more and we don't suppose there is a conspiracy among the officers of the law not to enforce them any more, consequently they must have been repealed, or otherwise abrogated by legal technicalities.

Some information on the subject would be gratefully received, as we are one of these old fossils who believe either in law enforcement or law repealment.

A SPLENDID TRIBUTE

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

I wonder if the people realize the fact that there has grown up in their midst a lovely woman endowed with a voice which in its melodious flow might be deemed the very echo of the spirit of song.

It was my privilege, on Monday afternoon, to listen to a short recital by Miss Roberta Curry, as in the home of her parents, she sang with sweetest notes and with rare skill the highest order of classical music, as well as some of the old songs so dear to our hearts.

It was an hour of enchantment and of rarest pleasure, and I could but thank God that he had given to the world one who by the use of her talent, which had been cultivated, could so move upon the heart as to make all things fairer and sweeter. Modestly, unaffectedly and gracefully she sang to give pleasure to a veteran, and with an audience of but three hearers, rendered a program that was worthy of the plaudits of a multitude. One of the numbers was, "The Last Rose of Summer."

Years ago the writer listened to Patti, the famous "Song Bird." As she stirred the hearts of hundreds when, as an encore, she sang the same song. This is one time when I am convinced that comparisons are not odious.

In the Zenith of her fame Patti, as she melted the hearts of her hearers with the old song, was never more soul stirring nor more perfectly rendered it than did Miss Roberta.

I pray that she may live long to glorify the world with her voice and bring sunshine into the lives of those who have the privilege of listening to sweetest song as if issues from her lips.

REFUSES BONUS

Secretary Weeks has received the following declaration from a lieutenant who declined to accept the bonus provided by congress: "The service of my country in time of war is not of a kind that can be rewarded by a gratuity from Congress. I wish to have my name removed from the mailing list of the applications for the recently enacted soldier bonus."

The name was not made public. It is regrettable that it was not. The writer is a real patriot. But his view doesn't mean that soldiers who will accept the adjusted compensation were not patriots. Those who served, even after the payment, will have fared worse than those who remained at home. Even if every American soldier and sailor should refuse the bonus, the nation would not be relieved of the obligation so to adjust the compensation of service men as to put it somewhat on the plane with the earnings of those who remained behind the battle lines. Service at the front was as valuable as service at home.—Journal.

PALM CANYON

Nature richly endowed this country with much of the most majestic scenery on the globe. The choicest places "have been reserved for you, that you and your children after you may know and enjoy these unspoiled bits of native America." Uncle Sam is ever alert for new scenic assets of outstanding value in the old wilderness which come down to us as left by nature and practically unchanged by the hand of man.

One of the latest selections to form a link in Uncle Sam's chain of unmatched beauty spots is Palm canyon, which has been described as "A bit of Arabia transplanted to the Western hemisphere," located 55 miles southeast of Riverside, Cal.

Here in a series of canyons but little removed from a desertlike section grow scores of magnificent Washington palms—tall, graceful, picturesque—scarcely old, undoubtedly, the only native palms in all California, as well as a number of species of interesting and unusual cacti—the entire ensemble forming a botanical collection both unusual and extraordinary.

These native palms are scattered along the banks of a tortuous little stream which flows through the canyon and clustered around it in groves where it emerges from the hills. The scene is both surprising and romantic. It is likewise magnificent because almost directly overhead Mount San Jacinto rears its lofty head. In one direction the canyon appears to be closed by a great wall of colored rock. Righting about face the view leads out onto the desert beyond.

Nearly may be seen other palms, larger perhaps, older too, possibly, which have been burned and scarred through enforced participation in certain Indian ceremonies having to do with the burning of the so-called "skirts" while still on the trees. Many of these unusual and peculiar-to-America trees have been cut down by various people and carried away for numerous uses.

THE METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, primarily a "show place," occupies a high rank among our great educational institutions. The largest and most important museum of art in the United States—the imposing structure which houses the priceless treasures—occupies a plot carved from the sacred precincts of Central park, New York.

The astonishing exhibits here displayed are a revelation and an education. One could spend a month here and not have time to absorb the full significance of all he saw.

A list of these exhibits would fill this entire paper. To give you an impression of the extent, variety and unusualness, I mention the following:

A teapot made by John Coney who engraved the plates for the first paper money used in America and died more than two centuries ago; a room papered with wall paper which hung in an ancient home for more than 200 years; a collection of musical instruments, arranged by country and according to date; one of the richest collections of English glass in existence; displays of ornamental pottery from distant lands; exhibits of old paintings and sculptures extraordinary, baskets, lace, crystal, jade—everything one can think of and many things which one does not think of.

Here are Roman frescoes from a Pompeii home overthrown by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 79 A. D. There, a sarcophagus, found in Cyprus, dating back to about 600 B. C.

Outstanding features are caskets and jewelry, the property of a princess—only daughter of an Egyptian king who reigned about 1900 B. C., found in 1914 in the mud in the valley of the River Nile near one of the pyramids and supposedly overlooked by vandals when the tomb of the princess was ransacked many years before: the Tomb of Perneb, an Egyptian officer of the period about 4500 B. C., removed intact from its resting place in Egypt, borne by camels across the desert sands, shipped across the ocean and set up in the museum, exactly as its builders left it. This tomb shows both the tremendous size and the dignity of the burial-ground architecture of the ancient Egyptians. Its brightly painted walls are silent reminders of the greatness of color with which these people associated the tomb of death as compared with the somberness common in our day.

Joyce plays golf and he prefers a solitary round with only the caddie present. He had a new boy one day recently, and played as usual.

"I fancy I play the worst game in the world," he confessed to the caddie.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, sir," was the consoling reply. "From what the boys were saying about another gentleman who plays here, he must be worse than you are."

"What's his name?" asked the player hopefully.

And the caddie replied: "Joyce."

Helpful Advice to Overworked Women

MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN
1820 ELM ST., NEW ALBANY, IND.

DAY in and day out, week in and week out the tired, over-worked housewife and mother toils on, sweeping, dusting, cooking, cleaning and mending. Is it any wonder that after a time a weakness, such as Mrs. Chapman had, develops and the wife and mother pays a toll in physical weakness and pain for her efforts of love, the natural result of overwork?

Women who find themselves afflicted with weakness, pain, headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability and melancholia will be interested in Mrs. Chapman's letter, and should realize that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is especially adapted to overcome such conditions.

Mrs. Chapman's Letter Reads as Follows:

NEW ALBANY, IND.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weakness which many women have from over work, and from which I suffered for quite a while. I wasn't fit to do my work and my sister advised me to take this medicine. After the first few days the pains were not so severe as they had been and after taking a few bottles I am not bothered any more. I am doing my housework every day and highly recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman suffering from female trouble. Only yesterday a friend called me on the phone and knowing what it did for me wanted to know what to ask for at the drug-store, as she meant to give it a trial."—MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN, 1820 Elm Street, New Albany, Indiana.

Another Case of Nervous Breakdown

MEMPHIS, TENN.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting, I could not do any of my work except a little at a time and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw a little book on to my porch and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles and then in about three months I too was more or less in perfect health. I do all my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—MRS. O. J. HINKLEY, 415 1/2 E. Georgia St., Memphis, Tenn.

JUDGE REYNOLDS NOT TO SPEAK TO BALDWIN COUNTY S. S. ASSOCIATION

Bay Minette, Ala., (Special to the Chilton County News).—In answer to notice in the Union-Banner of June 26, stating that L. H. Reynolds, of Clanton, had been invited to address the Baldwin county Sunday School Association at Robertsdale on the first Sunday in July, will say:

That there is no Baldwin County Sunday School Association. There is a similar organization known as the Baldwin County Council of Christian Education, and there is also a Baldwin County Baptist Sunday School Association. Neither of these have a meeting on the first Sunday in July, and neither of these organizations have ever extended an invitation to L. H. Reynolds, of Clanton, to address them at any time.

CHAS. C. HAND,

DON'T EAT TOO MUCH

Tomorrow is that glorious Fourth that used to mean so much to our forefathers.

As you have noticed from both the county papers, this national day is going to be fittingly observed in Clanton this year.

Any winds of stunts are going to be pulled off to make you laugh and forget, for a time, the boll weevils and all your other minor troubles.

Then, listen! After you have laughed until your digestion has done its perfect work and your interior mechanism begins to call for more fuel, the good ladies down there are going to serve you, without money and without price, a dish of barbecue prepared especially for you on which you will be able to keep up steam enough to enjoy the rest of the fun.

That greasy pole climbing will be an exercise for our acrobatic stars at the catching of that wild African pig, specially imported (from the country) for this occasion, with plenty of lard in him and a gallon poured on the outside, will give everyone an opportunity of showing the world what a tenacious grip they have in their hands. If you hold that pig necks and dimes will be absolutely out of circulation if you get hold of them.

There will also be two games of real league ball playing, provided the boys do not lose too much sleep the night before nor eat too much of the good things on the grounds that day.

The widely known and versatile Frank Willis Barnett, of the S. G. N. is to speak at 9:30 that morning and he is well worth hearing.

Hon. Bibb Graves, of the Capital City, speaks at 1:30 and will be sure to tell you a great deal of interesting things and entertain you with an eloquence and rhetoric that has made him famous.

It will be a full day and if you don't get "full" it will be your own fault.

MT. CARMEL ICE CREAM

There will be an ice cream supper at Mt. Carmel church, Adams, Ala., on the night of July 5. Everybody invited to come. For benefit of the church.

SHAMEFUL LAWLESSNESS

Certain Section of Chilton County Discounting the Woolly West

A real old time blood and thunder chapter of reckless lawlessness could be truthfully compiled, almost every week, writing the shady history of a certain section of this county.

The color line seems to be utterly ignored by these modern desperados, and you are just as liable to meet an ebony hued Rube Burroughs or Jesse James as you are to look into the muzzle of a 44 in the hands of a white man.

Some of the more timid citizens suffer all kinds of indignities and abuse at the hands of these bootlegging terrorists and then are afraid to invoke the law fear they will be called to account and murdered by these high handed gentry, or their friends.

No regard for law seems to be observed at all, and they order their own laws and dispense their own punishments without reference to any legal system whatever.

The making and selling of whiskey is carried on with a regularity and boldness that is surprising and the word is freely passed out that they will resent any and all interference at the muzzle of their guns and pistols.

One of the distinctive effects of this outlaw spirit is manifested in their point blank refusal to obey the law and dip their cattle.

In the last few weeks the county has been out several thousand dollars by the blowing up of dipping vats. In the localities where these things occur, the air is almost always red-tinged with the perfume of the sour snash as it is made in to the joy juice that damns. The violation of law is like all other sins that we take on. Step by step a person loses respect for all law and naturally drifts in to being an outlaw in character as well as in fact.

Last week three vats were blown up north of the city and the fourth one would have been gone, but the charge of dynamite failed to go off. Coming in to town from that same direction, Saturday night, a colored Jesse, notoriously known as a bootlegger and whiskey runner, who carried with him in an unlighted car, his pug-nacious spouse as well as his heavy artillery, met a Mr. Smitherman on the road who was going home.

When Smitherman heard the approaching car and saw the momentary glimmer of a little flash light, he rightly concluded that some high handed whiskey runner was out on his rounds and the best thing for him to do was to get out of his way.

So he ran his car out on the side of the road and turned off his lights, making himself as inconspicuous as possible. But this cold blooded marauder saw him and, concluding that it was a car of officers in quest of prohibition violators he turned on the gas and ran directly in to the standing car, while a big pistol, landed ready to "shoot it out" and kill a few prohibition sleuths.

Discovering their mistake they proceeded to give Smitherman and his party a general cussing out. One of them came on to Wyatt's garage, in the city, and got help for his battered machine.

The car of Mr. Smitherman was badly wrecked and he left it by the side of the road right where it was hit. During the night some miscreant went to it, and dismantled, even stealing all four of the tires off of it. The damage in the wreck and the violation of thieves left him only a pile of junk. His car was totally a ruin.

So far as we have been able to learn, no arrests and no warrants have been issued and this amber-hued Rube and his Amazonian wife are still free as the air, and doubtless making further plans to defy the law when and where they please.

We understand that this woman was already under bond for violating the prohibition law, having, just last week, led one Federal and two county officers on an auto chase for several miles and keeping up the race until they had shot two tires off her car, thereby reducing her speed until they could overhaul her.

She gave bond but they confiscated her car. The sheriff had the car in the jail yard, in 6 or 8 feet of his own house, but a night or so after he took it in charge, some one set it on fire and now it is only a pile of junk.

What are the people going to do about such flagrant conditions? The way things are going on we will all have to bear arms in self defense. We need some pitiless law enforcement to the very limit. These particular localities should be rigidly cleaned out if it takes a regiment of soldiers to do it.

The law is becoming the joke and the laughing stock of these people and no limit should be set to a clean up campaign that really cleaned up.

MERCHANT-KEMP

A marriage of more than ordinary interest to Clantonites was solemnized in Birmingham Monday last.

The contracting parties were Mr. Donald Merchant, a very popular and prominent young man, of Centerville, and Miss Annie Kemp, the lovely and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kemp, of our city.

The marriage had been planned to take place at the home of the bride's parents next Sunday, but both of Cupid's victims happening to meet in Birmingham Monday, they decided to surprise everybody and embark at once upon their blissful voyage on the sea of matrimony.

The groom is said to be an exceptionally steady and efficient boy of business and has hosts of friends and well wishers, where he is best known. He certainly displayed a very high degree of appreciation of the beautiful fringes that adorn lovely girlhood when he happened to the good luck of winning such a perfect prize as Miss Kemp in the lottery of marriage.

Miss Annie is a Clanton product of which we all feel proud. She is an educated and accomplished young lady, not alone in the fine literary branches as taught by our schools, but also a post-graduate in the sweet and homely arts of domestic science that are so beautifully a part of every good and true woman. In all of this broad territory where she is known and loved there will not be found a single heart that will not pulsate with good wishes for her future happiness and well fare.

We have no further particulars of this happy event, and can not say where they intend to make their home nor when they will visit us all here, but are pleased to add that the Chilton County News is delighted to wish for them the very fullest fruition of all the bright dreams they have woven round the future.

Miss Elizabeth Duncan and her sister, Little Miss Dorothy, have returned to Clanton after being pupils in the Louie Compton Seminary in Birmingham for the past nine months.

A GREAT CAREER SADLY ENDED

For quite a long time Senator Underwood, as a member of the lower house of Congress made a record as a representative that was second to no man in the United States.

The Underwood tariff stands today as the fairest and most acceptable legislation of that kind, both at home and abroad, that has ever been written in our country.

So illustrious was his career in the lower house that Alabama was proud to set him up higher and send him to represent us in the Senate.

Here, for a time, he bore himself like a true and able statesman, then he faltered and began to figure with international issues, that meant nothing to us, but were serious impediments to the great and immortal Wilson in putting over his plans for the peace and happiness of the world.

Here is where Mr. Underwood began to forget the folks at home and ally himself with the great financial interests that center around New York.

Even in his new and strange alignments he felt sure that the sentiment of a solid south would follow one of the enemy and with the same indifferent assurance, that almost cost him his seat in the Senate the last time he was elected, he went forward with his Al Smith alliance with no thought but what, at the proper time, he could pull from his pocket the 186 electoral votes of the South and vote them for whom or what he chose.

There is where he made his first fatal mistake. Then when he came down and, with the aid and council of his friends, caused the Alabama legislature to attempt to deliver to him the bog-tied vote of the state he added another mill rock to the load he was trying to swim with. Then, on top of all these fatal errors, he went out to Texas and wantonly abused the Ku Klux Klan with the clear and palpable object of winning the Jew and Catholic vote. If you remember, at that time no one outside of the order, hardly took the Klan seriously. The general impression was that it had only a comparatively small following and it looked like, to him good politics to insult that hand full of voters if, by doing so, he could capture the large Catholic and foreign vote up north.

There is where he made his most fatal mistake of all. By the time he needed votes the Klan numbered its members by the millions and that 186 electoral votes of the South failed badly to materialize to his order. He finished his campaign without ever winning a single state and went in to the convention with only the pitiful little hog-tied Alabama vote.

In pure spite he attempted to have the convention in New York to write an anti-Klan plank in the platform. Even in his own political death he done his utmost to have the party commit suicide on his grave. In this he failed and by his efforts along that line only succeeded in adding an additional density to the dark pall that will shroud his memory.

Miss Helen Sewell, of Deland Florida, was the guest of Miss Sarah Luckie last week.

SPEER-MULLINS

On last Thursday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Mr. Cary Speer and Miss Mary Mullins were most happily united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Dr. S. J. Ezell performing the solemn ceremony.

Both of these young people are Chilton county products, although the home of the groom now is located at Marana Fla.

The bride is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mullins of Clanton, and daughter of the late deceased Mr. Hugh Mullins. She has a large circle of close and affectionate friends who feel sure that Mr. Speer has indeed won a priceless jewel in the great lottery of life.

This entire section unites in the best of wishes for the future happiness and prosperity of this splendid young couple.

SENATOR ADAMS IN BIRMINGHAM INFIRMARY

The large circle of friends who esteem Senator S. M. Adams so highly will be sorry to learn that he is again in bad physical condition and has gone to a Birmingham infirmary for treatment.

We all follow him with our very best wishes and hope he will soon be resorted to us hale and hearty again.

A WEATHER RECORD

The weather bureau says that the hot wave we have been living in for some time past has hung up a record all its own. It continued for 17 consecutive days with a temperature of over 90 every day. There is no record of a hot wave of that duration ever having boiled us down before.

SLOWLY IMPROVING

The friends of Mrs. Jodie Middleton will be pleased to learn that she is slowly recovering from quite a serious attack of fever that has kept her confined to the bed now for about three weeks.

SUNDAY DRUG BUSINESS

We understand that all of the drug stores in the city have entered into an agreement by which only one of them will be open on Sunday.

They will take the opening in regular rotation, each keeping open in turn.

This is an exceedingly nice and commendable act on their part and all good citizens appreciate their respect for the Lord's day. It is needful to have one drug store open so that accidents and sickness can get relief and this arrangement exactly meets that condition.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express to my neighbors and to the good people of Clanton my most sincere thanks for their great kindness to me and mine during the illness and death of my wife. May you all be blessed all the days of your life.

Wanderings of Famous Document Finally Brought to an End.

Charter of American Liberties Enshrined in Library of Congress at Washington.

Until recently, probably not one person in a thousand could tell what had become of America's most famous document, the Declaration of Independence. Very few people have ever seen it. This is not surprising, for since 1894 it has been locked away from public view in a steel case under the care of the secretary of state at Washington. This had to be done on account of the serious condition of the parchment, which had become so damaged in its travels from one place to another that it was feared it might eventually fall to pieces.

But now the document has been placed in a permanent shrine in the library of congress at Washington, where Americans of future generations will be able to see with their own eyes this charter of their liberty, says a writer in the New York Times Magazine. The shrine itself, a work of architectural beauty, has been designed to give the Declaration as much protection as possible from risk of fire and from the danger of deterioration by exposure to the light.

Enclosed in a metal case in a niche of marble, the parchment document is covered with two sheets of heavy plate glass, virtually unbreakable, between which there is a transparent film of gelatin which neutralizes the actinic rays of light, and should prevent further fading. Bronze doors, which can be opened or closed at will, give further protection to the shrine, which is flanked on both sides by handsome bronze eagles.

Shrine Worthy of Document.
Grays-hack York marble, quarried near Plattsburg, N. Y., for the background of the shrine, which bears in gold letters the inscription "The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States." The document of the Constitution is in a large case just beneath the Declaration, which is set in the wall about three feet from the ground, the whole shrine being surrounded by a white marble base.

The shrine was unveiled on February 28 by the chief librarian of the library of congress. The president was there, with Mrs. Coolidge, the secretary of state, and many members of congress, but the ceremony was notable by reason of its simplicity. This quietly and unobtrusively the Declaration of Independence was brought, after years of wandering, to a permanent and appropriate resting place, where it will remind the thousands who pass before it of the principles for which our fathers fought and died.

Its migrations under the stress of war are in themselves interesting, and no bound up with the early history of the country that it is worth while to recall them.

The Declaration, after it was signed, was given into the care of Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental congress, and kept in his office in the Pennsylvania state house, which afterward became known as Independence hall. Within a few months, in December, 1776, the British forced Washington back over the Delaware, and congress moved to Lancaster, Pa., and then to York, Pa., where the Declaration was placed for safety in the courthouse.

On July 2, 1778, it was brought back once more to Philadelphia, and two days later congress ordered the first celebration of Independence day, exactly two years after the signing of the Declaration.

The first year of its eventful life had been one of danger and difficulty, but by the end of the second year victory and the vindication of the principles set forth in it were well within sight. The day was celebrated by a parade of the army, a salute of 13 guns, and cheers for the "Perpetual and Undisturbed Independence of the United States of America," followed by a double issue of the daily run ration to the soldiers.

These soldiers were the cause of the Declaration's next journey. Claiming for their pay, which congress at the moment was unable to produce from an empty treasury, a band of soldiers marched on Philadelphia in June, 1783, drew up before the state house, and at the point of the bayonet demanded their money. Unable to cope with the situation, the lawmakers fled to Princeton, N. J. They assembled again in November at Annapolis, Md.; the following year saw them at Trenton, N. J., and in 1785 the seat of government was transferred to New York.

Back to Philadelphia.
Here the Declaration, which had been carried along on all these wanderings, remained till December, 1790. The first congress of the United States having replaced the Continental congress, and George Washington having become President, all the state documents were handed over to him, and later taken to Philadelphia. During its stay in New York the Declaration was kept in the second story of the old Federal hall building, which stood at the northeast corner of Wall and Nassau streets.

In Philadelphia the document was kept this time at the Department of State, first on Market street, at Arch and Sixth, and later at Fifth and Chestnut.

Ten years later, when Washington was officially chosen to be the nation's capital, the records of the State department were taken to that city and housed in the building intended for the treasury, this being the only place then available. Shortly afterward a group known as the "Seven Buildings" was completed at the corner of Nineteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, and here the State department moved with all its records. This was followed by another move less than a year later to the new War Office building, which occupied the site of the west front of the present State, War and Navy departments.

The Shrine Now Containing the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

Hidden From the British.
Then came the War of 1812, the battle of Bladensburg, the march of the British on Washington, and another move for the Declaration. It was in August, 1814, that the British reached the city and set fire to certain government buildings. But by this time the historic document was safely hidden in Leesburg, Va.

It had narrowly escaped destruction, for the British were within sight of the city when the secretary of state, James Monroe, who had come out to reconnoiter, realized that the evacuation of Washington was inevitable, and gave orders for the nation's documents to be removed with all possible speed.

Popular belief draws a picture of Dolly Madison fleeing from the White House with the famous picture of Washington under one arm and the Declaration of Independence under the other. As a matter of fact, the Declaration was taken out of the old War Office building, and with several signs of other records was put in a wagon and driven through Georgetown to a barn about two miles above the old chain bridge across the Potomac.

Here the records were kept overnight, but Pleasanton, the State department employee who had charge of them, was afraid that they might be discovered, and he took them next day another 30 miles to Leesburg, and gave them into the care of a minister named Littlejohn, who hid them until the British had left Washington.

Brought back again to the capital, the Declaration was first housed in a building on G street near Eighteenth, and then in another on the site of the present treasury, where it remained over ten years.

Lodged in Patent Office.
In the meantime, plans for the construction of the city had been drawn up by the French architect, L'Enfant, and many buildings were put up, including the patent office, which was finished in 1841. Built of white marble this structure, which still stands at Seventh and F streets, was supposed to be fireproof, and accordingly the Declaration was transferred here, with other historical records, and put on exhibition.

For the next 35 years it hung there, exposed to the light, and it was probably during that period that it faded so badly, although as far back as 1817 the signatures showed signs of deterioration.

Fortunately, the Centennial exposition in 1876 in Philadelphia drew attention to the state of the manuscript, and rescued it from total decay. As one of the features of the celebration the Declaration was once again placed in Independence hall in a fireproof safe with a heavy glass door, and at this time of particular interest in the old historical record its damaged condition aroused much comment. It was not till 1880, however, that a committee of the American Academy of Science considered the matter, but beyond making a report they appear to have accomplished nothing.

In the meantime Philadelphia had tried hard to keep the manuscript, contending that the logical place for it was in the city where it had been drawn up, but this was not permitted, and in March, 1877, the Declaration was returned to Washington and exhibited in the library of the State, War and Navy departments. This proved a blessing in disguise for a few months later the supposedly fireproof patent office was burned. Still, the document received no special care, and in 1894 it was in such bad condition that it was taken from exhibition and locked up in a steel safe in the charge of the secretary of state.

Now in Library of Congress.
Here it remained for twenty-seven years. Then in 1921, by order of the president, it was carried under guard to the library of Congress, the last trip being made by automobile, a very different mode of conveyance from the clumsy wagons in which it made its first journey across the country. At the library it was locked up until the shrine could be prepared for it.

One hundred and twenty-eight years of indifferent care have left their marks on the Declaration. Like all parchments, it was at first kept rolled, and as a result of frequent rollings and unrollings it has many cracks. The text is badly faded, but the process has been uniform and the Declaration itself is still legible.

The signatures have deteriorated the most, these having faded much more than the rest of the script. This is explained by the fact that the Declaration itself was prepared by an expert, who used the best ink available. The signatures, on the other hand, were inscribed in ordinary ink and not all on the same occasion. The ink, too, differed much from the preparation to which we are accustomed, being in the form of a powder, which was mixed with water when needed. This mixture varied in strength, according to the fancy of the user, and had a tendency to scale off when dry. It is a fact that many of the signatures have peeled off more than they have actually faded.

It has been decided not to attempt any restoration of the Declaration, and those who see it now will have before them the original document and signatures.

FOODS KEPT COOL WITHOUT USING ICE

Refrigerator Is Convenient in Rural Districts.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Cold air, cool water, and heat-tight containers are the chief aids in keeping foods cold in rural districts, or wherever it is impossible to obtain ice, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The principle of using cold air is illustrated in the window box, the cellar shaft, and the storage cave.

The most convenient kind of window box fits on the window ledge close up to the window, preferably on the north side of the house. It should be made dust and fly proof and must allow for ventilation.

The air in the cellar is cool and may be used for cooling foods, provided the cellar is clean, ventilated, and screened to keep out flies. Open the windows and doors every day, or in very hot weather every night, to allow cool, fresh air to enter. A north room in the cellar with well-insulated walls is good for general storage.

An Iceless Refrigerator.

ase. A dumb-waiter leading down from the pantry or kitchen adds to the convenience of a cellar storeroom.

A shaft made of wood and plaster and extending from the cellar through the roof is another device utilizing the cool air of the cellar. This is particularly adapted to a cool, dry climate. Wire or perforated shelves are fitted into the shaft at convenient heights where it passes through the kitchen or pantry, and here is also a door opening from the shaft. As the air in the upper part of the shaft grows warmer, the cool air from the cellar is drawn up. This constant upward movement of colder air cools the food on the shelves. Where there is no suitable cellar the shaft may open through the wall of the house just above the ground. Both ends of the shaft should be screened.

A cave dug in the side of a hill maintains a fairly low temperature. It should be lined with cement, brick, or some other dry, clean material; it should have a well-fitted door or possibly a double door; and it should have some means of ventilation.

Water helps to cool food in various ways. Food may be kept cool by placing the dish in cold water and changing the water as it becomes warm. In moderate weather such treatment keeps milk sweet and butter firm for a considerable time. Foods hot from the fire may be cooled in this way before they are put into the ice chest.

Water as it evaporates absorbs heat. This fact is taken advantage of in keeping food cool by wrapping the dish in a cloth saturated with water and also in the iceless refrigerator. In cooling by the evaporation of water, the quicker the evaporation the more heat absorbed and the lower the temperature. Quick evaporation depends upon a good draft of dry air; in damp, muggy weather these devices do not work well. Farmers' Bulletin 927, Farm Home Conveniences, gives directions for making iceless refrigerators.

An unglazed earthenware flowerpot inverted in a dish of water makes a miniature iceless refrigerator, convenient where only small amounts of food need to be cooled. There are now on the market similar porous coolers specially adapted to cover a milk bottle. The unglazed earthenware water coolers used in some hot countries work on the same principle, cooling the water by evaporation through the pores in the earthenware.

A house or box built over a spring or brook is another contrivance for keeping foods cool.

A well may be used for cooling foods. If it is one used to supply drinking water, great care must be taken not to let food fall into the water. An extra well may be used for the purpose.

Heat-tight containers keep small amounts of food cool. Fireless cookers and vacuum-jacketed bottles are well insulated and close tightly so that the temperatures in them changes very slowly. They may be used for keeping foods cool as well as hot. Chill foods thoroughly before putting them into the containers. If a little ice is put into the well of a fireless cooker, the food will remain cool longer. Crushed ice also aids in chilling the contents of a vacuum-jacketed bottle, but it must be put in carefully to avoid cracking the fragile lining.

Boiled Chicken Can Be Served on Shortcake

Cook the less tender chickens by boiling, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. It is best to disjoint the chicken when it is to be prepared in this way. Pinfeathers, the oil sac, and surplus fat should be removed and the fine hairs singed. After being well washed the parts may be put immediately into boiling water sufficient to cover them and seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Many cooks consider that a clove of garlic in the steaming water gives an almost imperceptible flavor, which improves the flavor of ordinary boiled chicken. A small onion is sometimes made to answer the same purpose, but too much onion destroys the delicate flavor of the chicken. After it has been cooked until tender, boiled chicken may be prepared for the table in a variety of ways. It may be fricasseed in a gravy made from the chicken stock, or served en casserole. If removed from the bones it may be served in a cream sauce on toast, or in party shells. It may be used for chicken salad. Croquettes of minced cooked chicken are good, as is chicken hash on toast. A very good way to serve creamed boneless chicken or chicken in gravy is on split biscuits or "shortcake."

ORANGES WILL SUPPLY NECESSARY VITAMINS

Orange Juice Is Excellent for Breakfast.

Oranges were never better in flavor or sweetness than they are this season. There are many small ones on the market, purchasable for a lower relative price than the large sizes. They are just as good for most household purposes as bigger ones, and are more economical. Orange juice and oranges may be introduced into the menu in so many different ways that the family will not tire of them. For the children oranges are a valuable food, supplying necessary vitamins in an acceptable form.

Oranges may be cut, or pure orange juice may be served in glasses for breakfast. Orangeade, punch, or any fruit beverage in which orange predominates, is suitable for lunch, at afternoon or evening gatherings, at card parties, dances, or sociables. Give the children orangeade made from pure orange juice when they come in, hot and thirsty, from play.

Mixed Fruit Gelatin.
Use pure orange juice for making orange gelatin or any of the mixed fruit gelatin. A dainty way to send orange jelly to an invalid is to scoop out the contents of one orange, leaving the rind a basket shape, and to fill this with the jelly when ready to mold it.

Orange tarts or other ways of serving sliced oranges in custard are good. Orange cake filling and icing is always delicious when made with the pure fruit juice. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making an uncooked orange icing:

Orange Icing.
1 egg white, beaten stiff
1/2 cupful sugar
1/4 cupful lemon juice
1 tablespoonful cold water

Add the water to the egg white and beat until stiff. Gradually add nearly all the sugar, beating with a spoon. Then add the grated orange rind, the orange and lemon juice and the remainder of the sugar and beat all smooth.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Mrs. Shaw Calls Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a God-Send to Sick Women

Cambridge, Maine.—"I suffered terribly with pains and soreness in my

Each month I had to go to bed, and the doctor told me I simply had to go under an operation before I could get help. I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I told my husband one day to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I took the third dose I felt better. I took it four times a day for two years, getting better all the time, and now for four years I don't have any pains. After taking the medicine for two years I had another child—a lovely baby girl now four years old—the life of our home. I do praise this medicine. It is a Godsend to women who suffer with female troubles and especially for pains at the periods. I surely was very bad once, and I know that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation."—Mrs. JOSEPH M. SHAW, Route No. 1, Cambridge, Maine.

A country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound reports 95 out of every 100 were benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Mastering a Torrent
What is considered an important engineering triumph has been accomplished in the Swiss Alps in harnessing, with specially constructed turbines, a stream of water flowing at the rate of 540 feet a second, or more than six miles a minute, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. The column of water has the strength and rigidity of a steel bar, and such force that each of the four 3,000-horse power units in the plant is driven with a stream only one and three-eighths inches in diameter. To withstand the terrific pressure, special apparatus had to be built. The water is taken from the Lake of Fully and flows through three miles of steel pipe with a fall of approximately one mile to reach the turbines.

FANEUIL HALL

Faneuil hall, named for Peter Faneuil, a public-spirited citizen and Huguenot, who, having decided that Boston needed a town hall in which to hold public gatherings, and a market place, commenced the construction of a building 78 feet square which contained these features, and presented it to the city in 1742.

Twenty years later, the interior was destroyed by fire, but was promptly rebuilt and dedicated to the "Cause of Liberty."

The present building goes back to 1805, when its size was increased to 80 by 100 feet and an additional story added. The upper floor is used now as headquarters and a museum by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts—said to be the oldest military organization in the world. Among the priceless relics is a flag used in 1835 by this organization. The second floor contains the hall which may be used as a public meeting place by any group of citizens, free of charge, on request to the city authorities.

During the Revolutionary war period, Faneuil hall was the scene of many tense gatherings. The hall was used as a place of amusement and entertainment by the officers of the British army in 1775 and 1776. Ever since the Revolution, it has been a popular gathering place and noted place for the holding of meetings, banquets and receptions. Its walls have echoed the voice of Daniel Webster, Wendell Phillips, and many other famous patriots of the time.

Situated adjacent to the old State house, and huddled in between modern office skyscrapers to the heart of the business center of "Old" Boston, this comfortable-looking structure of colonial design, bearing evidence of advanced age, is possessed of a dignified appearance and a quiet charm.

A plan is now afoot to rehabilitate, fireproof, and "dress up" this venerable hall and thereby preserve its original beauty for another generation or two at least. While this work is in process, the wooden awning-like sheds which now disfigure this landmark of "ye olden times" will be dismantled and replaced by an iron veranda with a glass roof.

With the single exception of Independence hall, Philadelphia, Faneuil hall is probably of greater historical interest than any other building in these United States.

THE STONE FOREST

The wonders of the earth on which we live, and particularly that portion which we call America, are intensely interesting. The "forest turned to stone" in Apache county, Arizona, is one of the natural wonders of America. Congress so concluded, at the same time putting to end the malicious acts of those who were hostile to the preservation of its treasures, when in 1906 it passed "An act for the preservation of American antiquities." President Roosevelt placed the forest under the protection of the government, designating it "The Petrified Forest National monument"—for the perpetual enjoyment of the people.

Here, at an elevation of about one mile above sea level, lying in the open and scattered over thousands of acres and in all conceivable positions, is a profusion of millions of tons of fallen trees turned to stone—agate, Jasper, opal—"the most brilliant aggregation of jewels on the globe." The dominating feature is a natural bridge formed by a petrified trunk of agate and Jasper which spans a 60-foot-wide canyon.

How come? The solution of that question has puzzled the greatest students of the structure of our earth, the physical changes which it has undergone, and the causes which have operated to produce these changes.

The general supposition seems to be that in time far beyond the reach of record—a million or more years ago, a giant woodland flourished here. Some great catastrophe, most likely an earthquake, moved it down and, in the reshaping of the earth's crust, an inland lake or sea was formed above this sunken forest. Seepage from springs of salt, sulphur and other mineral content penetrated every fiber of this wood—the prolonged period of saturation gradually pickling the wood to stone.

At length, another age was ushered in. An upheaval as tremendous as it was mysterious awakened this sleeping, this forgotten forest and it was belched up to the top of the earth again, to a place in the Arizona sun. There are three divisions of this forest. The first, famous for its bright colors, is six miles from Adamana; the second is two and one-half miles farther on. Here the trees are largely intact, many of them highly colored; the third is ten and one-half miles farther southwest and by reason of the striking colors has earned locally the name of Rainbow forest.

Ancient Drinking Pots

In the Middle Ages in England many drinking pots were made with hoops so that when two or more persons drank from the same pot or tankard no one of them should take more than his share, each hoop marking a half, a third or a fourth of the contents of the pot, according to its make.

The Y DAIRY

CREAM AND MILK OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because cream is sold in smaller quantities than milk is no reason why less care should be given by inspectors in insuring a safe supply of good quality, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It is just as desirable for cream to come from tuberculin-tested cows or be properly pasteurized, or both, as that milk should. Heavy cream for whipping purposes is often sold raw and its quality should be above suspicion. Cream from old or returned milk of poor quality is not desirable.

All cities need carefully defined grades for cream, according to the department, with a fixed minimum for light, table, or coffee cream, which is the usual cream of commerce. The federal standard for cream which goes into interstate or foreign commerce is 18 per cent butterfat, and in different cities it varies usually from 18 to 20 per cent. Sometimes what is known as "double cream" is sold, and when this term is used the cream should contain twice as much fat as is required in ordinary cream, usually from 36 to 40 per cent of butterfat. "Whipping cream" may contain less butterfat than "double cream," but, according to a ruling by the bureau of chemistry, cream thus labeled, if shipped, interstate, must contain at least 30 per cent butterfat.

Feeding Will Regulate

Quantity of Milk Flow

The question of the richness of the milk has received much attention by experiment stations in this country and in Europe, and the evidence is conclusive that the fat percentage of the milk cannot be changed permanently by any method of feeding. Certain experiments have shown that sudden changes in the ration, for example, greatly increasing the protein or oil content of the ration, may result in a small fat increase for a few days with some cows, with others no effect is produced. In any case the results are only temporary. No ration or method of feeding, it has been found by means of which a Shorthorn or Holstein can be made to give milk as rich as that of a Jersey or Guernsey.

However, the feed and management does not have a marked influence on the quantity of milk produced by the cow. The amount of milk a cow produces depends upon the ability of the cow to convert feed into milk and butterfat and upon the feed and care a cow receives. No cow can be made to produce milk above her capacity, no matter what kind of feed she gets nor how much.

Calf Feed Important

Experience has taught the importance of feeding the calf milk of uniform temperature from day to day. Best results are obtained when this temperature is kept between 80 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit. A young calf should not be fed milk that has started to sour. The pail should be thoroughly cleaned after each feeding in the winter time as well as during the summer season.

Clipping for Cleaner Milk

The production of clean milk is made easier by clipping the cow's udder and the tail from the switch up. This will prevent particles of dirt heavily infected with bacteria from dropping into the pail. Another practice that will aid in keeping the milk clean is washing the udder with a moist cloth and drying it thoroughly before starting to milk.

Dairy Hints

Screen milkhouse. Cool cream down immediately and keep cool until sold. Place a salt box in the pasture and keep salt before the cows constantly. Observe new pastures and plan to seed the poor grass spaces next year. Cream separators and other dairy utensils should always be cleaned properly immediately after use.

All utensils which come in contact with milk and cream should be kept clean at all times.

Milk pails and other utensils should be free so far as is possible from crevices where dirt may lodge and be hard to remove.

The milker should always milk with clean, dry hands. It is a filthy habit, to say the least, to milk with wet hands, and it is a mistaken idea that milking with wet hands makes milking easier.

Cleanliness in milking should be exercised at all times. Before milking begins, the cow's udder and flanks should be wiped off, preferably with a damp cloth, in order to prevent particles of straw or loose hair getting into the pail.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best-- Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress.

As a political organization the Knights of Columbus are like Carter's pills—they work while you sleep.

Of all the madness we ever heard of, the idea of making the Klan an issue in the presidential election takes the gum.

The Jews have 22 secret orders in the United States that no American can join, but they sure raise hades because America has one they can't join. Gosh!

All law enforcement now seems to be centered around the little fellow who takes a half pint bottle on his hip.

Social ostracism for all of the moral jerks would go a long way toward making them think twice before they throw themselves away.

A convention at Cleveland Ohio, on July 5 is expected to give birth to a third party. Poor little bastard, it won't live long enough to get a name.

Democratic national conventions have ceased to function as the creature of the people. We will have to nominate our candidates by direct ballot to get results.

The Presses of the United States have everybody stood. Their carryings on are disgraceful and should be curbed at once. It can be done and the sooner the better.

The speech of Ex-Secretary Baker in trying to adopt a League of Nations plank in their platform, while he lost, it was a fine piece of oratory we have read in year.

The irrepressible William Jennings got his opportunity and convinced everybody that he was able to wag the silver tongue of an orator. He is hard to down and he is right.

Since the day of the open cut out autoist has dawned upon us, the person who has any telephoning to do needs an air tight padded and sound proof cell in which to transact his business.

The question of right and wrong is rarely ever considered in the affairs of life, and never is an issue in the adjustment of political affairs. The only consideration with modern America is, "can I do this and get by."

Bryan says the K. K. K. will be dead in four years. We certainly hope they can clean up and make America safe for Americans in that time. They went before when they completed their great work. They may do the same this time.

It is very humiliating to a large number of the best citizens of Alabama to daily see the names of their senior senator and Al Smith associated as being a common cause before the convention. Al you know, is an open avowed whiskey man.

With swimming pools in active operation we guess the tented "leg show" that spent the week in our town last week found business rather dull. The swimming pools could put on a better and more varied exhibition in that line than the show could.

In a Dago and negro congressional district of Chicago the republicans nominated a Dago and the democrats, determining to go them one better, nominated their first negro. The Democrats got the best of it at last. The negro is an American product to say the least.

The strongest and most flagrant political secret order in the United States is the Knights of Columbus. They are bound by an obligation that is the most wicked and treasonable document we ever read. This oath is spread on the pages of the Congressional record and is not disputed. Still no one censures them for their everlasting and eternal political activities. But an all American organization is sought to be damned because it resents an unmerited attack by a politician.

HOW FUNNY AND HOW FUTILE

A week or so ago a Dago and negro district in Chicago nominated a simon pure Dago for Congress on the Republican ticket.

A little later they had a convention that they called a Democratic affair and nominated a negro to run against this Dago.

Judging from the character of the two nominees we imagine that white folks must certainly be scarce in that district.

This is the first time that we have ever heard of a negro running on even a so-called democratic ticket and, under the circumstances, it does not mean anything at all, except that the character of the constituency is so low that no white man would dirty up his good name by entering a mongrel negro and Dago race.

But the editor of our neighbor, the Union-Banner, goes almost in to conspicuous fits of ecstasy over this affair and suggests that all democrats will sing low now on the "nigger" question.

The wonderful fact is that he could exercise the unlimited amount of gall to raise this subject at all, when he has the blatant memory of a recent convention of his party at Cincinnati where over 70 negro delegates sat on the floor as delegates and even directed the actions of that body and forced them to incorporate the infamous Dyer anti-lynching bill as a plank of their platform, by the threat that they would vote with the democrats and defeat the party unless they allowed them to dictate the policies of the convention.

Coming right down to brass tacks, Coolidge and Daves are today the nominees of that "nigger" party, for they unquestionably held the balance of power in that convention and controlled it just as palpably as did the La Follette bloc control and dictate the legislation of the last republican Congress.

We are sorry to humiliate our friend Wyatt by flouting the shameful facts before him, but he courted his own fate and has no one to blame but himself.

A STRANGE PARTY ORGANIZATION

About two years ago now a real democratic party woke up in Chilton county from its long sleep and did some real things.

They hammered together a rather crude, though live organization and did some real progressive work, so much so, in fact, that a great many people believe today that they carried the county in the last election. At all events, there has never been anything to show that they did not, while many good dollars were spent to prevent them from finding out the facts. The sooner we can all forget the manner in which that honest search for the truth was turned into a fiasco of mystery, the better it will be for all of us. The suggestiveness of our recollections are not pleasant, to say the least of it.

Just before that last election a full and enthusiastic meeting of the county Executive Committee convened and did a lot of real business.

Some of the actions of that committee were extended over to be settled at a meeting to be called right after the election. We do not suppose there is a county in the state where similar action to this was not taken and, in all of our long years of experience, we have never known of an Executive Committee that did not have a meeting soon after every election. In fact, it is necessary, where you expect to keep alive a party from one election to the next.

According to our information there has never been a properly called meeting of our County Committee since the one held just before the election.

If there is any intention of keeping up a democratic party in Chilton, it passes our understanding as to how it is expected to keep it up without even a semblance of an organization.

If democracy ever wins in Chilton county the people will have to put it over and, an organization that sleeps for years in a pigeon hole, is not the sort of an organization that will ever win the support of an intelligent fellow.

ly bears can hibernate through the cold winter months and come out alive in the spring, but their race is rapidly becoming extinct, but no kind of a movement or party can hibernate at all and live. A political party must either live every day in the year or drag out its way to the grave of oblivion by degrees.

For nearly three years we have been doing our best to build up the principles of a pure democracy here, and one of the most pleasant memories we have in life is the cordial sympathy and support we have met with on the ranks of the real people who do the voting. It is especially pleasant to remember that during the time we have labored here, the democratic party grew from a voting strength of about 500 votes up to where we polled near 2000.

But where the duly organized head of the party ceases to function, or even breathe, for two years at a time the fight seems useless.

If the democrats of Chilton county are satisfied with conditions as they are then the party is pursuing just exactly the right tactics to keep it like

So far as we are personally concerned we are a democrat on principle and we have never met with any political conditions that met with our approval except the pure and ideal meaning of the word, Democrat—the people rule.

The good citizens of Chilton county should combine, so far as their local affairs are concerned, and take over the management of their own business. Of this there can be no doubt.

If they decide to do so there is nothing easier for good citizens are largely in the majority, even in Chilton county.

The name of a party don't mean a thing in good government. Honesty and faithful service in what counts.

WILLIAM WEBSTER DEVAUGHN DEAD

On last Sunday afternoon, June 29, Mr. William Webster Devaughn, aged 69 years, died at the Central Alabama Hospital.

The deceased was a well known and popular citizen of this county for many years and leaves quite a number of relatives and hosts of friends to mourn and miss him.

The remains were buried Monday afternoon at the Poplar Springs cemetery, Rev. J. D. Hughes conducting the services.

The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker J. Mell Martin.

CAN'T FREEZE 'EM

Harmon Headley, who is a real cotton farmer out on Route 7, says he is convinced now that a severe winter don't mean a thing to the boll weevil. He says there are more of the pests in his cotton now than at any time last year and they are taking the crop as it comes.

Y. E. Smith, of beat three was here Monday. Mr. Smith belongs to the true and conservative citizenship and is the backbone of civilization.

Rev Buford Lawrence and Mr C C May, of Jemison were in Clanton today. These two citizens are excellent church workers and leading lights in the Masonic order.

Miss Sophie Mullins returned Sunday after spending several days with friends in Columbia. Miss Mullins is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College located at Danville, Virginia.

Dr. W. W. Cameron returned Monday morning from Birmingham. Dr. Cameron has charge of the eradication of the cattle tick in Jefferson, Shelby, Wilcox, Bibb and several other counties.

Sourcegood Callaway and Rosecoe Callaway are on a motor car tour of the West. They expect to visit California on their trip. If they make Hollywood on their itinerary we have no idea those movie stars will let them ever come back.

TOO MANY LAWS

One reason there is so much lawlessness abroad in the land is the fact that we have so many laws on our statute books that, for some reason or other, are never enforced.

There is, perhaps, not one citizen in a thousand but what violates some perfectly plain law every day.

This being true, the law falls into a general contempt and people do not respect it because so many laws mean nothing at all.

For instance there is a law that specifically forbids every one to allow any child under 16 years of age to drive a car. How many times every day do you see that law openly violated?

There is also a speed limit law that applies to every public road in the state. On any section of road that is in good enough condition to make it possible, you will see that law ignored by practically every car that passes along, if the driver can possibly get it out of it. Do you ever hear of any arrests?

We have certain traffic laws in Clanton that apply to driving, parking and corner cutting. They are all good laws and were passed as such, or more, for the protection of the autoist than any one else. Still we see them daily flagrantly disregarded and the person who wishes to obey the law never knows where to get, nor how to do, to avoid an accident.

Gambling has been violation of law in every place we ever resided. Still in one form or other, it goes on openly every day and no one is ever punished.

In a great many localities certain bootleggers secure the patronage of the high brow and "influential" element who like to have their high halls as of yore, and through the "pull" these parties have run their bootlegging business on and on and never "get caught."

A very stringent law prohibits the carrying of concealed weapons. How many people do you know who carry a pistol daily. You hardly have to pick 'em up and you especially find a pistol the boon and constant companion of many of our lawyers, judges and other law enforcement officials. You never hear of one being punished unless he has committed a worse crime and is punished for carrying a concealed weapon as a smoke screen to protect him from being prosecuted on a more serious offense.

Like the comic pictures by Goldberg, we have laws and laws, a ridiculous multiplicity of laws, but they don't mean anything.

We need several thousand of them repealed and a few common sense laws made in their place and then enforce them if it takes every man, able to bear arms, in the state to do it.

MRS. T. M. BATES PASSES AWAY

After long weary months of suffering, Mrs. Diola Bates, wife of our fellowtownsman, Mr. T. M. Bates, passed over the great divide last Friday, June 27 at her home in east Clanton. Mrs. Bates had many friends who have been faithful to her during the long weary months of her illness and who sadly grieve for her now that she is no more.

To all of these and to the bereaved husband and other relations the News offers its sympathy in this dark hour of sorrow.

The remains were buried Saturday at Providence church, Rev. W. J. Parrish, assisted by Rev. W. W. Robinson, officiating.

J. M. Martin, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

CAR TURNS TURTLE

Mr. Jno. Hays, wife and daughter, who reside up near Thorsby, were returning from a visit to Mobile last week in their car, when it skidded and turned over down a fill into a lake of water.

Mr. Hays himself came near being drowned, his wife was painfully cut and bruised, while the daughter had several of her front teeth knocked out.

So far as we have learned, all of them are recovering very nicely. We do not know how the accident occurred.

Mrs. J. M. Roper returned home Sunday much improved.

Mrs. Bud Baker was able to return home Friday.

Mr. Joe Bratton, who has been suffering from blood poison, is now much improved.

DON'T MISS IT

In conjunction with the big barbecue, etc., being given on Friday the 4th the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church has just completed arrangements whereby a very fine production will be offered the public.

This comes in the form of a motion picture entitled "The Life of Christ" and it is to be presented at the High School auditorium this Friday. There will be three complete presentations—the first at 10:30 A. M. the next at 2:30 P. M. and the final showing at 8:00 P. M. and it is hoped that this schedule will make it possible for every one to attend.

"The Life of Christ" comes very highly endorsed and recommended by clergymen, educators and civic leaders who say it is one of the most impressive, instructive, interesting and pleasing programs ever exhibited. The picture was recently shown in Montgomery at six of the most prominent schools and both the press and public expressed themselves as highly pleased with the entertainment.

According to endorsements, the musical accompaniments for the picture is indeed appropriate. The entire picture is accompanied and no doubt the program will be one well worth attending.

The equipment used will be of the highest standard, consisting of two machines, motor driven, standard size screen and good current. The film is in good physical condition and critics say the photoplay is clear and distinct throughout the entire picture.

Upon special request of the Missionary Society, popular prices of 35 cents for adults and 20 cents for children will be charged, although the program is usually given at a much higher price.

Dr. C. C. Wilkerson is elated over the fact that in the near future work will be resumed on the new Methodist church. When completed this is going to be one of the most beautiful church buildings in central Alabama and also the best equipped for Sunday School work in this part of the state.

A BIG STEAL AT COOPER

Last Thursday night another bold robbery was pulled off at Cooper.

The general store of the Cooper Produce Company, for the fourth time recently, was entered by some one through the sky light and about $500 worth of merchandise was removed and spirited away in such a mysterious manner that not even a clue to the guilty parties has been figured out yet.

It is a great pity that such miscreants as these can not be promptly apprehended and put in a place where they will have to work a few years for their living.

ALL AMERICAN NOW

Don't get a divorce from your wife because she can't cook. Make a pet of her and eat at the All American cafe conducted by Mrs. C. L. Branch.

KILL THE BEAN BEETLE

A decoction of dog fennel and bitter weed, in equal preparations, boiled down to a strong tea, is said to be an absolute and sure death to the destructive bean beetle.

It don't cost much to try it out so go to it. It is highly recommended and is said to never fail.

RECKLESS CORNER CUTTING

Mr. Jno. T. Ellis had a narrow escape from death last Friday when one of the colored drivers who operates a truck for a wholesale house, cut a down town corner without sounding his whistle, and at a rate of speed about 25 per.

Mr. Ellis was struck a glancing blow and was not seriously injured but his escape was a miracle.

Where traffic laws are not rigidly enforced they really add to the danger of the pedestrian. He depends on them and gets killed by some vicious and unpunished law breaker.

It is a peculiar sentiment that seems to possess most all autoists that causes them to wish to annoy and interfere with the business and comfort of every one else by racing their motors, with the cut out open every where, at all hours and under all circumstances.

Mr. Frank Howard, of Thorsby has been busy for some time now selling the fine peaches grown on his orchard at Thorsby. Any one going there and looking over his orchard will be convinced that this country is well adapted for growing peaches by taking the proper care of an orchard.

Prof. J. F. Bone and wife, who have taught for the past two years at Midland City, have been in Clanton and also visiting friends and relatives near Clanton for the past week.

Mrs. John Patton Jr. of Charleston W. Va. has recovered sufficiently from the injury received in Clanton some time ago when the automobile she was in was struck by a loose box car, to be up again. She is at her Mother's.

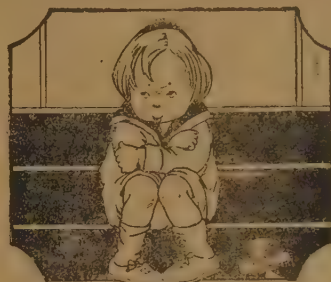

Mrs. J. B. Crysell, in Jemison now.

A Child that Mopes Isn't a Well Child

—W. L. Hand.

A normal child wants to play. If the little one is sullen, lackadaisical and irritable, something is amiss. First off, the child needs a laxative. But mothers are so often disappointed when the favorite laxative fails to restore the youngster's spirits. This is because there is a bilious condition usually and the laxative used hasn't the needed effect on a sluggish liver.

My preparation, Liv-o-lax, was made to answer this frequent need. While it can be used in place of calomel, to relieve liver and bowel congestion, it is just as pleasant to take as any of the usual children's laxatives. It isn't a bit drastic, causes no distress and the children love to take it.

Liv-o-lax is available at your own drug store and is just as effective for adults as it is for children.

How the Railroad Dollar Has Shrunk

Although everybody realizes that "everything has gone up" amazingly and distressingly, the general public does not know of the great increase in the cost of operating American railroads, as shown by a comparison between the years 1916 and 1923—and the corresponding shrinkage of the purchasing power of the railroad dollar.

As a pertinent illustration, take the following figures from the records of the L. & N. Railroad:

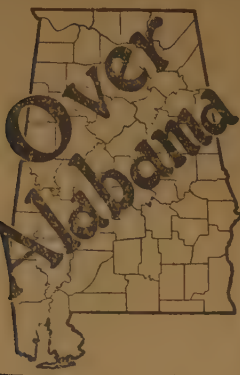

In 1916, the L. & N. paid for labor 37c out of every dollar received, while in 1923 the cost had increased to 60c; the average cost of coal per ton at the mines was $1.10, which increased to $2.65; the cost of passenger locomotives increased from $16,575 to $51,500; freight cars, from $1,127 to $2,008; rails, from $30 per ton to $43; bridge steel, from $50 per ton to $83; cross-ties, from $1c each to $1.15; track ballast, from 10c per cubic yard to 25c—and so on.

In 1916 the L. & N.'s payment for taxes was $480 per mile, while in 1923 it was $1,235; an increase of 164%. During the same period the book value of L. & N. property increased 90.4%; but its net operating income decreased 6.4%.

All of this increase in cost was beyond the control of the management of the L. & N. Railroad; yet despite the new problems and burdens which it created, the L. & N. has consistently improved its service and added to the facilities of its transportation plant. The efficient and able management of the Nation's Railroads, of which the L. & N. is typical, alone has enabled them to meet the changing conditions and shortened revenues, above described and still not only maintain their service to an equal standard, but actually improve it.

Save More Pigs to Reduce Cost

Success of Hog Raising Depends on Getting Youngsters to Weaning Period.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is apparently greater opportunity to make a saving on the cost of producing pork by increasing the number of pigs weaned per sow than there is by improvement in some other phases of the hog-production process. This is indicated in a study recently completed by the Department of Agriculture of the cost of producing hogs in 1921 and 1922 in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

Most farmers know that much of the success of their hog raising operations depends on the way in which they bring young pigs through the suckling period. Apparently, however, many have not understood the degree to which this part of the work surpasses other parts in relative importance. Usually hog raisers are better at feeding out stuff than they are in banding brood sows. Improved management of brood sows, says the Department of Agriculture, offers big chances for increased rewards.

Variation in Cost.

Information obtained in regard to the spring crop of about 250 corn belt farms in 1922 showed that the number of sows farrowing pigs was only about 86 per cent of the number actually bred. Wide variation also existed in the cost of production per pig at weaning time on the farms raising the lowest number of pigs per sow and the cost on the farms raising the largest number. Thus in 1922 the cost per pig at the age of ten weeks, on the farms where fewer than four pigs were raised per sow was $9.10, whereas on farms weaning from six to eight pigs per sow the cost per pig was only $4.64. The cost of farrowing and raising to weaning of 100 pounds of pork on those farms weaning less than four pigs per sow was $7.98, compared with only $6.61 on farms weaning from six to eight per sow.

These wide variations of cost are emphasized when the profits are expressed in terms of return per bushel of corn fed to hogs. In central Iowa the most efficient one-fourth of the farmers averaged 93 cents a bushel from feeding corn to hogs. The least efficient one-fourth of the farmers received only 39 cents a bushel for the corn fed to hogs. One-half of the farmers between these extremes averaged 65 cents return per bushel of corn. In Indiana during the same year the return per bushel was $1.21 for the best farmers and 48 cents for the least efficient.

Cause of Pig Losses.

The following table shows causes of pig losses between farrowing and weaning in per cent of pigs farrowed. It covers the 150 farms included in the study:

| Overlaid                             | Per Cent of Pigs Farrowed |
|--------------------------------------|---------------------------|
| Farrowed dead                        | 15.15                     |
| Farrowed weak                        | 6.96                      |
| Starved (old tests and other causes) | 3.44                      |
| Chilled                              | 1.74                      |
| Bore mottled                         | 2.16                      |
| Eaten by hogs                        | 8.4                       |
| Scours                               | 1.11                      |
| Cholera                              | .71                       |
| Miscellaneous                        | 9.67                      |
| Total                                | 55.22                     |

It is evident, says the department, that some of the pigs lost might have been saved with proper care and management. Proof that there is room for improvement in this respect is shown by a comparison between the number of pigs saved on the 25 per cent of farms which were the least efficient in this matter, and the number saved on the 25 per cent which were the most efficient. In eastern Iowa and western Illinois in 1922, on 25 per cent of the farms saving the least little pigs only 48 out of every one hundred farrowed were alive at weaning time. Among the 25 per cent of the farms saving the largest number of little pigs there were 90 weaned out of every one hundred farrowed. This is further emphasized by the variation which existed in the number of pigs weaned per sow. In eastern Iowa and western Illinois in 1922 the least efficient group of farms raised from two to four pigs per sow. The most efficient farms raised from six to eight pigs per sow. A similar variation is shown for the other states in the study.

Spring pigs raised to weaning time on 13 farms in 1921 cost $4.31 per pig compared with a cost of $3.35 for fall pigs. In 1922 on 13 farms spring pigs had cost $3.53 per head at weaning date and fall pigs $3.12 each. Pork per 100 pounds from fall pigs, however, cost more than from spring pigs. Usually the price level at the time fall pigs are sold is higher than at the time spring pigs are sold. Fall pigs, therefore, if well taken care of during the winter may be as profitable as spring pigs.

Management of Herd. Management of the breeding herd is the first step in the production of pork, and has a determining influence on the profits of hog raising. Feeding methods, care, housing and exercise, have a great effect on the number of pigs raised. Many farmers, figuring that some sows will lose out, breed more sows than they expect to farrow. Improved handling methods showed result in lessening the required number of sows to be bred for the number of pigs desired. This, besides being more economical, would have the additional advantage of improving the size and strength of the litters produced.

Fertile Eggs Cause Loss Every Summer

Can Be Prevented by Producing Infertile Product.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A large part of the loss caused by eggs spoiling in warm weather can be prevented by producing only infertile eggs during the late spring and summer. This loss, which is conservatively estimated at more than $15,000,000 a year, falls almost entirely on the producer. Not only does he lose the value of the eggs which spoil, but the producer suffers a further material loss in the reduction of the number of eggs consumed caused by people getting bad eggs among those they purchase.

This loss can be entirely prevented by producing only infertile eggs during warm weather. This is accomplished by taking all male birds out of the flock after the breeding season is over. The male birds have no influence on the number of eggs produced, and should either be marketed or killed—the best can be canned—or he should be kept penned up.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just published a large poster showing the difference in the keeping qualities of infertile and fertile eggs during warm weather. This poster also gives simple rules for producing good quality eggs on farms during the latter part of the spring, throughout the summer, and into the early fall months.

Rolling Poultry Houses Beneficial to Keepers

Poultry houses on wheels are not popular in the United States, but it may be beneficial to some poultry keepers to know a little more about such houses. On every farm are tracts of land where during certain periods of the year there is much food for the hens, but which will be wasted unless the flock is moved out to the fields. Dragging houses around on runners is not a popular job but they are quite easily moved when mounted on wheels. A house on wheels can be used as brooder house, laying house, or for special matings, and is especially adapted for hospital use as it can readily be moved away far enough to protect the healthy birds from infection. The construction is very simple—all that is needed is just an axle and a couple of wheels. Most every farmer has some old wheels around his place, which he may never use for any other purpose and an old axle usually can be found also. If the axle is located so that the house will be fairly well balanced on it it can readily be handled, on two wheels, if not too large.

Pesky Little Beetle Is Cause of Immense Loss

Can you imagine that a little insect pest could cause the cucumber beetle could cause a loss of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually to the cucumber crop of the United States. This insect not only injures the plant by feeding, but carries bacterial diseases which are injurious to many other plants.

Do you want this loss to go on in the future? Your answer would be "No." You can become best acquainted with its control by reading bulletin 355—"Nicotine Dust Kills the Cucumber Beetle," by J. E. Dudley of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Madison, Wis.

This bulletin explains how nicotine dusts are made and used in the most efficient and profitable way. It will also tell you how much of the dust to apply to the acre, and the manner in co-operating with your neighbors in using it. Now is the time to send for this free bulletin and learn to kill the most dangerous enemy of the cucumber, the striped cucumber beetle.

FARM NOTES

The velvet bean works well in double harness with corn.

Clean, fresh water is essential to the proper growth of animals.

Yes, a real dirt farmer loves his dirt and protects and improves it.

Make garden work easier by the use of a good wheel-row cultivator.

Spring is a good time to peel bark from young trees which you want to use for fence posts.

Nitrate of soda is advisable as a fertilizer which will keep the grass growing rapidly.

Whatever a man sows he probably won't come up well unless the ground is properly prepared.

Potatoes require much work and attention and, like other worth-while things, pay back most when they receive it.

One sure method of building up the soil now in small grains is to follow with a crop of cowpeas or soy beans, or even velvet beans.

The roots of any plant set should be given plenty of room. Be sure that the soil over the roots is firm, but leave the top soil loose.

The Ootootan variety is the best soy bean for hay except on land infested with cowpea wilt. In this case the Laredo variety should be used.

LIVED LONG ON HOPE AND WATER

But Entombed Miners Did Not Establish Record

Surprise has been expressed that the men rescued from the flooded pit near Falkirk, Scotland, were able to exist for nine days "on hope and water." In point of fact, it was just because these men had fresh water and did not abandon hope that they not only survived their horrible imprisonment, but were actually able to crawl down to the shaft bottom, unaided, to join their rescuers.

For a healthy man a nine days' fast is, in itself, no very dreadful ordeal. There are indeed plenty of people who habitually fast at intervals for from three to seven days simply for health's sake, observes Heril Rickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Not, of course, that there is any comparison between lying comfortably in bed without food and existing in the pitch darkness of a flooded coal pit, breathing bad air and always under the hideous uncertainty of whether you will ever get out or not.

Even so, these miners were not so badly off as a shipwrecked crew in an open boat. The mere fact of having water all around you, yet none to drink, is literally maddening. Yet the survivors from the Medusa, wrecked in the year 1876, managed to live through 13 days on a raft, without food or water, exposed, too, for much of the time, to a burning sun.

Of miners the longest entombment of which we have any record is that of the last survivor from the Courrières mine in France, after the awful explosion of March 8, 1906. He was, in all, 26 days below ground before being rescued. But he had food for the first week of his imprisonment.

Doctors are divided as to how long a man can exist without food. Professional fasters, such as Doctor Tanner and Succi, have abstained for 40, even 50 days on end, and there is a case reported in the Lancet of 1853 of a man of sixty-two who refused food for four months and recovered.

The period of fasting before death ensues varies with different individuals. Generally speaking, a healthy person can go without food until he or she has lost one-third of the bodily weight.

But different people do not lose weight at the same rate. Succi, for instance, lost 34 pounds 3 ounces during a 40 days' fast, but Jacques, the champion faster, lost only 25 pounds 4 ounces in the course of his record fast of 50 days.

Medical jurisprudence assumes that a fat person will live longer without food than a thin one, for, like the hibernating bear, a fasting man consumes his own fat.

The muscles, too, lose much weight; even the skin and hair decrease in weight during the fast. The only part of the body which loses nothing is the heart.

A Salesman

A young salesman, who claimed that a good salesman could make a living anywhere, tried it out in Rome. But he was soon back in America.

"What was the matter, Frank?" asked a friend. "Couldn't you pick up the language?"

"Oh, I had plenty of that, but the situation was too complicated for me. I tried to sell a pink shirt to a Fascist and he took it for an attack on his politics."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Found Treasure Where Thrown Brick Land

An ancient Sumerian library, the simple expedient of throwing a brick on a spot on the side of a hill under which the library has been hidden for centuries. The discovery, made by Professor Langdon, the well-known Oxford Assyriologist, was directing the Weld-Brundell excavations at the ruins of the Babylonian city of Kish, near Baghdad.

The discovery of the library, buried just in time to stop the excavations for the suspension of excavating work, for it was the opinion of the leaders of the expedition that the library had been destroyed with other missing sections of city.

"I was convinced," said Professor Langdon in writing of the discovery, "that if still existing a certain library lay on the western side of certain mound and I dug there for weeks. The idea that the library was there disturbed my mind, and even haunted my sleep. At last, and grasping a chance of discovery, I went alone to the top of the mound and chose a brick of the of Nebuchadnezzar which lay at the foot, and marked on it an X. Then, after blinding myself, I turned round many times to lose my bearings. I threw the brick back over my head.

"The next morning digging was commenced at the place indicated by the arrow, and within two hours a nest of valuable literary tablets was found."

The library is by far the most important find the expedition has made during its three years' work. It is expected to yield literary treasures which even the libraries of the Persians have not contained. Already rooms of the library have been uncovered, all of which are filled with tablets, and there are 20 more rooms to be explored.

Kish is the oldest capital of ancient Babylon, and was founded immediately after the flood. The excavated ruins show the city to be seven miles long and four miles wide and it is here that the old known kings of history lived. It is known of the history of the world from other sources, but the story of birth and prosperity still have to be found in the ancient records.

Grand Mesa Forest

President Coolidge, on March 1, changed the name of the Butte National forest in Colorado to Grand Mesa National forest. The name describes the principal graphic feature of the entire famous part of that region. Grand mesa proper comprises the very important southwestern area of the forest upon which the present irrigation water of the vast farm region surrounding it is impounded.

Artificial reservoirs, to be discarded in the periods when needed for culture. It is also an attractive attraction and fishing grounds for the irrigation surrounding valleys as well as the traveling public.

Gas Piped Long Distance

Twenty-five years ago the city of Toledo, O., obtained its natural gas from points within a radius of about thirty-five miles. Now, the wells having become exhausted, the city is piped from West Virginia a distance of 700 miles.

"DISCHARGE WELLS!"

SYNOPSIS.—In a low drinking den in the Japanese town of Aki, Kiyama, a disolute son of a wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Aki district, bought a girl to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following a night in the place, a drunken man, speaking perfect English, is left unconscious. A white man to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance, giving a note of explanation, leaves. Kiyama is robbed and the white man, as Kiyama is taken unconscious, to the house of Aochi. His name is Wells. Wells awakens in a room, but to familiar scenes, his house. Aochi, almost from the start, is a reminder of a bargain made to buy a girl. He goes to the temple and purchases a girl, to all appearances white, though the priest assures him she is Chinese blood. She tells him she is white "all white" and Kiyama is to spare her. The next day goes back to Wells' youth, a son of a missionary in a Japanese village. His father sends the boy to America to be educated. James Sanderson, who San Francisco contractor, welcomes the boy, his sister's friend. In college Bob does well, is considered "wild." Wells is Albert Haywood, orphan son of his uncle's former partner, and is loved by Raymond Williams, but Wells as his uncle's heir, first with him, while scheming Williams to embezzle. Wells' father dies, and Wells are given in charge of a brother at Japan, which Sanderson is. Williams is Wells' reactionaries, seeks to work. Williams in Marakito's idea for a reactionaries will to Wells "wildness." Wells the idea is to propitiate Marakito, and that he will marry Sanderson.

Always wine was poured, that yellow drowsy wine that filled with contentment, making some of ecstasy through through some scented veil, she became more lovely, more and seductive.

"I think this will be the last night, Bob," Williams said nervously. "I . . . this came today."

Wells read the brief telegram. "Some one spilled the beans," he commented. "But it was old Marakito himself. Thought you wrote Uncle Jim about it, Ray. You did, didn't you?"

"Sure, Bob. Sure I did, old man." "How'd you answer this?"

"Said it was true. I told them I'd ordered it," Williams eyes roved about the room, but Wells did not notice; he had already seen a second telegram and read it.

It was signed by Sanderson.

"Discharge Wells!" it read. "What are you doing?" Wells had started for his bedroom.

"You should worry!" Wells snapped, then, "Didn't mean that, Ray. But Uncle Jim thinks I've fallen down. He said, when I left, 'It's a—Ray,' he gulped painfully. And Sanderson did think his boy had fallen down. A letter of explanation from Williams? Perhaps the chief engineer at Fushiki had also been told that night he promised to write it. There was the photograph. The wild cub! Sanderson'd tame him when he got him back. He'd not show Alberta that picture. Confound that young fool! Mistake to let him go in the first place. Darn good boy, young Bob."

When Williams came back from supper Wells was gone. Had Williams foreseen this, so he told himself, and wrote Sanderson, he would have given Wells the customary transportation home immediately, for he was afraid that much coin had passed in the tea-house, and Wells must be strapped.

Wells, in his bedroom, counted over his remaining money. "It won't take me far," he thought bitterly. "But then, I haven't anywhere to go. I'm just . . . going."

He spent half of the money in a lengthy wire to Alberta, explaining, pleading. Alberta neglected to show this to Uncle Sandy. When Wells received the answer he crumpled it

CHAPTER VIII

"I'm all white," the girl had said, and Wells believed her. She was too earnest, too feverishly excited to be lying. He looked into the lovely eyes, with incomprehensible happiness, as if he had found something for which he searched.

The girl misunderstood. "Pipace—don't—you wouldn't"—she repeated, fearfully.

He smiled, reassuringly gently, so he considered, not remembering the sinister patch above his eye that gave his face an appearance of devilry.

"Do not fear," he said. "I would not touch a white woman" in such a fix, he almost added.

"Promise," she demanded with a touch of returning courage. "Your word as a . . . lord."

"As long as I am Kiyama-San of the Thunder Gate, you need not be afraid," Wells told her. "Keep this from the household. Come, we shall walk in the garden, that you may compose yourself." He felt very paternal, yet, strangely content.

Luminous dark cleaved them. Through the trees and above the roofs lanterns burned. The stone slabs of the path were noiseless beneath their slow-moving feet.

"It is the Hour of the Rat," Wells said. "Sacred to the telling of tales. What is your name? Ho! I will call you O-Hana. That means blossom. Well." He was silent a moment. "Do not walk at my side, but a half-pace in the rear, as is becoming in a woman. It is said that all beings are only dreaming. I see in your coming to this temple in my village something more weird than a dream. Explain."

"I only know what Tsai-Kung, my Chinese father, told me. He found me where the Boxers had left me, in an open field. It was winter. I would have passed to my ancestors. Tsai-Kung is a learned man. He knew that the bottle my father carried contained medicine. The Boxers thought, so Tsai-Kung said, that it was poison, to be poured into drinking wells. My mother were a sheepskin coat, for it was cold. The Boxers said that this could be made a ravishing sheep, to destroy the rice and millet."

"That is true," Wells said gravely. "True!" It was of a great foolishness. Tsai-Kung never told me what the foreign-devil haters did to my mother and father. He said that it was better I did not know. He was a revered man of great excellence and goodness. Tsai-Kung. He educated me. He sent me to a mission school.

Two young people together—do you believe propinquity creates love?

known that horse meat could taste so good; a bowl of it became an event. Beggars, he even met one who knew the Sacred Books from ornament to ornament, shared their mean portion with him, thus seeking for grace. For he was the crazy seijo-jin, and being feared, so they figured, in the hands of the Mother of Mercy.

His skin, always so dark, was bleached by exposure of every vestige of ruddier Caucasian color. He wore no hat, and his eyes became narrower, the lids drooped to protect the aching eyeballs from the glare. He made no plans. Each day was uncounted terror. Irregular nourishment thinned his face, his nose seemed more angular, his cheekbones more prominent. He was never certain where his feet were taking him, and did not care. The names of the passed villages meant nothing, those of the coming ones less.

Never speaking English, his Japanese became as fluent as in his boyhood. Did he travel with a friendly mendicant and the mendicant stop for a brief devotion before a shrine, why, Wells would stop with him, hearing the invocation.

The sea was left behind. Even the wind became heated; the tang of the salt was gone, and the freshness. Rice fields became broader, more level, more productive, all protected by Shinto charms, that no blight nor birds nor locusts may enter.

He was but little welcome in the native inns, and of necessity sat apart. His rugs were lattices of thread, plaited between with dirt and dust. The cheapest of electric whisky was for him, his bowl contained the last dregs of the cooking pot.

In the village of Miyosini it was different. The keeper of the inn there was friendly, he was . . . human, Wells thought. But, when he came to leave, and saw the tally, Wells knew why. Items were enlarged, as if he did not know the price of a pot of tea. Disputing the reckoning, Wells found the innkeeper's protested friendliness and affection vanish. The host at last accepted two silver pieces, but privately said the word about that he had borrowed the honorable dogs of Katsun, the butcher.

It was a spectacle! The crazy seijo-jin who wore a cooler's kimono, when even a child knew that they slept upon bags of money. Head down, plaiting, Wells scrambled as best he could through the yellow mud of the river path which leads from Miposini toward Mitagiri; yells, curses, the yapping of curs, laughter, sped him on his way. The dogs harried him for a half mile.

Utterly spent, Wells made for a lighter house, that rose slovenly from the river mud; the inn of the Pale Pearl, which ornaments the town in which Lords of the Thunder Gate have ruled for more years than can be remembered.

A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN

How many teachers sprang into fame during the war! Here, there and everywhere, steadily working to a high standard of excellence, studying under the leaders of their profession, keeping constantly before their eyes the goal of effective service, those who had ability needed only opportunity to show qualities of leadership.

One such teacher is Caroline Ruiz-Rees. Professionally she describes herself as simply a headmistress. Her direct work has been the founding and reorganization of Montgomery Hall. To one who knows Connecticut, however superficially, the mere location of the school, in cultured, wealthy, beautiful old Greenwich on the Boston Post road, spells achievement.

Naturally Miss Ruiz-Rees based her achievement on the most thorough preparation and study. She holds the degrees of Eleve Titulaire, Ecole des Hautes Etudes, Universite de Paris, and Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, Columbia university.

In other directions, French literature and the suffrage movement claimed her loyalty. "Charles et la Sainte Marthe," a study in French renaissance, published in both English and French, and many contributions to Modern Language Notes and to the Yale Review have made her name familiar in a scholarly field. A county chairmanship, then state responsibility and finally membership on the national board of the American Woman Suffrage association marked the recognition of her ability by that group of clever women.

With the war, average folk who would never have met Miss Ruiz-Rees in her special fields, commenced to learn how to spell her name. For the Council of National Defense asked her to organize the women of her state, and made her a member of the state council; the Young Women's Christian association made her chairman of the Connecticut branch, canteen division. With the passage of the Nineteenth amendment, the national Democratic committee named her as the national committeewoman from Connecticut.

Thus does the word "make a beaten pathway to your door," as Mr. Emerson once said, if only your mouse traps or your school teaching is better than the best of some one else.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

CHARM—PLUS CASH

The date of her husband's death decided her career. It was in 1918 that Katherine Walker Smith, suddenly faced the world with two young children and a factory nobody wanted.

Mr. Smith had developed a small but healthy trade demand for iceless refrigerators. Then the war put such a crimp in nonessential industries that the Smith family's inheritance might almost as well have been no inheritance at all. She could not find a manager who could live on hope until conditions brought opportunity for renewed prosperity. She was afraid to try such a seemingly hopeless venture as managing in person, without any business training, a half-dead business.

So she sold the factory for what she could get. Her situation had made her think in business terms and consider seriously what business ability she had. That ability seemed to lie in selling, although selling the idea that woman suffrage would not destroy the universe to conservative Missouri voters measured the extent of her contact with the public.

She decided to sell things she'd enjoyed buying and to sell 'em if possible to people she'd enjoy serving. She moved to Evanston, Ill., and opened the tiniest of shops dealing in women's fine wear. Evanston offered the advantages she felt she needed. It was small enough so she could easily become known without expensive advertising. It has a resident group of well-to-do people who are discriminating buyers of high-class clothing. It has a large group of college girls who are always needing an extra sport blouse, another set of lingerie, or a scarf that nobody on the campus can duplicate. It has to be reached within an hour, a big wholesale district where special commissions can be quickly executed. It has good schools and young people of the sort she wanted her boy and girl to grow up with. And it has now a dainty gray-painted shop bearing in tiny gold letters on the window, "Katherine Walker Smith."

The shop adjoins the best hotel in town. It is on the route generally followed by university girls shopward bound. It is hardly one hundred feet from the main business thoroughfare. It has produced an attractive home, a generous life insurance policy, a bank account that will shortly send the two young Smiths through college, and a very charming, good-to-look-upon woman, who seems younger than when she started to work.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—What the Shepherds Saw and Heard. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Event in the World's History. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God at Work Centered in the Birth of Christ.

I. Jesus' Birth Foretold (Micah 5:2). This prediction was made some 700 years before. God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation just in time to cause Mary to be at Bethlehem.

II. Jesus' Birth Announced to Mary and Joseph (Luke 1:26-38).

The mighty archangel Gabriel was sent by God to the little town of Nazareth to Mary, a Jewish maiden, who was betrothed to a carpenter of that village by the name of Joseph, solemnly announcing that she should give birth to the Messiah, and that this son should not be Joseph's son but should be the child of the Holy Ghost (Matt. 1:18-21). Later the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph, also, making the same announcement to him, and added that the child should be called Jesus, which means that Jehovah will save His people from their sins (Matt. 1:21).

III. The Prediction Fulfilled (v. 7). This took place at a most propitious time. The Jews were under the power of the Romans. Not only did the birth of Christ occur when all systems of religion and morality were tottering upon their foundations but at a time most suitable for the introduction of the Gospel. The whole world being under one rule made it possible for Christ's ministers to go from city to city and country to country unmolested. The Almighty rules in the whole universe and is never behind in His administration.

The surroundings of Christ at His birth were of a humble sort. The Eternal God condescended to be incorporated with humanity—to be born in a manger, becoming the poorest of the poor that none might be hindered in coming unto Him.

IV. Christ's Birth Announced (vv. 8-14).

1. By Whom? The first Gospel sermon was preached by an angel of the Lord. Thus we see that the exalted ministers of God were interested in men and had part in the announcement of God's plan of salvation.

2. To Whom? His birth was announced to the shepherds who were keeping watch over their flocks by night. The fact that the glorious Gospel message was first sounded forth to them shows that poverty is no barrier to its reception. God does not reveal Himself primarily to the princes and great men of the earth, but oftentimes conceals from such and discloses to the poor. (James 2:5).

3. The Nature of the Message. It was good things of great joy. It was good things because the darkness of heathendom, which had so long covered the earth, was beginning to vanish. The casting out of Satan, the prince of this world, was about to take place. Liberty was soon to be proclaimed to those who were in bondage. The way of salvation was to be open to all. No longer was the knowledge of God to be confined to the Jews, but offered to the whole world. Christ's news this. So glorious that a multitude of the heavenly host accompanied this announcement with their song of praise. Thus we see that the first Gospel sermon was in the open air. The minister was the angel of God, the choir were the angels, the audience made up of humble shepherds.

V. The Shepherds Investigating (vv. 15, 16).

They did not stop to argue or raise questions, though these things were no doubt passing strange to them. They went immediately to Bethlehem, where they made an investigation and found everything just as represented. They had the privilege of first gazing upon the world's Savior, the very Lord of glory. They returned with gratitude in their hearts, praising God for all those wonderful things which He had revealed unto them.

VI. The Shepherds Witnessing (vv. 17-20).

They found things as announced. When they beheld the Lord of glory they could not remain silent. Therefore they went back praising God. Those who really hear the Gospel message cannot be silent. If they really hear they must tell it out to others.

THE UNITY FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

The eastern section of the Unity Baptist Association met with the Mt. Creek Baptist Church, Sunday June 29th, 1924, in its regular fifth Sunday Meeting.

The audience was called to order about 10:15 o'clock a. m. and was organized by electing Dr. S. J. Ezell Chairman and R. L. Duffy Secretary for the day.

Rev. E. A. Norris conducted the Devotional exercises after which Rev. J. D. Hughes delivered a splendid address on the subject of "Necessary preparations for the Revival."

Rev. W. M. Mims being absent the subject, "Stewardship, the solution of our Baptist problems," was ably discussed by Rev. E. A. Norris followed by splendid remarks by J. Z. Mims, Rev. Trice, and Rev. J. D. Hughes.

The eleven o'clock hour was filled by a splendid address by Dr. Ezell on the subject, "Completing the work." You who have heard Dr. Ezell may imagine to some extent what a treat this address was.

At the noon hour there was a table spread in the grove fitting for a king.

After the noon hour the meeting was led in prayer by Rev. Trice after which the subject "Our Sunday School Problems," was introduced by Bro. W. T. Johnson and was followed by short interesting talks by Arb. Abernathy, J. Z. Mims, J. D. Hughes and E. A. Norris.

"Teacher Training," was ably discussed by Bro. H. S. Shaw.

Mrs. L. Gilbert not being present, "The W. M. U. accomplishments and Plans," was spoken to for a few minutes by Dr. Ezell.

"The B. Y. P. U." was very ably and fittingly spoken to by Bro. J. Z. Mims and was followed by fitting remarks by J. D. Hughes and E. A. Norris.

I am very sorry that there was not more Churches and Sunday Schools represented. Only about six I believe. I pray God that more of our preachers, Sunday school teachers and interested Laymen will wake up to the importance of our Fifth Sunday Meetings. It should be a love feast for the interested workers of the Vineyard. The Meeting gave a rising vote of thanks to the Mt. Creek church and community for its hospitality. After which we adjourned in order.

R. L. DUFFY, Sec.

BLOOMS AND WEEVILS

Mr. T. M. McSwain, one of the sure enough farmers from down near Cooper, brought us a nice bouquet Saturday of cotton and red clover blooms. He says the crops are fairly good in his neighborhood and hears very little about the boll weevil. However, when we examined our bouquet closely we found two forms in it that were already punctured by the pest.

THAT FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING AT MULBERRY

After devotional, which were conducted by Dr. Jno. A. Pool, Bro. Buford Lawrence was made Chairman for the day.

The outstanding need of our association was spoken to by W. J. Billingsley.

The remedy as given by Bro. Harper is a consecration of our lives to God's service.

At this point by request Mrs. W. J. Billingsley was given time to discuss the W. M. U. After a most inspirational talk on this subject a collection of $8.00 was taken for Dr. Ayers, a Missionary in China.

An address or Sermon by Rev. S. H. Bennett was a real treat for all who heard him. His appeal was to the individual. Get yourself right and this would right the church.

After this sermon a dinner, sufficient for twice as many people were spread.

At 1:30 the house was again called to order and the remainder of the program was rendered.

The last subject "Laymen Movement" was well taken care of by Paul Oden and Bro. Bennett.

The writer is not able to express in words through these columns the inspiration derived from this meeting wish it were possible to pass every good thought that was given to the entire Chilton County Association.

HOWARD R. ODEN Sec't.

VOLUME 3

CLANTON, ALABAMA, JULY 10, 1924

NUMBER 44

AN OPEN LETTER FROM THE FARMERS CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

To the farmers of Chilton county: We would like very much to see you personally and discuss together the problems having to do with our mutual welfare but as it is impossible for us to see everyone at this time we ask you to take a few minutes of your time to read what we wish to call to your attention.

This is one of a series of letters that will appear in this paper for the purpose of bringing to your attention the Farmers Co-operative Association and outlining to you the possibilities contained therein for the farmers of this county. We come to you not as someone from a foreign field with a cut and dried formula which has been prepared by someone used to conditions entirely different from ours, and which you are asked to swallow whole. We come rather as your neighbors and permanent citizens—of this county inviting you to consider if it would not pay you well to join with your fellow farmers in this county in an effort to improve the conditions under which we exist.

We realize that with a larger membership the association can be of great assistance to each individual member and can render this assistance at a smaller cost to each individual member. As duly elected officers of the Association we feel that it is our duty as well as our privilege to invite your co-operation in the great work of helping to bring about the economic independence of the farmer.

This organization was formed by a group of men who had been among the most active in the Chilton county division of the United Farmers during the past two years. The change was made by them because, in view of certain developments in the afore mentioned organization, a change was necessary if we were to have an active organization of the farmers of this county, and they were unwilling to be without such an organization. They know that it had been demonstrated that an organization of the farmers could be of inestimable help to the members. They believed that if they would form a home organization based on a practical business plan, operated at a reasonable expense to each member and directed by men selected by the members and under the control of the members at all times, that the farmers of this county would rally to such an organization and make it a permanent institution for the handling of their business.

The purpose of this organization is to market the products of its members to the best possible advantage and also to purchase for its members at wholesale prices such articles as its members wish to purchase through the association and will include the following: fertilizers of all kinds, seed, feed, fruit trees, flour, salt farm tools, and other farm supplies.

In future articles to appear in this paper we will outline to you in more detail the plans of the organization and the methods that will be followed in its operation.

CLANTON BASE BALL TEAM

From quite a number of visiting people, who are base ball fans and who attend games of the Southern League often, have told us, after seeing the Clanton team in action, that our boys play equally as good, if not a better game, than is ordinarily pulled off by these professionals.

From our observation of the games on the home diamond this year, we heartily agree to this statement. No better fielding is done by any team than is put up by our boys here when they are "up with their sleep" and mean business.

The three games played with that Mobile team last week, for instance, shows what they can do. The score was 5 to 0, 4 to 3, and 10 to 1 respectively, in favor of Clanton.

In talking to one of the Mobile players after the last game we told him they had evidently played in hard luck. He said: No, we have merely been out classed. Your team here belongs in League company, while we only have a good amateur team." Another travelling man told us if the Birmingham League team would play Clanton here, he would bet $50 per game on Clanton.

Last Monday afternoon the famous Columbian team, came over and brought a large bunch of fans along to see them humble Clanton. They saw them perform to the tune of a 4 to 1 victory for Clanton.

Clanton will cross bats with a much touted Sylacauga team this afternoon on the home diamond and, no doubt, add a new scalp to their heavily loaded belt.

Several more high class games are already on the schedule for the future.

With Jones, McAdams and Burnett all real box artists, and Thompson, Wagoner and Eubanks always in trim for back stop service, the home team is in good shape. Either of these boys function on the bases or in the field with equal skill.

GOING SOME

When it comes to efficiency and service Sheriff Littlejohn takes the cake.

Recently he has been making a record that is hard to head. He made it so dry around here before the fourth that only one arrest for drinking was made and that was a young man who only had got hold of enough to make him boisterous.

He and his officers have had some amusing experiences as well as some that called for the exercise of coolness and nerve.

Federal enforcement officer, Walter Gillispie passed through the other day and while we were in conversation with him he incidentally told us that his boss told him that Sheriff Littlejohn cooperated with him better and was the most agreeable sheriff he had to deal with in Alabama.

We all at home already knew how faithful and reliable he was, but it is pleasant to know that his splendid services are recognized by the higher ups.

Tom is too clever a man not to be good at anything he undertakes and he has plenty of good friends in Chilton county.

A BIG OLD DAY

Last Friday, July 4, the weather man was in a good humor with us and saved up a wonderfully fine day for celebrating. Clear skies with a gentle breeze made every one feel good and jolly.

About 3,000 or 3,500 people assembled at the High School campus, where the delicious fumes from the barbecue pit began to whet their appetites long before the hour of digestion and after mastication arrived.

The greasy pole climbing attracted a good deal of attention and numbers of boys and young men scratched manfully trying to handle those five one dollar bills fluttering in the breeze at the top. They were finally collected by Joe Luckie, whose name was certainly appropriate that time.

At 9:30 that morning Dr. Frank Willis Barnett addressed the large crowd and, as usual, he made a distinct hit. He is not only humorous to a high degree at times, but mingled all the way through his speeches are words to truth and gems of beauty that teach wonderful lessons of righteous living to his hearers.

Hon. Bibb Graves was present, by special invitation, and at 11 o'clock he delivered an address that was replete with patriotic sentiment and swept the large audience with him from start to finish. He is an excellent orator, and being a real man of the people, shot through and through with sympathy for the farmer and the laboring class, he was in his element here, and carried the crowd with him from start to finish. He won a high place of esteem in the hearts of Chilton county people last Friday.

Two excellent ball games, one in the forenoon and one after dinner, added greatly to the amusement features of the day. Clanton won both and that made every one feel extra good.

At 12:30 the free barbecue dinner was served and every one who cared to eat was given an opportunity. A crowd at a free barbecue always distinguishes itself by disregarding all rules of the management for their delectable entertainment. This was no exception to the rule and many impatient and hungry guys broke down the protecting and guiding railings and ran rough shod over everything in sight. If they had only cooperated with the management, every one of them would have been waited on nicely and given a plate full of barbecue and its accessories and they could have sat down in the shade and eat in peace and enjoyment.

At all events, there was plenty and to spare and after all had been fed to capacity there was quite a large pile of fine barbecue left on hand.

Those wonderfully energetic ladies of the Methodist church were in charge of this festive feast and they covered themselves with honor in putting over such a manifest success. We hope they were amply paid for their labors by the receipts realized on the sale of refreshments and etc.

They are engaged in the very laudable work of raising money to complete their elegant new church, and every person who spent any money at the barbecue may congratulate themselves, not only upon having got their

THE AGONY IS ENDED

Jno. W. Davis, of West Va., and Chas. W. Bryan, of Nevada, Get the Nomination

Finally on the 103 ballot, the New York Convention nominated Hon. John W. Davis of West Va., for democratic president, and Hon. Charles W. Bryan, of Nevada, as his running mate for Vice president.

The whole country feels relieved that this fight between the foreign and Catholic vote and that of the free born Americans has been ended and that the protestant and American people, still rule this great country when it comes to a show down.

Both of the nominees are also prominent prohibition leaders so the whiskey ring failed to win even a peep in by allying themselves with this rabid alien bunch.

Both of these candidates have clean honorable records and there is no reason why a militant protestant and prohibition sentiment should not be able to win out at the ballot box like they have won in a convention that was especially arranged and located for their undoing.

It is to be hoped that this defeat of this sinister element that is trying to gain control in our country, will discourage them in their efforts to debauch our democracy and that, in future, we may not be disgraced by having to repeat this eliminating repudiation of that hyphenated and paper ridden element.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the M. E. church, wish to express our thanks to both papers for their generosity in the advertising of the 4th of July barbecue.

Also service rendered so faithfully by Mr. Sartar, Dr. Hinkle and Mr. Phoe. Besides this there were many other courtesies rendered in the way of service loaning needed articles and etc. for which we are grateful.

We also wish to express our thanks to Prof. Stephens for tendering to us the use of High School building and grounds. To Mr. Heard and all of the team for their splendid games of ball.

We are especially proud of our ball team.

SENATOR ADAMS WRITES

Editor News:—Please publish this as it will answer many inquiries as to my health.

I am back home, feeling confident that I am getting on fine. Just as I felt when I left the Clanton infirmary. I have great hopes that the trouble will not recur this time. I know that I will be more careful and I am hoping to be stronger than I have been for years. God bless the people. They have been so kind to me. With thanks, money's worth in hand but they also contributed to a most worthy christian cause.

Thorsby, Ala.

SOME AUTO WRECKS

The inevitable result we have predicted so often are beginning to visualize themselves now.

Last Monday should have been Friday 13, so far as auto drivers were concerned.

The speeders, careless drivers and children chauffeurs of Clanton have had a most wonderful run of pure luck, but their good genius seems to have deserted them for the past few days, or, more probably, has been trying to warn them of the fate that is in store for some of them unless they mend their ways and exercise some degree of carefulness in handling their cars.

On Monday afternoon a Mr. Robinson and wife, from Birmingham, were just outside the city limits on the highway when their Buick took a notion to quiet down, it had turned over a couple of times, breaking the arm of Mrs. Robinson and badly bruising her up and cutting the hands of Mr. Robinson and otherwise bungling him up. Mrs. Robinson is still in the hospital.

On the same afternoon and near the same place a head on collision took place between two Fords, one operated by the little son of Mr. D. Y. Johnston and the other by the son of Mr. B. F. Higgins, both prominent citizens of Clanton.

While both the cars were pretty seriously damaged and had to be brought in by the "wrecker," none of the children were hurt much.

On the following morning the little daughters of Mr. R. E. Luckie and Mr. Cleve Armstrong were out in the same locality driving the Dodge of Mrs. Claude Reynolds, when they ran in to a wagon, became frightened and cut the car across the road so abruptly that it turned over. Fortunately, none of the little occupants were seriously hurt, but the car was considerably battered up and had to be carried to a garage for treatment.

On the same afternoon the "S. G. N." carried, on its first page alone, the accounts of five auto wrecks, with a death score of six people and the very severely wounding of six others.

Really, Monday must have been a day of ill omen to automobiles. But all days are going to be that way, unless more care is exercised by those who handle them.

We will be writing death notes next.

A SEPARATE POLITICAL GRAVE YARD NEEDED

The Democratic party in Alabama has need now for a separate political grave yard of good dimensions.

The recent barbaque convention in New York has proven extremely fatal to quite a number of our wound-battered leaders.

Lets just lay them away quietly, being careful not to disturb their repose. They died an awful and a lingering death, so let's cast the dark pall of oblivion over them and let them rest in peace.

DAVIS AND BRYAN

A GIGANTIC JOB

The real sane and sensible leaders of the national democratic party have a gigantic job on their hands now to reorganize the party and get it in fighting shape in time to give the Coolidge forces much of a fight.

That disgraceful convention at New York, did all that it possibly could do in splitting up the party, that Mr. Underwood might vent his spleen on the South and west for not being willing to follow him into the whiskey entrenched cathedral of Al Smith.

If the lines have to be drawn in America between Catholics and Protestants and between Americans and the hyphenated hords, then, by all means, let them be drawn now, and we will make the fight at once.

There is no half way ground that is tenable and, so far as we are concerned, we are utterly disgusted with compromising with our enemies. Make it an open fight on real democratic principles to a finish. Let us hold our honor intact if we go down in defeat.

Kick the "down easters" with their straddling tactics out and let the real people take over their own country. The South and west forever.

LATE THIS WEEK

The News was unavoidably delayed this week in making its visit to its friends and patrons.

If the concentrated triple extract of pure cussedness and aggravation ever lined up all its diabolical machinery to make miserable and insufferable the existence of any individual, that is what has happened to us this week.

Combined with an indefinite business outlook to start with our machine operator quit us. Next in order, after arranging that trouble and beating our way towards getting out the paper, the machine itself broke down and quit and we had to lose a lot more time before we could get it in form for operation again.

In addition to all of this, the first of the month was on hand, the books had to be posted up for the month, the accounts had to be made out and carried around, while we begged for ours and dodged the follow who wanted his.

Taking it all in all, if there is any other poor devil who has been loaded up with as much quintessence of concentrated annoyance as we have this week, we want to see the color of his eyes if he aint dead, and find out how much longer he feels like he can stand the pressure.

We have just this much to say; if there is any other guy in this country who feels like he would enjoy this little light job we have there is an opening for him right here and now.

It is such a well paid and delightfully appreciated job, that it is a pity to waste it on a person like us.

One more week like this one would put us either in the pen, the asylum or the grave.

Finds Kit Carson Was Born Fighter

Kinsman—Writing Family History Learns of the Famous Scout's Early Life.

New York.—Col. Calvin Duvall Cowles, U. S. A., retired, of Hartford, Conn., kinsman of Kit Carson, famous Indian fighter and scout, recently told hitherto unpublished stories of the frontiersman obtained by him while preparing a history of the Carson family. Colonel Cowles' interview was brought about by the publication in the New York Times of the reminiscences of Dr. William Carson Boone of this city concerning Daniel Boone, Doctor Boone told of meeting Kit Carson while a boy, and of assuming the name Carson after sitting on the scout's knee and listening to his tales of adventure.

The genealogy compiled by Colonel Cowles, whose grandmother, Nancy Caroline Duvall, was first cousin of Kit Carson, begins with William Carson, Kit's grandfather, who came from the north of Ireland to Pennsylvania, and later joined a group of Pennsylvanians, including the Boone family, in their migration to what is now Iredell county, North Carolina, some time between 1738 and 1748. He settled on a grant of 692 acres of land obtained from Lord Granville. Colonel Cowles said:

"Whether Mr. Carson settled on the land before or after he obtained the grant in 1761 is not known. The country was then infested with Indians and wild beasts, and he was there in good time for the exercise of his adventurous nature, which cropped out in the desire of later generations of Carsons to fight Indians, wild beasts or anything else that occasion might require."

Father a Fighter.

William Carson married Eleanor Meloy in North Carolina and had seven children, the eldest of whom was Lindsay, father of Kit Carson. He died from an overdraught of cold water while harvesting grain one hot day, but the date is not definitely known to his descendants. Lindsay Carson, who was born August 1, 1754, inherited his father's lands under the law of primogeniture then in force. His son Kit was the tenth of 14 children.

Lindsay Carson bore an honorable part in the Revolutionary war, having served until the end," said Colonel Cowles. "A rifle he had carried, which was given to his children, was of large caliber, with part of the stock missing. It was shot away at the same time Lindsay lost several fingers from his left hand. He removed from North to South Carolina in about 1786, and in 1792 went to Madison county, Kentucky, and finally established his home in Howard county, Missouri, in 1811. His family joined other settlers in occupying Cooper's Fort, between Fayette and Boone counties, from 1812 to 1815.

"The fort was a little settlement of log cabins protected by a high stock ade as a defense against the Indians. All of his sons came honestly by their reputation as Indian fighters. He was once attacked by two Indians, and had shot one when the other closed in upon him. In a hand-to-hand combat he killed the Indian with the savage's own knife.

"Lindsay Carson's descendants are scattered mainly through the Rocky mountain region and the Middle-West states. A letter from a grandson says: 'All of his sons, without a single exception, went West in search of the Indians and buffalo. Now that the Indian is guarded on the reservations, and the buffalo is about extinct, I am at a loss to know what their descendants will do for pasture.'"

Taken West at the Age of Two.

Christopher, or Kit, Carson was two years old when his parents moved from Kentucky to Missouri. When still a child he took his turn at watching with the men while the settlers fought the Indians during the War of 1812 in the protection of Cooper's Fort. One of the family traditions is that Kit Carson once said:

"I was a young boy in the school-house when the cry came, 'Indians!' I jumped to my ride, threw down my spelling book and there it lies."

Colonel Cowles said that most of the facts concerning Kit Carson's early history came from his sister, Mary Ann, who was born during the exciting days in Cooper's Fort, May 23, 1814, and later became Mrs. Henry M. Rubey. Mrs. Rubey's account of her brothers start as a frontiersman differs from his own. She said:

"Kit was a smart little fellow at his books. Father meant to make a lawyer out of him, but soon after we moved out of the fort and were getting along pretty well father was accidentally killed when the limb of a tree fell on him. Mother then sent Kit, who was fifteen years old, to Franklin to learn the saddler's trade. He didn't like it, for the only use he had for the saddle was on a horse's back."

"Three of our older brothers had begun trading between St. Louis and Santa Fe. Kit begged to go with them. Mother promised that if he would stay another year at Franklin he might go on the next trip. The boys set out and got as far as Independence with their train of pack animals, when one morning to their surprise Kit rode up on a mule. They told him he was too young to make the trip. He pretended to start for home, but after he had gone only a short distance he turned the animal loose, and of course the animal made straight for home. After that the boys had to take him with them, and that was the last we saw of him for 15 years."

Married an Indian Woman.

"These years he spent in trading, trapping and hunting and in becoming more familiar with the Indian customs and language. During this time he married an Indian woman, who died after he became famous. He then returned to his old home with Adeline, their little daughter, whom he left with one of his sisters. She was thoroughly educated in a girls' school in Fayette, Mo. He took her finally to California, where she married and settled with her husband on a large stock ranch."

Kit Carson accompanied Fremont in 1842 on his explorations in the West, and was appointed a lieutenant in the rifle corps of the army in 1847, but Colonel Cowles stated that for some reason which he has never been able to learn the nomination was not confirmed by the senate. During the Civil war Carson was colonel of a New Mexico regiment of volunteers, serving in New Mexico and Colorado, and taking part in the battle of Valverde, N. M., and in important operations against the Indians.

Carson's second wife, whom he married in 1853, was Josefa Jaramillo, whose sister was the wife of Governor Bent of New Mexico. He made his home at Taos, N. M., until his death, which occurred on May 23, 1868, at Fort Logan, Colo. He had three sons and three daughters by his second wife. His son William, who was a protege of Gen. William T. Sherman, was sheriff of Costilla county, Colorado. He killed himself accidentally. His youngest son, Christopher, Jr., wrote Colonel Cowles in 1896 that since his father's death he had been a cowboy and spent much of his time hunting.

Colonel Cowles gave this description of Kit Carson:

"He was only 5 feet 6 inches tall, but, except for the shortness of his legs, was strongly and symmetrically built, his weight being about 160 pounds. His long arms, with their panther-like elasticity of muscles, his broad shoulders and deep chest, indicated a frame well calculated to endure the hardships of trapper life. His features were large but well chiseled, his complexion and hair rather light and his eyes blue. He was a perfect type of pioneer, guide, trapper and frontiersman, with all the attributes of that life—brave, hospitable, generous, honest, temperate and patriotic."

Kreiser Detects Genius by Thrills Along Spine

New York.—The spine is the indicator of genius, Fritz Kreiser, composer and violin virtuoso, firmly believes.

He gave this as part of his credo when he and Mrs. Kreiser boarded a liner, bound for Europe to resume a concert tour and holiday interrupted by the death of Mrs. Kreiser's father, George T. Lies. They first sailed April 17, but were aboard only forty-eight hours when called back.

"I have made a study of genius," the virtuoso said, "a study of all sorts of geniuses, and I have found that when I listen to a musical genius play, or read what has been written by a writer who is a genius, I get a thrill up and down my spine. I have made inquiries and I find that other people get the same sensation."

As for genius itself, Mr. Kreiser believes it is largely the perspiration of a talented individual.

"It is a gift," he said, "but the success is due to a great extent to the adaptation of the gift. Hard work is needed."

Squatting Said to Have Stunted Japanese Race

Washington.—A new theory to account for the small stature of the Japanese race has been advanced.

A member of the government health bureau says that the Japanese custom of sitting on the floor with legs crunched has retarded the development of the lower limbs of the race as a whole.

He quotes statistics which show the average stature of Japanese male students has increased half an inch since 1907 in consequence of spending less time sitting on the floor at home and more time in physical exercise at school.

As a further argument he cites the inhabitants of a fishing community in Okinawa. The men, who have been accustomed to spend most of their time squatting in the bottoms of their fishing boats, are below the average in stature and have unusually short legs.

LOVE IS A FUNNY THING

By H. IRVING KING

(© 1934, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Evelyn Griggs was rich and given to fads. One of her fads was that she would marry a man poor but worthy. Robert Colton was poor and he, likewise had a fad—which was that he would marry a rich woman. So, you see, they fitted each other perfectly; for they moved in the same social circles and liked each other. They were so much together that people began to wonder when the marriage would take place and the girls in "the younger set" began to plan what they should wear at the wedding. It was all plain sailing until Evelyn met Arthur Cummins and Robert met Margaret Edgerton. Margaret Edgerton was poor and Arthur Cummins was rich.

"What a pity he is rich," thought Margaret, when she had known Arthur for two weeks.

"What a pity she is poor," thought Robert of Margaret after he had known her for the same length of time. Evelyn began to wonder if her rumormongering of a poor man was not after all a rather foolish notion.

In spite of the prevailing impression, she told herself, there were worthy millionaires as well as worthy paupers; deserving rich as well as deserving poor. Still, was she not more than half-engaged to Robert Colton? But did she love him? Why, as for that, she liked him as well as she liked any other young man of her set.

Robert's sentiments toward Margaret were very like those of Evelyn toward Arthur. In short, as time went on, the die was cast, the beans were split, the fish were in the fire. The tricky little son of Venus had shot his arrows with the usual recklessness as to where they landed and the helmsman was in love with Arthur Cummins the millionaire; and Robert Colton, the struggling attorney, was in love with Margaret Edgerton, the daughter of a bankrupt broker.

The youthful dreams of Robert and Evelyn with regard to marriage appeared to have been irreparably shattered. The thing now was to disentangle the relations between Robert and Evelyn in as quiet and orderly a manner as possible. They were both very sensible people and they talked it over. It was rather a delicate subject to broach, but broached it must be, and Evelyn took the initiative.

"Robert," said she, "our companionship has been very pleasant and never, until lately, have I thought of marriage with anyone but you. Now, however, well, I see that you are very attentive to little Margaret Edgerton and—well, perhaps we have both made a mistake. Let me confess that I had a foolish, romantic idea that I would marry a poor man, not realizing that perhaps there might come along a rich man with whom I would fall in love. You are kind, you are generous—you understand the situation." To her surprise, Evelyn realized that, when she spoke of Margaret Edgerton, she felt a little twinge of jealousy—she had known Robert so long and so well—it was, after all, rather unpleasant to think that he loved another.

As for Robert, instead of feeling a sense of relief that Evelyn had thus set him free to follow the dictates of his heart, he experienced a sense of depression and a savage desire to punch Arthur Cummins' head.

"Yes, Evelyn," said he, "I fear we have both made a mistake. I must confess that what first attracted me to you was your wealth. I had sworn to marry a rich woman, had met many of them; but when I saw you, I knew that I had met the woman who combined, along with wealth, so many personal charms that I could realize my ambition without doing violence to my conscience. However, the mercenary motive was there—and I am ashamed of it."

They parted the best of friends. Evelyn went off with a yacht party—Arthur Cummins being among the guests—and Robert went up to a little mountain resort where Margaret Edgerton was staying with her parents. On board the yacht Evelyn and Arthur were, by common and tacit consent, left as much alone in each other's company as possible. At the mountain resort Robert spent nearly all his waking hours talking with Margaret. To make a long story short, by the time the yacht cruise was over Evelyn had come to consider Arthur, with whom she had fancied herself so deeply in love, as something of a bore, and the time Robert spent at the mountain resort was ended he had come to think of Margaret as "a pretty little thing—but, oh, so shallow." Robert had been in Evelyn's mind half the time when she had been trying to talk to Arthur and Evelyn had been in Robert's mind as he tried to talk to Margaret.

As soon as Evelyn returned to New York Robert sought her out.

"I suppose it's too late now, and I ought not to speak," said he, "but, do you know, I believe I was really in love with you all the time and did not know it!"

"And Margaret?" asked Evelyn.

"I guess that was what might be called a passing fancy," replied Robert. "You see, our courtship had been so pleasant; I had started in with such unworthy motives."

"Yes, that's it," said Evelyn, "and I had started in with a fad. I guess we both felt we must fly off at a tangent to seek a real romance. For, to tell the truth, Arthur, on a closer inspection, proved to be almost unattractive."

"And we were in love with each other without knowing it all the time," cried Robert.

"Quite so," said Evelyn. "Isn't love a funny thing? I think a quiet wedding would be best, don't you?"

You see, the little blind god has in his quiver arrows that surely sting and smart, and others which inflict mortal wounds, unperceived at first by the victims.

Dog Howls as Did His Wolf Ancestor

Why does a dog howl? Science says it's the strain of wolf blood in the canine that causes the sound. Just as a reasonable human being, under the influence of some violent emotion, will sometimes give way to a primitive instinct which would smother his reasoning normal self, so the best-trained dog will occasionally revert to the savagery of his ancestor, the wolf. For the far-off father of all the dogs that live today is the wolf. Different varieties have gone their different ways, says the Brooklyn Eagle, as nature wrought changes in appearance of the different types, according to their needs.

The pointer is only an exaggerated instance of man's improvement on nature. Every dog pauses before his spring; man selected to breed from the dog which paused longest, and so in time arrived at a dog which pointed and didn't spring at all. The greyhound is another instance; for his particular job he needed little scent and little brains, but perfect eyesight and speed. By selecting only those dogs which possessed these qualities the present type was reached. But every dog, wherever he lives or whatever use man is making of him, comes from the common source, the wolf.

Exactly as a man will often raise his head in unconscious imitation of his canine forbear, so your pet dog will at times show the instincts of his parent wolf. His instincts may even carry him to the point, if he is a shepherd dog, where he will kill the sheep he has so faithfully watched. Watch your dog turn round and round before lying down by the fire, just as the wolf makes himself a lair; listen to him howl, as the wolf howls.

The cultivated domestic dog barks, but exactly as man sometimes reverts to his instincts, so the best of dogs will sometimes forget that he is a dog, and urged on by the strain of wolf that is within him, will lift up his nose—and howl.

Get Husbands From England

A goodly number of the 1,500,000 surplus of women who were left by the World war in France have settled the problem of man-shortage by marrying foreigners, says Guy Hickok in a Paris letter to the Brooklyn Eagle. Two hundred thousand have married Englishmen. How many have married men of other nations is not known, but the indications are that the number is large.

Writers whose chief worry is the rapid decline in the population of France, are concerned because of the fact that in most cases the French women who marry foreigners cease to be French citizens and usually leave the country, and their children, if they have any, become foreign subjects.

"Two hundred thousand gone only to England—counting an average of two children to each, there are 600,000 souls lost to France," comments Maurice de Waleffe.

All very well for the French girls who marry Englishmen. They have solved their problem. But England, too, has her surplus of women—larger than that of France—for the number of English girls condemned to live unmarried because there was not enough men to go around is estimated at 1,800,000 now. They cannot be expected to look on with kindly eye when marriageable Englishmen yield to the attractions of their French sisters.

Teach Mexican Indians

The department of education, Mexico, is sending as many rural teachers as possible to the state of Chihuahua to meet the call for education among the Tarahumara Indians, the bulletin of the Pan-American union states. These Indians formerly lived in the mountains at the sight of a white man, but were won over through an educational campaign conducted by the Mexican government. So eager were the Indians for enlightenment that one of their first number offered his hut as the first "people's house," leaving only a tree as shelter for himself and his family. Six other Tarahumaras followed his example. These "people's houses" are made centers of activity against drunkenness and other vices.

It Wasn't Wireless

Jones made a topping crystal set (so far as looks went) and connected up with pride and boundless hope. As soon as he got the headphones to his expectant ears he "thought he heard a noise." It was a faint intimation of a brass band miles away.

He pulled the receivers away and the music swelled—he put them back, and again the music faded.

It was disappointing and amazing. He would have been touching this and that until now if his wife had not popped into the house and mentioned that the Salvation army band was playing at the end of the street.

QUARTER-TONE PIANO HAS BEEN INVENTED BY GERMAN

Fascinating Effect Produced by New Instrument, Say Musicians Who Have Heard It.

Berlin.—New fine points for jazz music will be made possible by the invention by Grotian Steinweg of Brunswick, Germany, of a quarter-tone piano which produces sounds described as a cross between the gliding slide of ukulele and a banjo and the exotic intervals of a Chinese string piano.

Two pianos, one of which is tuned to standard pitch and the other of which is tuned a quarter tone higher, are connected with a keyboard on which red and brown keys are inserted between the ordinary black and white keys. The playing of this new composite instrument is said to have a fascinating effect, according to persons who have heard concerts given by the inventor.

Alois Huba, composer of quarter-tone music, who has been at work on scores of this kind for some time, sees a far-reaching future in quarter-tone music and regards Herr Steinweg's invention as epoch-making.

Not only will the ear have to become accustomed to differentiating between intervals of only a quarter of a tone, but the whole technique of piano playing will be changed. Women with small hands will be eliminated as pianists since the new octave will require a greater hand span.

The entire mechanism of playing will also become greatly complicated since there will be one-third more keys.

Musical critics who have heard Herr Steinweg's instrument have reserved judgment on it. They appear to fear being classed as old-timers if they do not fall in with the modern tendency toward the unusual, yet at the same

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Democrats Fight and Pray Over Platform Planks and Then Ballot.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE Democratic national convention in Madison Square garden, New York, began its fourth day of full balloting Thursday morning with McAdoo and Smith still deadlocked. Following a dramatic and exciting move in his behalf by William Jennings Bryan Wednesday McAdoo had slipped up to a high-water mark of 56 1/2 votes in the fourth ballot at the Wednesday night session and on the forty-second and last ballot had slipped back to 56 1/4, as shown by the following count:

McAdoo, 56 1/4; Smith, 318 1/4; Davis (W. Va.), 67; Underwood, 3 1/2; Cox, 55; Glass, 28 1/2; Robinson, 24; Ritchie, 17 1/2.

McAdoo on this ballot was 228 votes short of the necessary two-thirds of the convention and 47 under a simple majority—550 votes, which was his immediate objective.

Wednesday's drowsy day session was thrown into a near riot during the taking of the last (thirty-eighth) ballot by William Jennings Bryan, who inadvertently touched a match to Teapot Dome in a daring attempt to stampede the convention to McAdoo. Taking the platform ostensibly to explain his vote as a delegate from Florida, he suggested that the convention choose from a list of eight candidates, each of whom he eulogized in turn as "worthy of progressive Democrats"—Murphree of Florida, Daniels, Robinson, Ralston, Meredith of Iowa, C. W. Bryan, Walsh. When he came at last to McAdoo he was hoarse, derided, cornered into desperately defending McAdoo and almost driven from the platform. And when the ballot was finished the count showed to appreciable change, but the effect of Bryan's move was seen in the ballots of the night session.

MONDAY morning found the convention ready for the long and steady grind of balloting. Six candidates stood in nomination and the platform adopted. The delegates came up snoring and showing few signs of the terrific contest over the League of Nations and Ku Klux Klan planks that had shaken the Democratic party to its foundations for many hours before the adoption of the platform at two o'clock Sunday morning.

Yet it will be long before those delegates forget three memorable scenes of that struggle. One was Homer Cummings of Connecticut, chairman of the platform committee, pleading with the convention for more time because the committee had been unable to agree on the two planks, even though the members had repeated the Lord's prayer and William Jennings Bryan had made an invocation to God.

The second was Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, in impassioned oratory beseeching the convention in the name of Woodrow Wilson to accept the minority League of Nations plank. The delegates applauded Wilson's name and the orator, but rejected the plank by a vote of 742 to 853.

The third was William Jennings Bryan in the role of an apostle of peace speaking the final word in the furious debate over the Ku Klux Klan plank, which tipped the scale in favor of the majority report and brought to an end five hours of riotous struggle.

FOLLOWING is the plank in the majority platform report (adopted by a vote of 546 15-100 to 541 85-100) which deals with freedom of religion, press and speech, and does not name the Ku Klux Klan:

"The Democratic party reaffirms its adherence and devotion to those cardinal principles contained in the Constitution and the precepts upon which our government is founded, that congress shall make no laws respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or of the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances; that the church and the state shall be and remain separate, and that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States.

"These principles we pledge ourselves ever to defend and maintain."

THE minority report, which names the Ku Klux Klan and was lost by less than five votes, was presented to the convention as follows:

"We condemn political secret societies of all kinds as opposed to the exercise of free government and contrary to the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

"We pledge the Democratic party to oppose any effort on the part of the Ku Klux Klan, or any organization, to interfere with the religious liberty or political freedom of any citizen, or to limit the civic rights of any citizen or body of citizens because of religion, birthplace or racial origin."

THE first ballot Monday morning was important as showing the preliminary strength of the two leading contenders, which proved to be the deadlock that was expected. The first was also interesting as a "favorite son" demonstration.

"Abraham!" shouted the reading clerk. And the alphabetical head of the Union started the ball rolling in the first shape with this: "Alabama casts its 24 votes for Oscar W. Up-a-nether-wood" (cheers). Arkansas, of course, gave its 18 to Robinson and California its 28 to McAdoo. Colorado, uncommitted, complimented Gov. W. E. Sweet with its 12. Kansas plumped its 20 for Governor Davis. Indiana went solid for Ralston. Louisiana created a stir by voting its 20 uncommitted for Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, the keynoter of the convention. Wyoming made another entry by naming Senator John E. Kendrick.

The result of the first ballot was as follows: McAdoo, 43 1/4; Smith, 240 1/4; Davis (W. Va.), 31; Cox, 59; Underwood, 4 1/2; Ralston, 30; Ritchie, 22 1/2; Glass, 23; Robinson, 21; Brown, 17; Silzer, 38; Harrison, 43 1/4; C. W. Bryan, 18; Davis (Kansas), 20; Sweet, 12; Ferris, 30; Kendrick, 8; Saulsbury, 7; Houston Thompson of Colorado, 1. Total, 1,098; necessary to choice, 782; majority, 550.

WEDNESDAY morning found the convention preparing to cast its thirty-first ballot under these conditions, as indicated by two days of full balloting: Deadlock between McAdoo and Smith, the former steadily losing and the latter steadily gaining; Davis of West Virginia the most prominent of the other contenders and the favorite in the Wall Street betting, at 5 to 2, as against 4 to 1 previously. McAdoo, who had got 431 votes on the first ballot and touched high-water mark of 479 on the fifteenth, had received 415 on the thirtieth. Smith's zigzag increase had been from 240 votes on the first to 322 on the thirtieth. Davis had started with 31 and had climbed slowly and steadily to 126.

SOUTH CAROLINA, early in the game, killed two birds with one stone by providing itself with a candidate for vice presidential honors and making history. Its 18 delegates held a caucus Monday, voted to place in nomination for the vice presidency Mrs. Leroy Springs of Lancaster and appointed a steering committee of six to handle her candidacy on the floor. As delegate at large, national committeewoman and chairman of the credentials committee of the convention she had made a favorable impression. She is a daughter of South Carolina by adoption—by marriage, rather. She was born in Tennessee and lived in Texas. The South Carolina state federation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs made her its president. Col. Leroy Springs, also a delegate at large, had this to say: "I am no squawman. I am perfectly willing that Mrs. Springs should stay at home. She is a very nice woman and I like to have her there."

OHIO's shore of Lake Erie between Cleveland and Sandusky is dragging itself out of the ruins left by a devastating tornado which Saturday killed more than 100, injured more than 700 and caused property losses of more than $30,000,000. Lorain, a steel city of 40,000, suffered most of the loss of life and property. Martial law was established and aid was sent from scores of cities. President Coolidge offered federal aid. For a time there was neither water, gas nor electric light, and food was scarce. A meeting of business men and bankers throughout the state was held Wednesday in Cleveland and inspection was made of Lorain. Presumably the 125 wrecked blocks will be rebuilt.

TRANSCONTINENTAL air mail service, when put in operation Tuesday, was planned left New York and San Francisco. The schedule calls for 32 hours and 5 minutes eastward and 34 hours and 45 minutes westward. The maximum load is 600 pounds, or about 24,000 letters. There are three rate zones, the postage being 8, 16 and 24 cents respectively. The west-bound plane strikes darkness just west of Chicago and flies through the night to emerge into daylight at Cheyenne. Eastbound, the plane flies through darkness between Cheyenne and Chicago. The flyers pass near Omaha. An airway lighted by enormously powerful beacons guides the flyers.

CRIMINAL indictments were returned at Washington Monday by a special federal grand jury investigating the leasing of the naval oil reserves against Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior; Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny, oil operators, and E. L. Doheny, Jr. Four indictments were returned. The first named Fall, Doheny, Sr. and Doheny, Jr., charging them with conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the leasing of the California reserve. In the second Fall and Sinclair were accused of conspiring to defraud in connection with Teapot Dome lease.

The third indictment charged Fall with accepting a bribe of $100,000 for using his official influence in the California leases in behalf of Doheny Sr. The two Dohenys in the fourth indictment were charged with inducing Fall in behalf of the Pan-American Petroleum company by the "unlawful and felonious" payment of $100,000 to take an unlawful action.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, making his first address since his nomination spoke Monday night before more than 1,000 executive officers of the business organization of the government and reiterated his program of economy to secure relief from burdens of taxation. The President announced that he would submit estimates of not more than $3,000,000,000 for expenditures for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1925 and instructed the officers under him to find a way to cut $38,000,000 from the present estimates.

President Coolidge, Gen. Charles G. Dawes and Chairman Butler of the Republican national committee conferred Tuesday at the White House. General Dawes will begin an intensive 60-day speaking drive September 1. His official notification of his nomination will be received July 29 at Evanston. The President will be notified July 24 in Washington, probably by some big hall where thousands can hear what will be the real opening address of his campaign.

TUESDAY the American exclusion act went into effect and Japan staged a nationwide demonstration, the significant incident of which was the cutting down by persons unknown of the flag flying on the grounds of the American embassy at Tokyo. At the Shinto shrines mass prayer meetings brought the ancient deities to aid the "insulted" Japanese people. Anti American meetings were held everywhere.

NEW YORK'S OLDEST CHURCH

St. Paul's church, which stands at the northwest corner of Broadway and Vesey street in "Little Old New York" is one of the three public buildings erected before the days of the Revolutionary war which have withstood the ravages of progress in that fast-changing city. The third church to be built, it is the oldest church edifice still standing on Manhattan Island—the other two having passed into history.

This venerable, yet exceedingly well-preserved house of worship was commenced in 1704 and first opened for worship on October 30, 1708. The conflagration some years later ruined a considerable portion of the city and laid to waste buildings on all sides of this religious house, but by reason of the fatness of the roof which enabled the firemen to mount it and extinguish the fire which were started by brands blown from other buildings falling on its roof, St. Paul's escaped with but little damage. A few years later a steeple was added.

The interior of this splendid example of early-day church architecture was fashioned after that of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London. The building is 113 feet long, 73 feet wide, and its tall, old-fashioned spire is made up of a series of differently shaped sections stacked one on top of the other.

In keeping with the majority of ancient houses of worship, St. Paul's is surrounded by a burial plot which, in turn, is inclosed by a tall iron fence. The grave of Francis Dring bears the earliest inscription of all of those in this yard—1767. Behind the church within the church rest the remains of Gen. Richard Montgomery, who lost his life in the battle before Quebec in 1775.

A condition which at once raises a question in the mind of the looker-on is the peculiar fact that this church turns its back on Broadway and faces toward the Hudson river and the New Jersey shore. "It is explained that this came about because of the fact that at the time of its construction it was believed that the territory between the church and the river promised the greater development as the future unfolded. It has come to pass, however, that the reverse is true.

In 1780, a special service was held in St. Paul's following the inauguration of George Washington as the first president of the United States.

THE SKYSCRAPER CHURCH

In 1831, when Chicago was in its swaddling clothes, the Methodists purchased a plot of ground in the downtown section of the town and built their "first" church upon it.

By the time 1856 rolled around, the increased growth made the securing of larger quarters an absolute necessity. In the meantime, the business part of the city had shaped itself around the church and the value of the church property had increased at a tremendously rapid rate. The Methodists might have sold out at a handsome profit, but instead they decided to retain their holdings and capitalized the situation by combining religion and business after a new fashion, producing a practical novelty. They built a building several stories high, within which was a church, and rented the ground floor and all other space not used for church purposes, for business purposes.

History has again repeated itself. The attendance of 1922 had outgrown the church of 1856. Their plot had become the center of the city's retail business section. So again, the Methodists enlarged their quarters and in duplicating their former plan on a far larger and far more grand scale, they produced the tallest building in Chicago, the most unusual church building in America, and the highest church building in all the world.

This magnificent skyscraper church is 80 by 182 feet and 21 stories (and basement), or 280 feet high. The tower is surmounted by an elaborate but substantial spire which "carries on" 236 feet farther—making the total height of the structure 516 feet.

An elaborate entrance leads from the street directly into a veritable dream of a "house of worship," surrounded by shops and stores within.

This secluded church is modeled somewhat after the style of the English churches, elegant but simple, dignified, and in silent accord with the creed of the church, with a seating capacity of about 1,300 persons and containing an organ as fine in quality and pleasing in tone as the "experts of the organ-builder's art could produce.

The original church is said to have cost $780. The new structure, its graceful spire dwarfing all other skyscrapers in Chicago, cost about $5,000,000, and the annual income from the space rented for stores and offices is a fabulous one.

BAPTIST MINISTER GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

No greater praise can be accorded a medicine than the voluntary testimony of a minister of the gospel. The preacher's high calling puts a grave responsibility on his every word, and he will not jeopardize his reputation by commending a thing without first assuring himself it is all right.

Tanlac has been endorsed by numbers of prominent ministers. They have put Tanlac to the test of personal service and their words carry conviction because they say what they know to be the truth.

One of the latest to speak out in behalf of Tanlac is Rev. B. E. Bell, a retired Baptist minister, 207 Elm St., San Antonio, Texas, who says:

"Before taking Tanlac I had suffered from stomach and nerve troubles for over 30 years and there were times when my condition was such that it required almost superhuman effort for me to prepare my sermons and go through with my Sunday service.

Indeed, my work seemed like some great obstacle across my pathway—a burden too big to carry in my weak physical condition.

"But in six weeks' time Tanlac transformed my entire outlook, giving me what seemed like a new set of nerves and a brand-new digestive system. My appetite became ravenous, my nerves steady, my liver action regular and I could sleep sound for the first time in years. Whenever I have the slightest symptoms of trouble now I always resort to Tanlac, am taking some at present, and it never fails to smooth things out for me. I certainly have the best of reasons for feeling grateful to Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation; made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do. Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure to mention this paper.—Advertisement.

TO THOSE WHO OWE US

With the wonderful help of our gardening friends we manage to live pretty cheap, but, you know, it takes a little meat occasionally to season with and a little fuel to cook with and these articles call for coin of the realm.

It is fearfully embarrassing to have to tell your grocer at the first of the month that you can't come across, especially so when you have plenty owing to you, by people absolutely good to meet your bill.

Some of you do not understand the situation because you do not have to depend on your daily labor for your daily bread.

If you are owing the Chilton County News anything it is the best time you ever heard of to send it in now, so that we can meet our bills and go forward with our work.

The Chilton County News is forced to do its job work and advertising at half price to meet competition and when we carry you a month or so on our books, we are liable to be compelled to disappoint some good friend who helped us.

HOW ABOUT IT?

We heard one of the liveliest and most popular gentleman in Clanton, and he is not a preacher nor even kin to one, say the other day that if the swimming pools were opened certain days for men and certain and different days for women, that the business would go dead in less than a week.

This gentleman is comparatively a young man and is a regular attendant at the pools and he ought to be a good judge.

That statement is rather suggestive, but we are satisfied from our knowledge of human nature that it is eminently correct

WORKERS URGED TO LAUNCH INTENSIVE CAMPAIGN JULY 15

Preliminary Work for Alabama College Ends—Enthusiasm Runs High.

Montevallo, Ala.—An intensive campaign for the million dollar equipment fund for Alabama College at Montevallo will be carried on throughout the state during the two weeks between the fifteenth of July and August first. Plans for this drive have been made by the Board of Trustees of the college and the executive and advisory committees of the drive.

During the two weeks of that intensive campaign every active worker in all of the districts of the state will be hard at work canvassing the residents in his particular territory. Even with the careful preliminary work that has been done, however, there will be some people who will not be solicited, and these are urged to make their contributions without being asked, sending them directly to headquarters in their territory.

"Some of the people may miss the canvassers who come to see them, others may miss being included on the list of any canvasser by mistake," said Dean Carmichael. "We want to take this opportunity to urge those who are not solicited for subscriptions to make them anyway, mailing them to the campaign headquarters in their town or district, or handing them to some worker in their particular town. We want the money but we want still more the approval and co-operation of every citizen in the state of Alabama."

Reports from district campaign headquarters throughout the state indicate that the work is going forward satisfactorily. No figures have been tabulated so far and therefore no actual amounts can be given out, but there is every reason to believe, according to the Dean that the full amount asked for will be subscribed by the first of August and that one fifth of the amount will be in the hands of the Board of Trustees, who will have charge of spending it according to the plans for the enlargement and equipment of the college.

Members of the Board of Trustees are: Governor W. W. Brandon, Dr. T. W. Palmer, president, Judge W. H. Taylor, of Uniontown, M. V. Joseph of Birmingham, A. V. Lee, of Gadsden, W. T. Sheehan, of Montgomery, Dr. J. W. Abernethie, of Montgomery, Dean O. C. Carmichael, L. M. Moseley, of Union Springs, W. J. Danaby, of Butler, Judge R. B. Evans, of Birmingham, J. B. Ellis, of Selma, Virgil Boul- din, of Huntsville and Landers W.

THE HOBO'S FATE

An unknown negro hobo met the fate that is always the constant companion of that class of derelicts last Sunday night.

Right under the fourth avenue bridge he, together with several other white and black travellers of his class, took them a nap while waiting for a southbound hobo pullman.

A train passed by, some of them awoke and caught it, while some were left. This negro was asleep next to the rails of the main line and, by some means, put his head and one arm across the rail.

When found his head and arm were entirely severed from the body. Death was instantaneous.

Two of the white hobos who were left here reported the case to the depot night force about 12 o'clock. The body lay where it was until up in the day Monday, when, after failing to get either the county or the city to assume the burial expenses, the railroad authorities had Undertaker

Martin to put him away. The companions of the deceased did not know where the negro was from.

A Child that Mopes Isn't a Well Child

—W. L. Hand.

A normal child wants to play. If the little one is sullen, lachrymose and irritable, something is amiss. First off, the child needs a laxative. But mothers are so often disappointed when the favorite laxative fails to restore the youngster's spirits. This is because there is a bilious condition usually and the laxative used hasn't the needed effect on a sluggish liver.

My preparation, Live-o-lax, was made to answer this frequent need. While it can be used in place of cod liver oil, to relieve liver and bowel congestion, it is just as pleasant to take as any of the usual children's laxatives. It isn't a bit drastic, causes no distress and the children love to take it.

Live-o-lax is available at your own drug store and is just as effective for adults as it is for children.

The Farmer Would Save Only 25¢ A Day

There is much discussion and agitation in political circles about the financial problems of the American farmer and the so-called "relief" that might be given him by the reduction of freight rates.

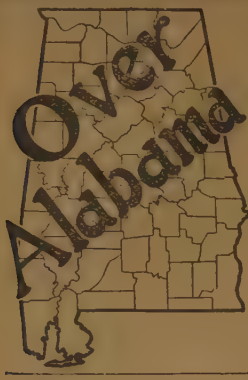

Here is an interesting fact—established by United States Government statistics. The average farmer pays to the railroads for transporting his products the very small sum of $90.00 per year, less than 25¢ per day; and if the railroads were to haul his crops absolutely, free of all cost, his economic condition would be bettered only by this paltry sum.

If the suggested reduction of 7 billion dollars in railroad valuation were put into effect, it would reduce the income of the railroads 35%, yet save the average farmer only four dollars a year.

Farmer's troubles and most farmers know this despite the effort of vote-seeking politicians to "pass the buck" on all disturbances and depressions, to the transportation systems.

Dr. S. W. Welch, state health officer, has returned from a trip to Chicago, Ill., and Lansing, Mich., where he attended annual meetings, respectively, of the American Medical Association and the Association of Health Authorities of North America. Anniston voters went to the polls and decided by a decisive vote in favor of the $100,000 school bond issue and the $40,000 park bond issue. Although the vote was perhaps the lightest polled in a city election in many years, the victory for the bond supporters was won by a wide margin. The school bond issue was carried by a 6 to 1 vote, while the park issue was carried by a 3 to 1 vote.

EXCELLENT POINTS ABOUT GIRL'S OWN ROOM

Corner in Girl's Room, Showing Pleasing Arrangement.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With a little thought and some real work a girl can transform an unattractive, uninviting room into a place of tranquility and charm. The girls in the "Owning Your Own Room" clubs, under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and various state agricultural colleges, have accomplished wonderful results in making over unattractive rooms according to the suggestions given them by club leaders.

A neutral shade for the walls, floors, and larger articles in the room is usually pleasing. Cushions, table covers, books, and other small bright colored objects give the needed touch of color. Chintz or cretonne in curtains and cushions sometimes suggests the color to be emphasized. This is more informal and homelike than an attempt to have everything match. No matter what color scheme is chosen, the darkest tones are best for the floor and its covering, lighter tones for the walls, and the lightest for the ceiling.

Floors Easily Cared For. Smoothly finished floors, partly covered with rugs are easily cared for. Paint or varnish can often be applied to an old unfinished wood floor to make it look better. Attractive bedroom rugs can be made at home by braiding, crocheting, or weaving rugs and odds and ends of material.

Plain wall papers or those with inconspicuous all-over designs are good backgrounds for pictures. A plastered wall may be painted quite easily. A girl should be able to paint both the plaster and woodwork of her room if the latter needs attention. Painted bedroom furniture is much prettier than cheap grades of oak or stained wood. Old bureaus, bedsteads, tables and chairs, even though quite different in design, can be made to look as though they belonged together if carefully painted white, ivory, or an attractive shade of gray or tan. The old finish should, however, be removed and the wood sandedpaper smooth before any paint is applied.

Choose a Good Bed. A simple, painted-metal single bed with a good mattress and spring is desirable for a young girl. A slip-on cover of unbleached muslin is excellent for keeping the mattress clean. The pillow, like the mattress, should be protected by a thin, close-fitting, washable cover between the ticking and the pillow case.

An improvised dressing table can be made by hanging a mirror over a small table. This is to be preferred to dressing tables with flounce of cretonne that collect dust. A bureau or chest of drawers is needed for storing clothing and personal belongings. Bureau and table covers should be as simple as possible and always fresh and clean. The chair should be comfortable to sit in. A bookshelf and work table are attractive touches. Some sort of wardrobe or closet is needed in which to hang clothing. A good wastebasket that will not tip over easily nor shed dirt, should be provided.

Shades and curtains should regulate but not shut out light and air. Simple, durable, softly hanging materials such as white or cream voile, seersucker, or cheesecloth, hemmed or hemmed, which may have overcurtains of colored or figured material.

The lighting is important. For lighting the bureau or dressing table an electric light on a drop cord or an inverted gas burner gives a much better light if suspended over it, but if kerosene is the only source of light available a bracket lamp fastened to the wall at one side of the bureau gives the best lighting. For reading, a table lamp is most satisfactory. One or two well-chosen pictures, simply framed, add to the room, but needless ornaments only increase the work of cleaning.

The destruction of wild bushes and other places that harbor chiggers has helped to eradicate them. Private owners and country clubs can be made free from them to a large extent by keeping the grass cut and useless herbage moved as closely as possible, so as to expose the chiggers to the sun. Dusting the grass and other plants with sulphur, or spraying with dilute kerosene emulsion mixed with sulphur facilitates extermination. Putting sheep to pasture on large acreages is thought to get rid of chiggers, because, it is believed, they are affected by the oil or lanoline in the sheep's wool.

Peanut Butter Cottage Pudding

1 1/2 cups flour 1/2 cupful peanut butter 1/2 cupful sugar 1/2 cupful milk 1/2 cupful lemon juice 1/2 cupful sugar

Sift the flour, salt, and soda together. Combine the water, peanut butter, lemon juice, and sugar, and stir in the dry ingredients. Beat the mixture thoroughly, bake it in muffin pans, and serve with chocolate or other pudding sauce. If desired, a teaspoonful of baking powder may be substituted for the soda and lemon juice, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

FRUIT ICE CREAMS OF VARIOUS KINDS

Different Flavors May Be Had as Desired

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Far from the soda fountain—out in the country, at shore or mountain resort—the children may enjoy chocolate sundae and fruit ice creams of many kinds if ice is procurable and if they are willing to furnish the labor when it comes to turning the freezer.

Plain Vanilla Ice Cream. 1 quart market 1/2 pint sugar (1/2 cream (usually pound) 16 to 18 per cent 1/2 teaspoonful vanilla) 1/2 pint whole or evaporated milk chopped walnut meats; with crushed fruit in sirup it may be served other kind of sundaes.

Vanilla ice cream can also be varied by introducing different flavors into the mixture before freezing it. A cupful of sweetened fruit pulp is the right amount for the quantity of cream and other ingredients in the recipe. Half a pint of sweetened peach pulp (made from one cupful of dried peaches and 1/2 pound of sugar) is enough for about 2 quarts of the crushed peach ice cream illustrated. A few teaspoonfuls of caramel flavor in vanilla ice cream gives a pleasant variation, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Culling Poultry Big Money Saver

Fowls Should Have Plenty of Mash and Green Feed and Be Vermin Free.

Although the poultryman should do some culling every month in the year, if he can make but one culling, the time to make it is the first of September, says the Cornell poultrymen who give some practical culling rules. They declare that culling out the poor producers from the flock is the easiest and the quickest way to save money. During the culling season, the hens must have plenty of mash and green food and be free from mites; and green food and good layers may show all the signs of non-layers. It is also well to keep in mind that changes of feed, buildings, weather, and the like may bring about the appearance of non-laying conditions. Broody hens also have this appearance.

Signs of Good Producers. Hens that have laid long and heavily have a different appearance from those that have not. These differences are in physical appearance and actions. The heavy producing bird is a worker, a good feeder, intelligent, elusive but not flighty, keen of eye, a good ranger, late to bed, early to rise. The low producer is indolent, flighty and an indifferent eater, with little activity.

In all yellow-skinned breeds like the Leghorns, Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes, Brahmans, and the like, it is possible to tell by the color of certain sections of the body whether the hens are laying or not. A heavy layer is flesh color, or white, in the beak, eye ring, ear lobe, vent and shanks, while a non-layer is distinctly yellow. A sick hen shows white in all sections and must not be confused with a layer. Also some breeds have a white skin naturally, and in these breeds there are no color changes.

There are changes in form as well. A laying hen has a large abdomen and the rear end of the keel is much deeper than the front. She also has well spread pelvic bones, full moist vent, soft flabby skin, broad flat back, while in a non-layer the abdomen is small, the vent dry and puckered, the skin thick and dry, and the back short, narrow and arched.

Hens Molt in July. A molting hen usually stops laying, but in some of the heavier breeds they will molt to some extent and still lay. Leghorns usually stop laying when they begin to molt. Molting during the summer is one of the best ways to distinguish the non-layer from the layers. A good layer, well managed, will not begin to molt until October 1 or later. Hens that have been well cared for and are in full molt by the middle of July are not worth keeping.

The eyeballs of the laying hen can easily be seen when viewed from the rear, the comb is bright red and full, the beak short and curved, the face full and of fine texture. Non-layers have dull, embedded eyes, long straight beaks, hard shriveled combs and fat faces.

Excellent Qualities of Texas Honey Ball Melon

A new type of melon, called the Texas Honey Ball, which is a cross between the Texas Cannon Ball cantaloupe and the California Honey Dew melon, will be found in the markets this year, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. The melon is almost perfectly round in shape and averages about five inches in diameter.

Approximately 2,500 acres of the melons have been planted in Texas, the department says, which should produce, under favorable conditions, around 1,250 carloads. Only 65 acres of the melons were planted last year, largely for experimental purposes.

The meat of the new honey melon is similar in texture to that of the Honey Dew, 1 1/2 inches thick, and is covered by a smooth, thin rind, fairly well netted. The chief merits of the melon are its shipping qualities and flavor. Shipments can be made without refrigeration to any section of the United States requiring ten days' to two weeks' time. The melon is not susceptible to damage from bruises caused by ordinary handling.

Save Small Grain Seed for Planting This Fall

That farmers will do well to plan for the acreage which they expect to plant in small grain this fall and to secure good planting seed for the fall, is a suggestion from the agronomists of Clemson college.

Good seed oats are very scarce this season, and should be carefully saved by farmers who have them. They will bring a good price this fall, if properly stored and kept so that they will be free from injury by rats, mice and weevils.

It is very difficult to prevent damage to small grain during summer months. It is important to have some place, either a granary or a barrel, where planting seed may be fumigated.

Continuous Garden

A "continuous" garden is possible for many months of the year if replanting is done. Why should all of the lettuce or beans be planted at one time? Why not utilize the space left after the young onions are pulled, by planting late cabbage?

Decline in Prices of Dairy Cattle

Pure Bred Aged Bulls Bring More at Private Sale.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Average sale prices of pure bred dairy cattle for the year ending December 31, 1923, ranged from $183 for bulls over one year to $208 for bulls over three years of age, according to reports submitted by breeders to the United States Department of Agriculture. The breeds included were: Ayrshire, Guernsey, Holstein, Jersey, Brown Swiss. More than twice as many animals were disposed of at private sale as were sold at auction. Auction prices, however, averaged from $25 to $50 per head higher than those realized in private sales. Aged bulls were an exception, such animals bringing more in private sales than at auction.

The following comparison by ages shows that prices in 1923 were somewhat lower than in 1922:

|                                                             | 1922  | 1923  |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|-------|-------|
| Bulls under one year of age                                 | $158 | $183 |
| Bulls over one year and under three years of age            | 221   | 208   |
| Bulls over three years of age                               | 425   | 208   |
| Heifers under one year of age                               | 151   | 183   |
| Cows and heifers over one year and under three years of age | 211   | 208   |
| Cows over three years of age                                | 285   | 208   |

The top bull and cow each brought $7,500. The number of animals represented were: Cows, under one year, 4,845; bulls, over one year and under three, 947; bulls over three years, 106; heifers and cows over one year and under three, 2,470, and cows over three years of age, 2,977.

Make Good Silage From Different Legume Crops

Some farmers have reported excellent results in making silage from alfalfa, clover, and other legumes, while others report that their legume silage was so poor the cows would not eat it.

The great extremes in the results reported as to the palatability of legume silage led Professor Eckles to investigate this question. He found that the difference in quality was apparently due to the amount of water in these legumes when ensiled. For two years they had made good alfalfa silage at the Missouri station, but the next two years the silage was practically worthless. In going over this experience, it was noted that the first two years were dry years and the analysis of the alfalfa when ensiled showed a high percentage of dry matter. The next two years were wet years and the analysis shows they yielded silage which was considerably less at the time the green alfalfa was ensiled. Further investigations showed that if alfalfa were made into silage when green and succulent, as it is at the usual time of making it, it contains about 90 pounds of dry matter to the hundred and, under these conditions, would not make good silage. If it were drier and more mature and contained approximately 40 pounds of dry matter to the hundred, then it makes good silage.

Clover Is Helpful

The growing of clover in a three-year rotation, especially if the second crop of clover is plowed under, would keep many soils in splendid condition for a long term of years, although many other soils would be benefited by a dressing of one to two tons of limestone per acre once in each rotation period and also by the addition of acid phosphate for one of the crops in each rotation. The plowing under of the second crop will add considerable nitrogen.

FARM NOTES

Spray tomatoes and melons with Bordeaux mixture to prevent disease.

Make sure to plant enough hay crops to supply hay for next year.

As small grain matures, look out for chinch bugs and use barriers if needed to prevent migration.

Persons desiring to start into the growing of alfalfa for seed should secure the most hardy strains of seed.

Excellent results are being secured with alfalfa seeded on rye and wheat provided the ground is fairly fertile and not in need of lime.

Cowpeas hay contains 26 per cent more digestible protein than soy bean hay, but soy bean hay contains a larger total amount of nutrients.

Looking over the tile drain outlets in drainage districts and clearing out those that need it is a good spring or early summer job that may save money later.

Good barnyard manure makes the very best onion fertilizer, but it is best applied to the crop before the onions are planted so it will be in best form for them.

Sometimes alfalfa grows so rank that it lodges and becomes very coarse if left to reach full bloom. Earlier cutting is essential, but with the first crop of one-year-old stands on the second growth of older seedlings, the stems are generally much finer and leafier and can be cut in or near full bloom without serious impairment of quality.

of his eyes, and the little twitching of his fingers.

"Would you like it so?" he said.

"I would . . . not hurt me. Would it, Kayama-San?"

"No."

"Nor you?"

"I cannot be hurt."

"Would it help you? You have been good to me."

"Why do you wish to help me? Because I have not . . . because . . ."

"No, Kayama-San. My honored father, Tsai-Kung, said that when there came into the breast a feeling . . . that when you felt . . . I do not understand . . . I want to help. I feel that it would be worthy."

He half held out his arms to her, only to see her, instinctively, draw back. No words might have withheld him, he realized that his desire must be a splendid misery of self-denial, repressed, must hug a fetter.

Yet—what more did he need? Suppose he told her that he was of her own kind? That would remove the barrier . . . If she meant what she had implied. She would be silent, surely. An hour, a passing wind through their lives, this it would be if Kayama himself returned. Why not fill the hour with blossoms, with perfumes and joy?

"My dear . . . my dear . . ."

he said huskily.

Not only had Ellen never tried to stem so fierce a torrent of love in all her cloistered life, nor ever shuddered under such dry heat in a single word, she had never dreamed of so much passion in him. Strangely, it moved her also. Why, she did not know. She longed to say something. It was painful, yet delicious; her hood-blind heart exulted. For a moment there was nothing to restrain him as he uttered them. That she did not become large-eyed and hopeful, horribly nervous of him, he put to the fact that she did not understand. Good Lord, the girl . . . trusted him. He was very glad that she had not understood, and with hands still unsteady returned to the papers again.

A curious change came over his face. The girl saw it run the gamut of detached interest, amazement, incredulity. His hands shook with excitement. His mouth lightened. A lead line was drawn about the lips. She heard his teeth click together.

Up—down. He read the paper before him quickly. Reread it. Turned to the attached sheet of parchment.

Aochi, one of the inner council of the Imperialists, had demanded from Marakito an exact accounting. Had he not paid many hundreds of yen into the fund to prevent more foreign capital from being invested in Japan? How did the affair progress? Marakito told him. There must be more money paid into the treasury.

The white man who directed the building of the bridges could be bought. The other was strangely honest for a seiyō-jin. But there was a plan for him, also. Marakito assured Aochi that all would be well.

At the end it was written that the subordinate engineer had departed upon unknown paths, and that the laboring was well behind the stated time. That it would assuredly be days in arrear of the stipulated length of the contract.

Wells sprang from his zabuton. His cheeks were flushing, his eyes bright.

"Would you like to go to the strange land in which your people lived?" he asked with careful restraint.

The girl bowed. "Where you go . . ."

His first actual coherent thought was what would Uncle Jim say at this evidence? What was up at home? Why had Williams done this thing to him? Or Albert he thought nothing at all except to wonder.

What was going on? Why not return as Kayama, and find out? Listen. He would hear. If he went in, bluntly, as Robert Wells, with his proof, it was unlikely that he would discover what was happening. Should he take Ellen? The situation became more difficult. She was his wife. As matters stood, she did not fear Japanese Kayama. What if he were her kind?

To take her—must he explain? Perhaps Albert loved Uncle Jim's money. Perhaps this girl would do him good, and along the road again. Why not . . . why not . . .

He looked at the girl again. Here was no feeling such as he had for Albert. He felt that he would, from this time on, thro for the sound of her footfall, yearn for the scent of her hair.

He wanted to say: "There has been sin in me, Ellen, but not of my making. I . . . have never loved before. I love you, but I will not touch you."

Before the expression on his face the girl was abashed and worried profoundly. Kayama-San was in trouble. What she did not know. Vaguely, she wished that she might help him. "Is it because of what I said that you are downcast?" she asked timidly.

"No," shortly.

"Is it that . . . the household think it all strange that . . . that . . ."

Wells had not considered the household. "That what, child?"

"That . . . we do not sit . . . side by side on the cushions . . . I would be willing to . . . If it would make it easy for you . . . until they . . . no longer question . . . or you return me . . . or . . ."

She was swirling in deeper waters than she knew.

Here was unconscious cruelty, but none the less bitter for that.

His answer came in gravelly measured tones, belied by the narrowing

INDUSTRIAL HISTORY IN THE MAKING

Port Smith, Ark., guarding the river ford in Indian days, has looked down on dramatic events. Today it is at a crossroads in industrial development as it was once at a crossroads in pioneering. It is reached by a west-of-the-Mississippi that never carries a "diner"—yet is it a metropolis, an industrial center. And like all industrial centers nowadays, it wants women in its industries.

Two wholesale clothing houses, a paper-box plant, a button factory, two "plants" and over a dozen factories, and I know not what in the line of farm supply houses now surround the old grapple of the fort, and furnish a spirit of bustle and success that runs up and down the streets. Country-bred girls are sucked in to join local women in store and office and factory, as they are sucked into the industrial whirlpool of New York and San Francisco and Chicago—but with a difference.

What woman holds the most interesting job in Port Smith? That's hard to say. It's hard to discover even when you're right on the spot. Certainly one of the interesting ones is the job of presiding over what an imaginative person might call the intake pipe to the suction pump of Fort Smith Industries. She is the little woman in black suit and crisp white blouse—and oh, a most understanding smile—who wears a Travelers' Aid button and presides over the station waiting room. (I warned you that Fort Smith is afflicted. It's also very up-and-coming about having all the new wrinkles in town management, and the Travelers' Aid desk is only a sample.)

There is enough time and space and general spirit of being interested in your neighbor to make Fort Smith still keep the best of its small-town habits. So Miss Jennie Stevens, the aid lady, isn't expected to catalogue the women that she meets. She doesn't send out a hasty postcard to some person or other, "This will introduce Fanny Smith. She needs a small room till she gets her first pay envelope"; and then never know whether Fanny gets it or not.

Instead, when Fanny Smith, on her first venture from Blankensburg, drifts in minus a job, minus friends, minus even a place to sleep, the aid lady becomes Fanny's first friend. She knows personally most of the people she calls up before she sends Fanny out to meet them, and six months from now she'll probably know just how Fanny is getting on in work, and love affairs, too.

To my mind, the aid lady has the best job. But there's a sort of human interest quality about most of those Fort Smith jobs that the Chicago ones lack!

A CIVIL ENGINEER'S WIFE

Two pages she wrote about the pleasure of being a dweller on Main Street. Typewritten pages, too, closely spaced, on big sheets. As I read I wondered a bit why Mrs. Herrick, vocational engineer, had suggested my writing her. Charming she undoubtedly is. A good citizen. A splendid wife. A woman other women delight to honor—for there is a whisper that if the General Federation of Women's Clubs ever elects a mountain president, it will be this same Kathryn Perham of Glendive, Mont.

But a woman of business? Then I found it. Tucked away as apparently the least important fact about her life was a modest sentence. "I have had in marriage a wife, and since my marriage to a bridge and building contractor, I have been able to work side by side with him on blue prints, specifications, etc."

There aren't but 18 women civil engineers in all the United States. No wonder my vocational friend claims Mrs. W. T. Perham for Montana.

And when one can add to the personality and courage of a pioneer in such a "man's field," the feminine charm that has obviously made her a success as a helpmeet to her husband, then surely one has material for a first-class romance. Imagine a "best seller" with the unfinished bridge that was to be the engineer's masterpiece, unchanged, then saved because the heroine could figure out stresses or loads a labor gang.

Fiction aside, Mrs. Perham's is the letter of a happy woman. Particularly happy because her life is lived in a small town. She comments on the number of famous folk who "start careers in small places and establish themselves securely before seeking larger fields to conquer." And then she sums up her creed with this:

Let others reap the splendor, Lord, but give instead to me
The homely round of living bland with small-town sympathy.
The little, small-town sympathy that atoms on neighbor feet
From a lampit, houses down a maple-shaded street;
That lends its strength on tear-dimmed ways its own bruised feet have trod.
The little, small-town sympathy—the very soul of God.

ROAD BUILDING

DAY OF NARROW ROAD CONSTRUCTION GONE

Don't build the road narrow. But however it is built, have a right of way ample enough to provide for widening in the future. On these two hang all the law and the profits of modern road building!

An expensive fault of the narrow road is the concentration of traffic. Wheels moving constantly over the same places produce parallel lines of excessive wear. To prevent rapid deterioration of a single track road a heavier foundation and surface is needed than is required for a wider road.

Substantial shoulders at the sides on which the passing traffic may turn out are also necessary, as otherwise the wheels of vehicles turning out to pass will quickly wear ruts at the edges. In these water collects, to penetrate beneath the foundation, with disastrous results. A narrow road with soft earth shoulders is dangerous to motor traffic in slippery weather.

To build the heavier foundation and surface needed to bear the concentration of traffic on a narrow road, and the substantial shoulders at the sides require as much money as to build a wider road. On a wide road, traffic is scattered, and wear is distributed. With a paved surface sufficiently wide for two lines of rapidly moving vehicles to pass in safety, the necessity for artificial shoulders is eliminated. To build a narrow roads thin and without shoulders, means a loss of the entire investment in a comparatively short time.

A narrow right of way requires drainage ditches close to the travel. With no shoulder between paved surface and ditch the chances of serious accident are largely increased. All drainage ditches tend to become deeper, so that the danger to traffic becomes constantly greater.

Before any program for beautification of highway is undertaken, some wide enough to accommodate future traffic should be had.

Motor vehicle traffic will increase as the mileage of hard roads increases. A general extension in the width of wearing surfaces will call for wider rights of way. To obtain wider rights of way now means an ultimate saving of a large sum of money and will prevent many future difficulties.

Great Influence of Better Roads

The following points show how improved roads influence farm home life:

1. Shortens the distance from neighbor to neighbor and so reduces isolation and loneliness.
2. Brings the town and the country home closer together, making it possible for the farmer and his family to enjoy the amusements and educational advantages offered in town.
3. Saves time in traveling from the farm to town and from town to farm. This allows more time for work, rest or pleasure.
4. Lightens the burden of marketing crops.
5. Social intercourse between town and country tends to break down barriers of misunderstanding, jealousy, suspicion and ill-feeling.
6. Improved roads make possible bigger and better consolidated schools and churches in town or in the country.
7. Improved roads offer greater incentive to hauling limestone and fertilizer in building up the farm and increasing its productivity and income.

Learning to Build Roads

The advisory board of highway research, which recently met in Washington, is composed of from sixty to seventy of the leading engineers and scientists of the country. More than $1,000,000 is being spent on learning how to build highways so as to give the best and longest service per dollar, and this group of men have assembled to discuss and exchange data on the experiments in progress on roads.

Roads Help Keep Pace

Good roads have helped the farmer keep pace with modern times. Who would go back to those days when the farm was isolated, especially in wet weather, the deep rutted dirt roads, the horse and buggy, or perhaps the sleigh, with its limited area of travel when a trip to town was considered a journey.

Remove Decayed Trees

Removal of all decayed trees bordering main line roads in Connecticut has been undertaken by the state highway department in the hope of removing the danger of highway blockades during heavy windstorms.

No actual cases of accidents involving falling trees across the roadways have come to the attention of the department, but it is felt that if this precaution is taken the probability of mishaps of this kind will be removed.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"I was taught to read and write English. There was nothing to tell me I was. I only knew a word or two. But Tsai-Kung saw to it that each child I made was copied upon paper. He discovered that my name was Ellen Almsmith, after speaking to the mission women of it. The mission women wanted me. But it was work, work, pray, work with 'Wells' said, understand that. 'My father was willing, but I withheld the hem of my missioners from entering the mission."

"Young men wanted me. Tsai-Kung would not bear of that. Wisely, he said that a yellow jewel had beauty, a white jewel likewise, but, side by side, each destroyed the harmony of the other."

She looked at Wells for agreement, but at his impassive face went on more quickly.

"Then Tsai-Kung was supposed to have helped a blond foreigner—"

"You know the rest, O-Hana-San. But your hair and skin and eyes—did you question?"

"My father had spent a year in the city port. Also, it was told, perhaps by Tsai-Kung himself at first, that there are women with hair as mine involved in the Hsikan desert. Many have marveled at my hair. Do you think it worthy?"

"It is very lovely . . . unattractive," Wells informed her. "The night power, cooler. We shall return to my house."

"I trust you," Ellen whispered.

Also, your name has an outlandish sound. I will call you O'Hana." He looked at her. "As for the rest, I have already promised."

Ellen awoke in the morning filled with instant, momentary fears; before her eyes drifted again the protests of Tsai-Kung at her seizure, her muffled in a blanket, the hurried journey to sea, the hiding in some strange place, the appalling unfriendly faces, the sound waves, and then the people. Of how she was decked, for what purpose, she had no need of even her scattered wits to guess.

For the time of the Seven Prayers, assumed while a maid dressed her hair, she was given to composing herself. The maid twittered as she looked. She must speak, being young, even if the new mistress could not understand. Of the great good fortune in becoming the beloved of Kayama-San, of the joy that would come to the house, the decking with flowers, the prayers and ringing of bells and feasting, when there was from a son. "See it that the babe is not like yourself," came the caution. "He must have a brown skin, and eyebrows like Kayama-San's, for those are the mark of the house. And there will be the ceremony of the lightning flash, to be placed upon the child's breast by the priests, through which you must be brave." (The maid spoke of this after, and was beaten

CLANTON, ALABAMA, JULY 17, 1924.

STOP AND THINK

One of the most insidious cause of trouble and misunderstanding between people, arises from a disposition on the part of all of us to imagine that we are always right and the other fellow always wrong.

This is one of the greatest mistakes we all make. None of us are infallible and there is not a person living who is not, at times in the wrong.

In the first place, you have no more inherent right to your opinion than does the other fellow. You may conscientiously feel perfectly sure you are in the right but, at the same time you should also remember that the other man can just as honestly differ with you. It is absurd to fall out under such conditions and make bitter enemies that may evilly influence and even outlast your own life.

Reason with yourself. Put yourself in the place of the other fellow and honestly strive to get his view point. Often you will discover that he has as good grounds for his belief as you have for your own, and often you may find after due and careful investigation, that he is right and that you have been honestly in error.

Life is so short and too uncertain to trifle any part of it away in hating any one. Anger and bitterness not only deprives one of a great part of the joy of living but, according to the very best physicians, shortens ones days on earth.

Go to your friend, or neighbor and calmly, courteously and in a good humor, talk the matter over, remembering that he is entitled to as many independent prerogatives as you are, and ninety-nine times in the hundred you will settle your differences in a good humor and will understand and love each other more than ever.

Try it out.

THE BOYS GOT BACK

Some few weeks ago two of the popular Clanton boys, Messrs. Spurgeon Calloway and Roscoe Connell, boarded their trusty Ford and headed West.

Monday evening last, returned after having seen more and had more peculiar experience than ever come in to the entire life of the average citizen.

They went all the way to the Pacific coast even taking in Hollywood on their rounds and actually managed to escape the lavish seductions of these movie girls. This surprised us greatly, for they are essentially young men who know how to appreciate pretty girls.

It is interesting to listen at them tell their many funny experiences and especially so to hear them tell of having to be dipped and fumigated a time or two, as they passed from state to state, before being permitted to proceed.

One wonderful thing about their trip was, the weather was so favorable, all the way round, that they spent only one night in a hotel, and a terrific sand storm on the desert drove them in that time.

They had a big time with a capital B, and accumulated enough stories of adventure to amuse their grandchildren with in the years to come, when they will have to live on memories instead of deeds.

SHOULD BE DONE

The next time the legislature comes together, we notice that a petition is going to be sent up from several cities asking for an act, compelling all persons who operate a motor vehicle on the public roads or streets to have a driver's license.

This is a wise and needed step. Automobiles are becoming so numerous and accidents so common that something is necessary to handle the situation. This law, if passed and then enforced, will go a long way towards reducing the present reckless handling of cars by incompetent and brainless drivers.

A COMMON CONDITION

In the years gone by we have belonged to quite a number of fraternal orders, all of them founded upon the very highest ideals of individual co-operation and fellowship.

The obligations solemnly subscribed to, in becoming a member of these fraternal orders, have always sacredly bound the members together under a bond of allegiance to each other. One had to solemnly swear that under all of the honest and legitimate circumstances of business and social life, he would always give to his brother member the benefit of his influence and help him to succeed and make his life as easy for him as he possibly could, without injury to himself.

In all of this fraternal order experience, we have probably known as many as a dozen members who tried to live up to the letter of this sacred and reasonable obligation.

On the other hand, some of the bitterest and most implacable foes we have ever been forced to contend with, in a business way, have been brother members in the same lodge that we belonged to. Not because they personally disliked us, but because they had some outside friend, perhaps, who was bidding against us on a contract, or some equally as unreasonable reason for disregarding their oath of allegiance to a brother.

This one thing has been the bane and the utter ruin, of more fraternal orders than any other one thing. The form and it does not mean anything to them personally.

This seems to be the prevailing habit where ever we have gone, and you can take it from us, here and now, that no kind of an organization will ever live long and prosper that lays its foundation on the violation of a sacred and solemn oath to the Almighty.

A real fraternal organization, that would live up to the very letter of its obligations to each other, would be a wonderful and an incalculable benefit to mankind, for by a sincere spirit of co-operation means success to all.

When assuming these serious obligations every person should weigh well their meaning, and realize the solemn fact that, of his own free will and accord, he is calling God to witness with him the fact that he has promised to do certain things and obligated himself to live up to certain specific duties.

We have seen these fraternal orders flourish for a season and then silently disappear. Their members were like us, they found to their sorrow that these lodge room agreements did not mean anything and, one by one, they allowed their names to drop from the roll.

There is right here a broad field for some real fraternal order that will live up, absolutely, to its pledges. An order composed of selected membership, that will combine all of its efforts in furthering every good cause, and will really and truly cooperate with each other every day in the year, can do a wonderful work in the general uplift of mankind. But where these mutual obligations to each other mean nothing at all outside of the lodge room, it is surely destined to go the way of all this earth like so many that have gone before.

OUR BALL TEAM

The Clanton Ball team has fallen in to another slump.

They still play winning ball over anything they go up against, but it looks like, bad luck of some kind overtake them about the sixth or seventh inning and they go all to pieces and the game is lost after having been safely won up to that time.

The jinx is certainly on their trail and they are going to have to take a new grip on the situation and shake this haunted jinx into the discard, for the season will close and find their wonderful career all clouded up and almost forgotten.

All know they can play the game to perfection, for we have seen them, time after time, put over games that would even shine in the big leagues. Now the thing to do is to locate the trouble and do away with it at short notice.

This afternoon they play a return game with Tallahassee and the fans are hoping that they go into the game, and stay in it to the finish, with their old time pep and send these husky boys back home on the minus end of the score.

SOME DOWN TOWN MOVES

In a week or so now there will be several changes of location of some of the business houses down in town.

Mr. Hugh Jones will move from his present place in the Exchange Hotel building into one of the new stores just nearing completion on Second Avenue.

Mr. W. A. Kemp is also intending to move about the same time into the other new store building that is nearing completion next to the Elmore stand.

Then we hear that M. Lande will move into the building to be vacated by Mr. Kemp.

All of these moves are slated for an early day, for Mr. Plyer, the builder, is busy working on the new buildings. It all possible haste now and they will be ready in a few days.

It is also rumored that a new firm will open up in the store vacated by Lande.

Mr. Ware has opened up his cafe again now in the same old stand which has been entirely renovated and is a dandy now.

PRESBYTERIAN SERVICES

SUNDAY

On next Sunday Rev. Dr. Windham, an able and earnest young minister, will preach for our Presbyterian friends at their place of worship.

This young man has a wonderful career. He was an honor graduate of law and made a most successful start in the practice of his profession. He began reading up on the law of Moses, as an asset to his calling, because so much interested in the Bible that he quit his law practice, took a four year course in the Seminary and prepared to practice law in God's behalf instead of man.

Go out to hear this learned young brother and he will interest you.

BAPTIST CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY

Pastor Ezell, who is away now on a vacation that will extend over three Sundays, arranged to have the pulpit filled each Sunday during his absence.

On next Sunday, Rev. G. A. Hornady will fill the pulpit both at 11 a m and 8 p. m. Don't forget this fact and be out to hear this long time servant in the vineyard. You will hear something that will do you good.

On the Sunday following, July 27 two State Board brethren will be here and fill the pulpit, one at 11 morning and the other at the evening service. Their names are Proctor and Bobo, and they come on this work with high endorsements.

On the Sunday following that, August 3 Rev. P. G. Carter, a former pastor here will occupy the pulpit for both services.

Cut this out and keep the announcements handy and for fear we miss some thing especially good, lets go out to every service and find out what they have to tell us.

Dr. Ezell has worked hard and deserves a little rest, but the rest of us have not been doing much so we better keep on the job every Sunday.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Mrs. George Williamson was operated on for appendicitis Monday.

Miss Irene Atkinson came in Sunday with Osteomyelitis.

Mrs. John Davis was operated on Friday.

Mrs. Ruby Dykes was operated on for appendicitis Saturday.

Mrs. Jim Mims went home Sunday morning.

Mrs. Luetta Logan went home last week.

Mrs. L. M. Nicholson went home the first of the week.

Mrs. Peyton Robertson is continuing to improve.

Mrs. Milton Roberts and baby will go home this week.

The hospital has been more or less crowded now for some time and the most pleasant feature about that fact is, that sickness throughout this section is none above normal and the increased business at the hospital is due to its splendid service and efficiency are becoming better known.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

Last Sunday evening train No. 4 brought to Clanton the mother of Mr. Eric Hart.

It seems she was stricken the night before at, or near Montgomery and was brought to the home of her son here for treatment.

We learn that some 14 years ago she suffered a stroke before and this seems to be a recurrence of the dread malady.

She is said to be resting well and recovering some from the effects of the attack.

The friends of Mr. Hart all sympathize with him in this sorrow.

103 BALLOTS ARE CAST

Nomination of West Virginia Man Is Accomplished After Smith and McAdoo Give Up—Meeting Lasts
14 Days.

THE TICKET
FOR PRESIDENT
John W. Davis, of West Virginia
FOR VICE PRESIDENT
Chas. W. Bryan, of Nebraska

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
Convention Hall, New York.—After a convention battle unprecedented in its stubbornness and its length, the Democratic party presents to the voters of the United States the ticket that heads this column. The Presidential candidate was not selected until 103 ballots had been cast, exceeding the 1864 record, which was 87 ballots, by 46 ballots.

Day after day, night after night, the deadlock continued unbroken, with McAdoo leading and Smith a persistent second. They and their managers were determined, not to say obstinate, and repeated efforts to persuade them to quit and thus to bring about the nomination of a compromise candidate, were frustrated. The religious issue, which was forced upon the convention in a fight over the anti-Klan plank in the platform, played its part, and a big part, in keeping the delegates from getting together. Indeed, it must be admitted that the struggle between the Klan element and the Catholic contingent dominated the proceedings of the convention. Everyone deplored the introduction of such an issue into American national politics, but no one could deny that it had been introduced.

On the fourth day of balloting William Jennings Bryan, being granted the privilege of "explaining his vote" from the rostrum, tried to persuade the convention that McAdoo was its logical choice. The galleries booed him, angry delegates fired hot questions at him, and he accomplished nothing at that time for his favorite.

Several state delegations and various individual delegates changed their votes from time to time without coming anywhere near breaking the deadlock. McAdoo's forces, though waxing and waning, in the main stood by him with extraordinary pertinacity, and the Smith forces were no less unyielding. Favorite sons and dark horses were given tryouts day by day, but all seemed unable to develop real strength. John W. Davis once climbed to 129 1/2 votes, and Senator Ralston got as far as 97.

Stick to It on Fourth

Independence day came and found the delegates still in session, weary, excited, almost apathetic, but immovable. Not all immovable, to be sure, for by that time many were running short of both money and patience and several hundred delegates and alternates left for home on July 3. Some of these deserters were recalled by telegraph, and steps were taken to finance those who were "going broke."

The Fourth of July session opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and every candidate's banner continued to wave. Augustus Thomas read the Declaration of Independence, and almost every delegate seemed confirmed in the opinion that his life and liberty depended on his voting as he had voted, and that therein lay his pursuit of happiness. Through ballot after ballot the count displayed the same deadly monotony. Then Tom Taggart created a diversion by reading a telegram from Senator Ralston withdrawing from the race—at least for the time being. Indiana thereupon gave McAdoo 20 of her votes and Smith 10. During the sixty-fifth ballot came a telegram from James M. Cox turning loose the Ohio delegation. So the Buckeyes gave their 48 votes to Newton D. Baker, which didn't seem to help matters, since scarcely anyone else took the hint.

Friday evening the Smith forces brought forward two propositions, one that the candidates be invited to address the convention in executive session, the other that Smith, as governor of New York, be asked to come in and talk half an hour. Both were defeated by the McAdooites, a two-third vote being required. The same fate met various attempts, on Friday and Saturday, to cut off the low candidate on each successive ballot. One delegate moved that the convention adjourn to meet in Kansas City on July 21, but received little support.

Baker Dropped

Ohio dropped Baker Saturday and Smith's vote crawled slowly toward the 400-mark while McAdoo's totals as slowly declined. After the seventeenth ballot almost the only persons who paid attention to the roll call were the women in the California and Texas delegations, who mechanically waved colored bandannas every time a vote for McAdoo was recorded.

Late Saturday afternoon, when despair and disgust had seized upon all, that master politician, Tom Taggart, stepped to the rostrum and presented the first plan that seemed to offer a chance to settle the convention's troubles. That was that the chairman of the national committee and of the convention be authorized to call the representatives of the candidates into a conference for the purpose of arriving at a compromise agreement. With a glad shout the delegates approved of this scheme, and the convention was adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

JOHN W. DAVIS

Labor for Harmony

Saturday night and all day Sunday the harmony committee labored, but to its most promising plans Mr. McAdoo dissented. The failure to reach an agreement was reported to the convention Monday and the weary round of balloting was resumed. After the eighty-second ballot a resolution was adopted releasing all delegates so far as lay in the power of the convention. McAdoo's strength already was dwindling and on the eighty-fifth ballot he was below Smith for the first time.

At the opening of the Tuesday night session the convention was told by Franklin Roosevelt that Smith would withdraw immediately after such action by McAdoo. The reply to this was an increase of the McAdoo vote to well over 400. Ralston was tried out but after his vote had reached nearly 200 he definitely withdrew. Then J. W. Davis was again boosted by the floating vote. Ninety-nine ballots had been taken when McAdoo sent to Chairman Walsh a message saying that he was loath to abandon his supporters by quitting the contest, but was now willing that they should act as their judgment dictated. All motions to adjourn had been defeated and the century ballot was taken. McAdoo fell off to 190. But the suspicious Smith forces stood firm. Just then W. J. Bryan showed signs of wishing to address the convention again, so, at 4 o'clock in the morning the delegates hurriedly adjourned for eight hours and staggered to their hotels.

The one hundred and first ballot Wednesday noon showed both Smith and McAdoo fast falling out of the top over three hundred. Underwood, with the support of New York, was a good second and Meredith showed up well. Senator Walsh, who wasn't eager for the nomination, received a respectable vote. Here was the making of another deadlock, with three or four ballots.

Despite Mr. Bryan's missionary trips through the delegations the vote for Davis mounted rapidly during the next two ballots, state after state climbing into what looked like the band wagon. Vote changes came fast and a veritable stampede resulted before the one hundred and third ballot was ended.

As on this most extraordinary convention contests ended in the nomination of John W. Davis of West Virginia for President of the United States by acclamation at a night session Gov. Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska, was selected as his running mate, and the convention adjourned in the early hours of Thursday morning.

The candidates of the Democratic party stand upon a platform which reaffirms the party's adherence and devotion to the cardinal principles of freedom of religion, freedom of press, but does not denounce the Ku Klux Klan by name; which declares the ideals of world peace, the League of Nations and the had won by a margin of just four votes. Then the weary delegates returned to their hotels until Monday morning.

Pat Harrison, Keynote

Perhaps as good a way as any to tell of this convention is to relate its chief incidents day by day. Of course Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi was the important figure on Tuesday. Since he, one of Democracy's leading orators, was temporary chairman. Following the usual preliminaries and the beautiful singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Anna Case, while thousands of tiny silk flags fluttered from the rafters, Senator Harrison was installed and proceeded to deliver his long keynote speech. It was to be expected that he would exhort the Republican party, and so he did. But somehow he did not arouse either the delegates or the galleries so much as one would have thought he might. Perhaps it was the heat. He was eloquent, however, and his language was incisive, his assertions sharply pointed, his denunciations of what his party thinks the misdeeds and shortcomings of the Republican majority in congress forceful. He won laughing applause when he declared that what the country needed was not a siphon, but a Paul Revere, and again when, poking a bit of fun at the Cleveland convention, he promised that this would be no cold-storage affair, but red hot, highly seasoned and well prepared. Toward the end of his speech the senator did bring his hearers to their feet, and started the first real demonstration of the convention. As may be guessed, it was at his first mention of Woodrow Wilson. Every one was ready for it, and on the moment all rose with a tumult of cheering. One by one the delegation standards were uprooted, and a parade through the aisles started that lasted many minutes. In the midst of it the hand struck up the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and again the admirable Anna Case stepped forward and led the singing throng.

Walsh, the Investigator

On Wednesday, to prove that the women were being given their share of the work, Chairman Harrison introduced Mrs. Le Roy Springs of South Carolina, chairman of the committee on Credentials. Handsome, calm and cool in white silk, she took the platform, waved greetings to cheering friends and read her report in a fine, clear voice. Then the star of that day, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, was presented to the convention as its permanent chairman. "He is a real Democrat and the greatest investigator this country has ever known," said Senator Harrison, and the crowd howled approval. And again the state standards danced about the aisles and were massed in front of the rostrum, for here was the man who had done more than any other to supply campaign material for his party this year, and whom that party gives credit for having done great service for the nation.

Walsh is known as one of the best speakers in the senate, and his address was well written and vigorously delivered, though again the heat served to lessen its effect with the audience. Not so sharply, perhaps, as Harrison, but quite as effectively, he, too, set forth at length what his fellow Democrats consider the delinquencies of the Republican majority in congress and the Republican administration, and especially what they look upon as Republican attempts at palliation of the offenses and moral turpitude that Senator Walsh declared had been brought to light through the recent investigations in Washington. He alluded to "the palpable falsehood" of the Republican platform in its assertion that those investigations exposed the Ku Klux Klan by name; and dared his political opponents to name one Democratic officeholder who has been involved by the investigators for anything he did while in office.

In his peroration Senator Walsh called on his countrymen to return to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson and "reassume the place he won for us—the moral leadership of the world." Which mention of their dead leader brought forth another demonstration, the pretty feature of which was the releasing of a white dove from a balcony.

About this time it developed that something had been "slipped over" on the women who are taking active part in the national affairs of the party. It had been decided that the gentler sex should be further recognized by creating a position of permanent vice chairman and giving it to Miss Mary Kennedy of the Bronx. The other women had not been consulted and the appointment was reported to the convention from the platform and approved. Miss Kennedy, not before known in national politics, is secretary to the sheriff here, and is an attractive and smart young woman who later demonstrated her ability to wield the gavel acceptably.

Ku Klux Klan Is Named

More formal business, including a resolution of thanks to "Our Pat," the temporary chairman, and then came the roll call of states for presentation of candidates. "Alabama," cried the clerk, and Alabama responded in the person of Forney Johnston, a business-like, snappy looking gentleman, who, in a business-like and snappy speech told the delegates why Senator Oscar Underwood was their ideal candidate. To him fell the honor of arousing the convention to the first really spontaneous demonstration so far. (That word "demonstration" is overworked, but it is the only one that fits.) Mr. Johnston said Mr. Underwood had asked him to place before the convention his views on a certain matter in unmistakable language. He did so, and when he named the Ku Klux Klan—the first outspoken mention of the organization—about half the delegates leaped to their feet with a wild war whoop that indicated they shared enthusiastically in the Alabama's condemnatory attitude toward the "invisible government." The shouting ran like wildfire through the hall, and one after another state standards were wrenched from their sockets and carried into the procession that quickly formed. Not all of them, by any means, and there were bitter struggles over some that did not get into the parade. Most of the New England, northern and western states followed Alabama and New York into the anti-Klan demonstration. As a general thing the strong McAdoo delegations kept their seats and held their standards fast. In the Missouri section there was a squabble when John Keegan of St. Louis tried in vain to capture the standard. The women of the delegation uttered shrieks of protest, and Mrs. A. C. Parsons secured a hold on the staff that couldn't be loosened. In the Colorado delegation the row was more serious, and the state standard was badly mutilated before the police could quiet the excited delegates. It was to be noted that several standards in the parade were of states in which the Klan is especially strong, but in these instances, as in most of the demonstrations, the carrying of the standard did not mean necessarily that the entire delegation, or even the greater part of it, was in sympathy. Not until the band leader, showing unwelcome tact, started up "America," which all could join in with good grace, was the tumult in the convention calmed. Characteristically, those in the hall who were to or sympathized with the Klan sat silent under the jeering cries of "Kluge!" directed at them.

Big McAdoo Demonstration

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas having been put in nomination by former Governor Brough, briefly, neatly and with little resulting fuss, the clerk called: "California." For this the McAdoo forces had been waiting on the edges of their chairs and to the accompaniment of wild cheering a forest of California flags bearing the bear, sprang up where the McAdoo delegates were thickest, and smaller clumps wherever in the crowd were a few votes the Californian had corralled. To the front of the platform stepped former Senator Phelan, looking like a page from the history of 25 years ago, and presented at great length the claims of his candidate. Laying stress on McAdoo's record of good service rendered his country and the fact that he shared in the work and ideals of Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Phelan did his level best. His speech was full of good things, but he couldn't hold the attention of the overheated audience. Men and women wandered through the aisles and those who remained in their seats chatted with their neighbors until the hall was filled with a murmur that must have been rather dismaying to the speaker. However, he had the satisfaction of knowing that he was being listened to by hundreds of thousands of radio addicts throughout the country. Chairman Walsh finally grew angry and told the audience what he thought of their discourtesy, and then they relapsed into quietude for a few moments.

Even the McAdoo enthusiasts were glad to have Senator Phelan arrive at the culmination of his address, for it gave them the chance to "hustle loose." They wanted to show the Smithites and all the others how numerous and how determined they were. California naturally led the dance, her men and women bedecked with gay colored handkerchiefs. In the van was carried a pretty young girl dressed as "Miss Columbia," and following her was a quartet of white-robed angels playing trumpets. Texas, Pennsylvania and a dozen other states helped on with the procession, and whenever the enthusiasm seemed to be dying down, the devices familiar to all who have seen such affairs served to revive it. Miss Columbia and the trumpeters, but (fretless), were hoisted to the platform, and for just one hour they kept the demonstration going. All this time Mrs. McAdoo, laughing excitedly, stood in a box and looked down on the shouting delegates who hoped to put her husband in the White House.

Bigger Smith Demonstration

At Smith's adherents now succeeded in bringing about adjournment until Thursday morning, and they spent the interval in perfecting the details of a demonstration that they intended should be more spectacular and longer than that for McAdoo.

When the convention was called to order next day they were all ready. Beside Chairman Walsh sat a lady in white, who proved to be Miss Mary Kennedy, the permanent vice chairman. She was given the gavel after the invocation, and after a few pleasant words about the recognition accorded the women, she ordered that the roll call of the states be resumed. Governor Sweet of Colorado was first to arise, his intention being to second the nomination of Mr. McAdoo. But the Smith throng, which by this time had filled up all the available space in the hall, was impatient and rude. Shouts of "oll" arose from all the galleries and even from the floor and grew so numerous and loud that the speaker was unable to continue. However, Chairman Walsh again came to the front with a scathing rebuke to the hecklers that silenced them.

"Connecticut yields to New York," said a delegate from the Nutmeg state a few moments later, and instantly there was tumultuous cheering and wild waving of a myriad flags. But the demonstration was premature and Franklin D. Roosevelt, on crutches, mounted the rostrum and quelled it, so that he might place in nomination New York's beloved governor, Al Smith. To the unbiased listener Mr. Roosevelt's speech was the most satisfactory that had been made up to that time. His enunciation was perfect, his sentences clear-cut. The vast audience hung upon his every word. It was a highly effervescent audience, surcharged with enthusiasm, and few speakers could have kept it in restraint as well as did the gentleman from New York. When he had set forth eloquently the virtues and qualities of Governor Smith which he believed made him the best man to lead the Democratic ticket, Mr. Roosevelt gave "Al's" admirers their way, and they went to it with a will.

Now it was almost dinner time, and the secretary read an announcement from the committee on resolutions that it would not be ready to report before Friday morning. A motion to take a recess and hold an evening session brought on a controversy. New York strenuously objected because the municipality had planned evening entertainments for the visitors. Adjournment until the next morning was proposed as an amendment and for the first time it was necessary to roll the convention. The vote was very close—550 to 513—by those who preferred entertainment to business in the evening won out. Al Smith seemed rather unimportant to the unposted onlooker, but in reality it was a test vote indicating the relative strength of the Smith and McAdoo forces. The managers for the Californian hoped that the nominating speeches could be finished and the balloting actually begin before the committee on resolutions was ready to report. They thought that this might insure the nomination of their candidate. The Smithites were determined their opponents should not have this advantage, if it existed, and they got their way.

More than six hours were devoted on Friday, to completing the list of Presidential nominations and to seconding speeches, of which there were many. The additional names presented to the convention were: James M. Cox of Ohio, Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, Gov. Fred W. Brown of New Hampshire, Gov. George S. Sizoo of New Jersey, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, and John W. Davis of West Virginia. This made sixteen in all, and of course there were in addition a lot of dark horses and favorites who were not formally placed in nomination. During the seconding speeches there was a lot of howling from the gallery gods, who were tired of hearing talk and wanted action. Once the obnoxious fire sirens were started again, but Chairman Walsh announced that if their use was not stopped he would have them removed from the building.

Battle Over Two Planks

Saturday afternoon the worn-out, hollow-eyed committee on resolutions brought in the platform in the morning of which it had been engaged day after night, throughout the week. Chairman Homer Cummings told of the vain efforts to settle the Klan and League of Nations disputes without putting them up to the convention, saying that at the final session of the committee, so sincere were the desires of its members that one of them recited the Lord's Prayer and William Jennings Bryan, chairman of the subcommittee, asked Divine help.

Newton D. Baker of Ohio, proposer of the minority resolution on the League, staggered to the speaker's desk, so weary he could scarcely stand, and delivered himself of one of the great bursts of real emotional power heard by the convention. In impassioned accents, with fervid, hoarse, often broken voice, he pleaded with the Democrats not to abandon the ideals of Woodrow Wilson but to stand firm in advocacy of immediate American membership in the League of Nations. It was a truly magnificent effort as Mr. Baker was assisted in his feat the thousands in the hall gave him a real ovation. In the minds of all was the "Cross of Gold" speech that once made Bryan the nominee of the party.

Senator Key Pittman of Nevada replied for the majority of the committee, and though he was hoarse for a sarcastic allusion to Mr. Baker's emotionalism, his arguments prevailed, the committee's plank winning by a vote of 742 1/2 to 537 1/2.

Now came the battle over the Klan plank, to witness which most of the vast audience had sat through weary hours. The opening shot was fired by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, a member of the majority, and was well directed. W. R. Tamm of Maine explicitly naming the Klan, replied with equal effect. Several minor gunshots on either side were discharged, and then Bainbridge Colby, the big power of ordinance in the anti-Klan forces, was turned loose. The former secretary of state made a corking speech and aroused great enthusiasm. He was followed by William Jennings Bryan, who sought to pour oil on the troubled waters but was a determined opponent of the plank in which the Klan was named. Mr. Bryan was heard respectfully by the delegates but was booed several times by the audience.

The taking of the vote was postponed and tedious. Finally at two o'clock in the morning the chairman announced that the majority would have won by a margin of just four votes. Then the weary delegates turned to their hotels until Monday morning.

Father Knickerbocker was as proud as a peacock when the convention was awarded to him, and he set out to show the other convention cities how to take care of such a gathering. The result was astonishing to every veteran convention attendant.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"O'Hana, if the august Lord of the Thunder Gate, to whom you are married, were a man of your own land, would you?" It sounded impudent to him, and not what he wished to say—"Would you love him?"

"I could not say. I do not know you, Kayama-San." Then, in a flutter, "Do not ask me such questions, please."

"You will know me better. Then I shall ask again."

"Yes, Kayama-San," she said in a small voice. He was kind to her. Why not be equally kind? "I . . . like you," she added.

"That is well, Yoh!" He paced about the room, to prostrate himself in the sacred kakemono corner.

"What do you say to your god?" Ellen asked curiously.

"There may be fighting," Wells repeated for her with relish. "I ask for strength. We may go far, O'Hana. The son of my father has an explanation to make, and a debt to pay. Yes, there may be fighting."

He flung his arm toward the grinning, evil-smiling Thunder god. He felt that he was theatrical, but held steadily to his mode of speech. Lord, how he wanted to tell some one, probably some one with such glorious hair, and sweet eyes.

"I may go across the sea," he explained to Kaminari, the god. "Ac-company me, that my arm find strength." He would have added "and my heart love" according to the formula, but, bowing the proscribed seven times, he walked rapidly out of the room.

Ellen's first thought was misanthropic, possibly inborn. If Kayama took her back to America, what would people say? The import of his words appalled her now for the first time. She feared it—if he went; here there was a quiet garden, a kind, kindly man. If only her husband were . . . she was crimson again. What would she change this for?

Ellen heard his voice in the hall, giving curt orders; unexpected instructions, for she heard incredulous glances of surprise. Kayama-San was informing his household that it was possible that their lord would journey to far lands, and they must be prepared for it, if he so decided.

Wells went to his room. He felt that he had been oversteering, impetuous, permitting his desires to overrun his judgment. To leave was no simple matter: there would be many details to attend to. It would all take time. And time was more precious now than ever. Each swish of the moving branch against the panel of his room might bring Kayama. Kayama had wanted Ellen before. If he, Wells, the impostor, were discovered, the household would be certain to curry favor with their master and lord by repeating that which Ellen had sensed they knew—that Wells kept apart from his wife, the red-haired woman.

What was it that the Eleventh Book said? Dimly he remembered it. That there is—yes, that was it—is no perfume to the blossom which Man has created! Was this a fact? Would Kayama believe it? Suppose he, Robert Wells, carried it out! He was the girl's husband. He wasn't, at least, abhorrent to her. Wouldn't she, later, forgive him freely when he explained why he had acted so?

Ellen would be covered with many soft quilts. Perhaps her hair might be unbound. The stars went out before his sight; the whole sky seemed bathed in sleepy light, not pricked by gleaming dots, but vapory, beautiful. Flowers exhaled their ghosts in the garden, and the night-blooming varieties smothered all else with perfume, sensuous, intoxicating.

Ellen walked in the garden.

Why not? Why not? Who should say him nay? He was Lord of the Thunder Gate—until Kayama returned. Why not? None would disturb him . . . the night breathed peace, without means of introduction he could burst in upon Sanderson.

Suppose Kayama returned in his absence, and traced him to the States? What a mess it might become. But he wanted to go; to show them all, to lay his proof before Sanderson, and to come to Ellen with clean hands and a clear heart. And to see Williams! Once would be enough!

So his thoughts ran, and Ellen walked in the garden. She was still troubled with the thought of the foreign land to come. She considered that it would come, and that they were going. Her agitation would have been increased manyfold if she had seen Wells as he thought of Williams.

He had carefully shut every panel.

With his kimono sleeves well folded back, he was dancing before the secondary shrine. His arms would shoot forward, swing down, jerk upward in an excellent up-and-down.

Wells had not forgotten the pacing figure in the garden. As an antidote, he was making certain, should the time come and he meet Williams, that the Thunder God, old Kaminari, would have a practiced tool with which to work.

CHAPTER IX

James Sanderson refused to realize that the long absence, without a word, of his nephew undoubtedly meant that Bob Wells was dead. He spent long evenings staring into the fire. He was engaged in doing the profoundest thinking of his life. No construction feats which had ever absorbed him could compare in momentousness with this; all his building and achieving was trifling and waste beside what concerned him now.

The operative whom Sanderson sent to Japan was unable to hold to Wells' trail. At the start, the detective had traced Wells from Inn to Inn. This was simple; Wells was dressed as a white man and acted as a white man. Gradually the path dimmed; as Wells discarded by necessity the Occidental attire it became almost obliterated, when he frequented hovel-taverns, or slept in protected hollows and copests it was lost altogether.

In truth, Williams had been frightened, and had gone to Marakito. This worthy did not speak with Williams, but sent his secretary, a poor relation, to him.

The operative whom Sanderson sent to Japan was unable to hold to Wells' trail. At the start, the detective had traced Wells from Inn to Inn. This was simple; Wells was dressed as a white man and acted as a white man. Gradually the path dimmed; as Wells discarded by necessity the Occidental attire it became almost obliterated, when he frequented hovel-taverns, or slept in protected hollows and copests it was lost altogether.

In truth, Williams had been frightened, and had gone to Marakito. This worthy did not speak with Williams, but sent his secretary, a poor relation, to him.

James Sanderson refused to realize that the long absence, without a word, of his nephew undoubtedly meant that Bob Wells was dead. He spent long evenings staring into the fire. He was engaged in doing the profoundest thinking of his life. No construction feats which had ever absorbed him could compare in momentousness with this; all his building and achieving was trifling and waste beside what concerned him now.

"A clerk could do that," abstractedly.

"If Bob had spent his evenings, as Ray did, in making the reports, he wouldn't have had time for . . . ca-rausing!"

"It may have been that Bob was . . . tired from the day's work. 'Twas his first big job, Bertie."

She felt it unwise to argue the point. There were other affairs to be settled.

"Perhaps"—very softly and even of tone—"perhaps Bob found one of the gelsa that he liked? When we were in college, Bob . . . well, he did like the girls!"

"Never heard of it."

"Why, everybody knew that."

"Did they? I didn't."

"You know it. So did I."

"Did you?"

If he would only disagree, positively. She felt that continuation along such a line would never do. It placed her in an uncomfortable position. Yet she must persist to the logical outcome. She knew her point of ultimatum and intended reaching it.

"Uncle Sandy?"

"Um."

"She lowered her voice."

"You know I don't even . . . remember my mother . . ."

"Yes, Alberta?" less gruffly.

"A girl must talk to some one. And you've been like my own daddy."

"I've tried to be." He looked up at her, his face less stern.

"When we found out what Bob had done . . . it almost . . . broke my heart . . ."

"And mine. And mine, Alberta. He was like my own son. Such a good lad."

"She must twang this string again."

"He thought only . . . of himself," she said, and possibly believed it.

"Bob must have forgotten," Sanderson agreed sadly. "Forgotten that we were all watching him, and trusting. But that is like a boy. Carried away, he must have been. Williams should have anchored him fast."

"But, Uncle Sandy, can't you see Bob and that imperious manner of his? Perhaps Ray couldn't. I know he couldn't. Bob was headstrong. He always was. You've said so yourself."

"'Twas his father in him. But those who are headstrong in religion are called . . . godly men."

"I thought," I thought, Uncle Sandy, that some day Bob . . . Bob and I might . . . although of course he didn't know it . . . You know what I mean, dear."

"He'll come back. Sadder. Stender. 'Tis his lesson, Alberta." He reached for her hand and stroked it reassuringly.

"I could never forget. I'd always fear—that it might happen again! A woman," sorrowfully, "is that way."

"Yes, dear," after he did not answer. "She wants some one she can trust. Some one—Alberta had read this, but said it as her own—'some one she can tie to in trouble. Some one who has always been a dear friend, whom she knows well, and does not need to fear.'"

"Like Bob?" Oh, Sanderson! not to see whether you are floating.

Alberta dropped her eyes. "I thought so . . . once . . . until we learned . . . can't you see what he's done?"

"Forgive him, child. Those who love . . ."

He was no match for her now with his pleading. For he felt that if Bob were gone for good, he must keep this, but said it as her own—some one she can tie to in trouble. Some one who has always been a dear friend, whom she knows well, and does not need to fear."

THE ONE-TREE CHURCH

In the year 1852 the Baptists among the settlers along Santa Rosa creek, on the peninsula north of San Francisco on the California coast, determined to have religion, organized a meeting house—services being held at the ranch home of one of the members. The good folks flocked to the meetings in such numbers that the house in which the services were held soon became too small.

As no more commodious structure was available, services were later conducted under the protecting shelter of a large oak tree. Thus, after a fashion, increased space which proved highly unsatisfactory when the weather was inclement, was provided. It is recorded that some claimed this tree edifice was "open to both winter storms and summer cows."

Accordingly, in 1873, the congregation felt justified in assuming the expense of constructing a new meeting house in the village of Santa Rosa. A giant redwood tree which stood in the valley of a nearby river was selected to supply the lumber from which to build the new house of worship.

Commenting on this matter, the Santa Rosa Republican recently printed the following: "It is true that the story of this church building runs only a half a century, but it is equally true that when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea the tree which furnished material for this church was a promising young redwood."

This monstrous tree was 18 feet in diameter and produced 73,000 board feet of lumber. Part of the top, damaged in falling, was made into shingles.

The felled tree, cut into logs, was sawed into lumber, transported to the site and the church duly erected, and in the words of its pastor, it came to pass that "the honor of having a meeting house built from a single tree was given to a people who have always been among the leaders in advancing the Kingdom of God."

The complete building, from foundation to roof but not including the floor, however, was built from the product of one massive member of the forest. And, lest you gain an erroneous impression concerning the size of this religious edifice, let me tell you that the main auditorium measures approximately 40 by 60 feet. It is officially known as the First Baptist church of Santa Rosa, Cal.

THE N. Y. HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The plans for the organization of this society which has evolved itself into an institution, were originated in 1804—and had for their objective the collection and preservation, for the benefit and enjoyment of coming generations, those photographs, books, engravings, paintings and other objects which helped to keep and show the record of the progress of America's most important city.

These exhibits are now housed in a dignified and substantial building in Central Park West, New York city. The library is said to contain upward of 140,000 volumes and 155,000 pamphlets. The gallery of art houses more than 1,000 paintings, most of which are of intense interest and are without exact duplicate elsewhere.

There are numerous portraits of former Indians, generals, politicians and great and near-great men in other and various walks of life who at one time or another have been prominent in the affairs of New York. Among such, for instance, may be mentioned Cornelius Sternwick, who was burgomaster of New York under the Dutch and who later became mayor of the city under English rule. This portrait, it is thought, was painted in 1667 by the husband of Sternwick's sister while Mr. Sternwick was visiting in Europe.

The museum contains a large, interesting and priceless collection of heirlooms and other objects. To mention a few at random—there is an elaborate punch bowl made in England for a dinner given at Castle Garden in commemoration of the landing of the French General Lafayette in this country in 1824; also a fan made for the guests of the ball given in his honor; a glass mug made in commemoration of the admittance of the state of Vermont into the Union in 1791; a table used in 1789 by the federal congress; shackles which were removed from a slave (girl) at Annapolis, Ga., in 1868.

Some of the manuscripts are absorbingly interesting. Among these are a letter written in 1777 by Patrick Henry; another dated Mt. Vernon, Va., November 9, 1789, and penned by George Washington; a deed covering land in Albany, N. Y., dated 1685, and a military record of President William Henry Harrison.

Among the views on exhibit are one of the city and harbor of New York as of the year 1794, and another showing how the now famous Wall street looked way back in 1829.

Life Jobs

"Well, John," said the eminent personage, who was now an invalid, "who is it wishes to see me now? 'My biographer?'" "No, your excellency," replied the butler, "your physician."

"Ah! Almost the same thing. He's at work upon my life, too."—Philadelphia Record.

WHY SHE LIVES IN ARIZONA

A few weeks ago the story of Leora Lobban Brewer was typed for the editor. It told of a cheery woman who wrote in snatches, between running the "Brewer Furniture" business, and nursing her husband through an illness. "The business is transacted in Tucson, Ariz.," it said lightly. "Now the United States census places Tucson in the Cities and Towns Having From 10,000 to 25,000 inhabitants." Tourists on fast trains to California whiz past asking, "Don't we ever get through the desert?"

"Are you sorry for Mrs. Brewer?" "Don't be! Of a pile of letters on my desk, hers is the happiest. 'J. V.' is better. Last Saturday she closed early to speak at the prohibition rally in the Baptist church. Swaying one's audience brings the same thrill in Tucson as in New York. The postmistress, Mrs. Brewer's candidate, has been elected president of the new business women's club. Furthermore, Leora Brewer has just been asked to travel through the state in the interests of a big national organization."

"Of course, I won't take salary for work so near my heart," she writes. "Store clerk as I am, I manage to make a comfortable amount so that I can do this other work for pleasure."

All this the story of a few weeks back. There's another letter from Mrs. Brewer today. It, too, is scribbled, but this time on a train. Mr. Brewer's illness in May proved more serious than she had let herself believe, and the reason for living in the desert country is passed.

Her brief little correspondence card says, "I am almost home." Then her honesty puts a question mark, thus, home (?), and goes on, "that is, my native home, where I shall visit. . . . I plan to remain in Arizona. I have my business, the furniture store. And there also, I believe, is my field for the Master."

So she's going back to the desert country, that isn't a desert for her. When the Arizona Star has included her in a series on "Interesting Tucsonians"; when as a daughter and wife of a storekeeper and proprietor of a store she has learned to write ads that attract attention and customers; when she feels that "city parks cannot make up for country in the best climate on earth"; and when a girlhood vow to help create a dry country has brought an additional field of usefulness and honor, why should Mrs. Brewer have anything but love for Arizona?

Entered in the Post Office at Clanton, Alabama, as Second Class Mail Matter Under Act of Congress:

Impartial law enforcement is the only kind that receives or deserves the support of the people.

The churches and likewise which should be decent society keep their doors much too wide open these days.

The blackberry crop has done its full duty this time and tided the country safely through the dull season.

A negro below Montgomery claims to have killed more than 9,000 craw fish for eating up his crop. Next.

We are listening in over the radio now to see if we can hear anything that sounds like a Senatorial resignation.

A movement is on foot now to get out the church vote at the presidential election. Wonder if Mr. Underwood will stand for that.

The last instalment of female boys we had on our streets were really up to date. They wore their shirt tails on the outside of their pants.

Melons are becoming more plentiful on the market, though the price is holding up fairly well. Some very fine ones are to be seen occasionally.

No democrat, worthy the name, can find any excuse for failing to give the Davis and Bryan ticket their enthusiastic support.

The Birmingham News straddled so far after Oscar that it is fearfully disarranging its editorial garments to regain its equilibrium.

"Helen Maria" is loading for bear now and wasting his ammunition on mice. He may cuss his way into office but we seriously doubt it.

Plain Bill picked up a good deal of notoriety by his "Alabama 24 for Underwood" gag at the convention, but, fortunately, it is the kind that keeps politicians at home.

Bobbed hair has its advantages. For instances you are not apt to go in home to your brunett wife with a wisp of long golden hair entangled around a button on your coat.

Melons are doing well. Some very fine ones are to be seen occasionally. A few have been seen in the market, but they are not yet in season. We are waiting for them to come down to a little jitney.

LaFollette has made the grievous mistake of allowing the socialist convention to nominate him also. Ah, well, that will cut his vote down to a little that he will not trouble the Senate to name our next president.

A little old battered up Ford car with a siren whistle and an open cut out affords more pure bliss to some people than a front seat in heaven would.

A preacher the other day referred to the average bathing pools and lakes, as the "Devil's dipping vats." We hear of none of this variety being dynamited as yet, though.

Mr. McAdoo is going to put up a hard fight for Davis and Bryan out West. Those people know and trust him and his support is going to mean a great deal.

Some miscreant has been masquerading as a Ku Klux and trying to frighten the negro labor off of the public road grading near Thorsby. The Klan is offering $50 reward for his apprehension and we hope they get him.

The north end of eight street and the west end of second avenue have developed into race tracks for the auto speeders, and some wonderful records are being made up there. Ford cars are doing way over that alleged limit of 35 miles per hour.

It seems that modern vulgarity, profanity and indecency have managed to get outside the pale of the law. In other days the law protected the public from all of these, but since they have become common with both sex the law has ceased to function.

lives above all of the slime and filth that so frequently sullies the lives of those who aspire to lead.

Neither of these men sought the nomination either in the convention or before, but after the terrible battle that was necessary to dispose of the sordid hosts that sought to debauch the Democratic Convention, they were elected to the office of Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

There has never in history, stood between the selfish and greedy money sharks and the free American citizen.

The thing to do now and the thing that all true and patriotic democrats should do is to elect Davis and Bryan, and by doing so, they will make their calling an election sure.

If Al Smith and his satellites want to sulk or go over to the other side, so much the better. We have won without the help of those hyphenated "down easter" and we can do so again. In fact, democracy can travel better by entirely divesting itself of such double dealing, unreliable support as comes from a section that has always been willing to, and guilty of, selling their votes to the party that would turn over the government control to them.

The time has come when the South, West and Northwest must line up together if we desire to maintain a government of, by and for the people.

OUR SINCERE THANKS

Mrs. J. Mell Martin, who has spent the spring and summer at the home of her father just out of town, has demonstrated the fact that as a farmer she would be a marked success.

She sent us our first radishes in the very early days of spring, and our first splendid dinner of spring salad long before any appeared on the market. Also the finest cabbage we have seen this year came from her garden. Then Saturday, with the first melons we have seen in town came a large, lucious one from her patch to the News office. Also a most delightful basket of wonderfully large and tender beans and some corn that made us think of the days long ago when people grew real corn. No wonder our good friend, J. Mell, always seems so happy and contented with such a splendid provider as he has in the family.

We are certainly grateful for these kind remembrances and take great pleasure in extending our most sincere congratulations to Mrs. Martin for the surpassing skill she has demonstrated in her ability as an expert horticulturist.

IT WAS A REAL TREAT

Last Saturday Mr. I. W. Bice, one of the live and progressive farmers out on Route 6, presented us with one of the finest melons we have seen this year.

Mr. Bice says the crops out his way are doing well and he is very happy.

The editor and family are grateful for this fine treat and hope it will be a precedent for other farmers to follow.

TRIP TO THE OLD FARM

On a recent trip to the old farm, Mr. Bice and his family spent a few days in the country.

This was their first visit in 29 years and the scenes had all undergone such changes that hardly anything looked natural to them.

The farm of 300 acres where they spent their childhood they found now almost completely overgrown by timber. Only a few spots here and there were still in cultivation.

What Service Is

THE FIRST OF A SERIES OF "SERVICE TALKS" BY THE ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

"SERVICE" is a much used and much abused word. Ten thousand corporations or thereabouts which use advertising space, talk "SERVICE."

In generalities—it is an easy thing to talk about. As applied to the performance of a Public Utility which supplies indispensable necessities of modern life—ELECTRICITY, STREET RAILWAY SERVICE and GAS—every hour of every day of every year, "SERVICE" is a very definite and tangible commodity which can be measured in specific terms.

In this, the first of a series of advertisements—SERVICE TALKS—which will appear from time to time in this newspaper, it is our intention to talk PUBLIC UTILITY SERVICE—not in generalities—but from the standpoint of:

What Service Is As Applied to the Relation Between a Public Utility and the Public

Alabama Power Company service—as it involves continuous production of electric energy and its transmission to the homes, factories and farms in territory served; the operation of street railways; the distribution of gas; development of Alabama through unceasing efforts to attract more industries; extension of facilities to meet new demands in new localities; study of the growth in the demand for power so that adequate provision may be made for future needs—a thousand contacts at a thousand different points with men and women in the towns and rural sections of this state where Public Utility SERVICE is a daily part of routine life—promotes our bodily comfort and convenience and increases household economy.

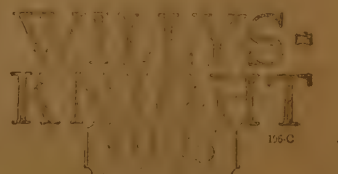

GOOD PUBLIC SERVICE IS THE PIVOTAL POINT IN ALABAMA-POWER COMPANY POLICIES—PARAMOUNT IN THE DIRECTION OF ITS AFFAIRS

1,2,3,4,5 Years—Still a Young Car

The Willys-Knight is a car you can keep and enjoy for years. A touring car with all the thrill of 42 horsepower—a car you can drive 50 miles and more an hour, hour after hour—without over-heating—without loss of power—without engine trouble—without carbon cleaning—without ever needing valve grinding.

The Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine is the most powerful engine of its size ever built—and the quietest—and the only type of engine in the world that actually improves with use. It is common for Willys-Knight owners to report 50,000 miles and more without spending a cent for repairs on the engine.

IMPROVING EVERY DAY

You can not fail to notice every time you take the once over of our town that building improvements are going steadily forward.

New houses are going up in the residential districts all the time, and the new awnings, fresh painting and various other attractions are constantly to be seen in the down town section.

GONE ON VACATION

Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the first Baptist church, together with his wife and two little children, left bright and soon last Monday morning, in their Sedan, for his three weeks vacation. They will go over in to South Carolina to visit their parents and other relatives and will be pretty busy in completing the circuit all around during their stay.

Everybody in Clanton and vicinity wish for them the very happiest of times, and we will all miss the genial Doctor every day he is away. He will be absent for three Sunday's but he arranged to have his pulpit filled every Sunday just the same.

READ THIS

Elsewhere in this paper we carry an ad of Polk Brothers, dealers for Studebaker and Chevrolet motor cars, offering to reline brakes on all makes of cars and Ford transmission Free. Only the price of material used will be charged. This means a saving to car owners of $2.50 to $3.50 per car.

It is very dangerous to drive cars without good brakes and is a violation of the law in numbers of places. So we advise our readers to take advantage of this exceptional offer and let POLK BROS. reline their brakes and transmissions.

A RAFFLE

All those holding chances on the spread made by Mrs. Louise Orr are requested to be present at "Dick's Place" (Hayes Drug store) Friday at 4 o'clock at which time the spread will be raffled off.

WE CERTAINLY NEED ONE

There is hardly a week goes by here but what we see the pressing need of a sizable auditorium up town.

We miss a great many interesting and instructive entertainments because we have no suitable place to accommodate them.

Besides there are numerous occasions when the local needs for a community most of some kind must go unmet because we have no ample arrangements by which we can take care of such demands.

The High School is our only chance and has served us most generously upon several occasions, but when school session it is a pure intrusion upon the clever principal and his staff to crowd in entertainments and gatherings that necessarily must be inconvenient to them.

Besides the High School is in exactly the right place for a school, but it is not centrally located enough to be able to meet the demands of the city. Other civic, political or socially. We realize that times are very dull now, but it never is too dull to figure and plan for the future. We could like to get the matter before the people and get them interested and we know an auditorium will be the answer.

We believe that a centrally located auditorium would be a paying investment and it would certainly be a wonderful addition to the city.

An auditorium would fill right now one very pressing and essential needs of Clanton.

VISIT TO THE SOLDIERS HOME

It was the privilege of the writer to spend a few days at the "Soldiers Home" at Mountain Creek last week, and it was a pleasure to see how well the inmates are being cared for. To one who has for years had intimate and personal knowledge of conditions there it was a revelation to view the long needed improvements. When Dr. Fowler took charge of the home the water supply was contingent upon the work of a worn-out boiler and a pump that had passed its day of usefulness, while the tank and its wooden pipes were worn and leaking, leading to some tumbling down. Now a new engine and a new pump have been installed, and with less than a two hour run the new cypress tank towering seventy-five feet in the air and resting upon a concrete and steel foundation, is filled the brim with water as clear as crystal and so pure as to meet all health requirements. In place of the old and obsolete gas plant with its decayed and leaking iron pipes there is a new one with galvanized piping so that there is light without diminution or failure. The cottages have been recovered with stained cypress shingles. The home of the Commandant has been supplied with two new rooms which have long been needed. There is ample provision for comfort now so that if Dr. Fowler and his estimable wife have company they do not have to lie on the floor and cover with the door. The contract to replace the mess-hall which was destroyed by fire a few months ago has been let, the material has been ordered and soon the inmates will be eating at the same old stand. If the present gives promise of the future, there will be no lack of good things to eat when the building is ready for occupancy. Speaking of cats, there is no place in the state where better milk and butter can be had than that which regales the "old boys" at the "Home." Taken all in all, it would seem as if all that could add to the comfort of the "Home" has been done and will continue to be done as Dr. and Mrs. Fowler are in charge. And I trust that they may both continue in charge as long as the Home exists as a place of refuge for the men who wore the grey. It was a pleasure to meet there. Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Farley, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who, with their bright little son, Handley, were on a visit to their mother, Mrs. Mattie Anderson. The health conditions are fine. Not a death has occurred in four months.
